BAKER ROUTS BUREAU RULE OF THE ARMY

Secretary Declares General Staff Paramount in Authority.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Baker singlehanded put to rout the embattled swivel chair bureaucrats of the war department today in an opinion overruling the judge advocate general and declaring the general staff paramount in authority to all the bureaus and their chiefs.

He also shocked partisan Democrats by referring to Elihu Root as "one of the foremost lawyers of the country and one of the great secretaries of war of modern times."

NULLIFIES HAY PLAN.

Secretary Baker's opinion nullifies the provisions inserted in the recent army legislation by Representative Hay for the reputed purpose of limiting the authority of the general staff, decreasing its importance and effectiveness, and making it practically subordinate to the bureau chiefs, whose political activity has constituted them the real rulers of the war department and army policies.

These provisions, the principal one of which prohibited the general staff from exercising "administrative" authority, were recognized as a severe blow to a proper development of the army. Judge Advocate General Crowder upheld the apparent intent of the act to make the bureaus paramount in authority to the general staff. Mr. Baker refused to abide by this opinion and declared it based on a wrong assumption.

LAUD'S ROOT'S POLICY.

In interpreting the word "administrative" the secretary says in his opinion that the general staff is robbed by the Hay act of no functions which it ever has exercised. He quotes admiringly from Mr. Root's arguments, which resulted in the act creating the general staff in 1903, and says:

"It seems to me, therefore, entirely clear that the structure erected by the act of 1903 remains as then created, except for the explicit modifications provided in the act of 1916 and not affecting the current of this argument; that the chief of the general staff is charged with the supervision of the various departments, bureaus, and offices of the war department for the purposes of coordinating their activities and for the purpose of so informing the judgment of the secretary of war that he may not, by inadvertence or unfamiliarity with military practice, take action which would be prejudicial to harmonious results in the military service.

CHIEF OF STAFF ADVISER.

"Finding the intention of the act to be as here set forth, it is my opinion that the chief of the general staff is the primary adviser of the secretary of war in all matters having to do with the military establishment; that in order properly to inform himself the chief of the general staff must know of the proceedings in the various bureaus, departments, and offices; that, to as large an extent as possible, the action of these bureaus, departments, and offices should be regulated by large policies laid down by the secretary of war, the carrying out of which would involve merely administrative activity; but that in order to make sure that these policies are not being departed from or ought not to be changed, in order properly to harmonize the rotations of several bureaus, it is not only appropriate but necessary for the chief of the general staff to pursue, with as great detail as judgment dictates, the execution of these policies through the several bureaus."

FOR A COMMON CAUSE.

Secretary Baker, declaring "We are all of us common servants in a common cause," added:

"The policy of the war department, therefore, will remain as heretofore: The chief of staff, speaking in the name of the secretary of war, will coördinate and supervise the various bureaus, offices, and departments of the war department; he will advise the secretary of war; he will inform himself in as great detail as in his judgment seems necessary to qualify him adequately to advise the secretary of war. Should any regulations or orders be necessary to place the determination herein made in proper form, the chief of the general staff will prepare them for my signature."

Aviators Fly to Yale-Princeton Football Game

Twelve Make Trip from Hempstead Field and Governor's Island.

New York, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The greatest aerial flight ever seen in the United States marked the trials for a pilot's license today of eight army officers and two civilians who have been taking lessons in flying at the Hempstead aviation school. Two others started from Governor's island as the squadron swept into view.

One after another these navigators of the air rose in their biplanes and headed to the west, bound for Princeton, N. J., to witness the Yale-Princeton football game.

The engines of the ten airships were started at the same time. The first to take the air was Lieut. Walter G. Ritner. He went up about 4,000 feet before he got his bearings for direction and headed toward New York.

The other planes went up at sixty second intervals and soon they were stretched out like a flock of wild geese.

Follow Pennsylvania Railroad.

The aviators headed for the south shore of Long Island and crossed the lower bay and Staten island, heading then straight for Princeton along the line of the Pennsylvania railroad, which was picked up beyond Newark.

The first to arrive at the stadium at Princeton was "Hobie" Baker, ex-football star, who has the distinction of being the first man ever to reach a football field by way of the air.

Among others who made the flight were Capt. R. L. Taylor, Lieuts. J. E. Miller, W. J. Kilmer, and Blair Thaw, and Sergts. W. P. Willetts, B. R. Noyes, and J. H. Stevenson of the United States army signal corps, A. S. Adams, and H. P. Brakeley.

Flyers Hover Above Stadium.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Spectators at the Yale-Princeton game this afternoon were given a thrill when two aeroplanes hovered over the big stadium during the game. There were twelve of them in Princeton during the day, some of the aviators having side line seats at the game.

The machines belonged to the United States army, and it was the largest aeroplane government squadron ever brought together. Lieut. C. E. Miller of Yale after the game looped the loop over the crowd.

Death notices will be found on page 15 of this section.

BODY OF BOY, LONG MISSING, FOUND AT LAST

Playmate Makes Discovery at 39th Street—Is Identified by Father.

"Sonny" Matthews' body was found in the lake off Thirty-ninth street yesterday.

So closed the search for the 9 year old boy who was lost on Feb. 10 and for whom a continent has been combed in behalf of the heart broken parents.

Gypsy bands, mysterious letters demanding ransom, kidnaping clews, and every influence that might have had to do with "Sonny" Matthews' disappearance have been investigated with tireless patience for nearly a year. Rewards have been offered and almost numberless detectives have been on the trail, and all to no effect.

PLAYMATE FINDS BODY.

Yesterday a former playmate of the lost boy was walking along the sand off Thirty-ninth street. A body came into view. The young venturer took one look and ran screaming.

"It's 'Sonny' Matthews," he cried. "I know him."

His cries could not be silenced for several moments after a policeman arrived. Then the boy led a group of persons to the lake shore, and the body was taken ashore.

The body was removed to an undertaking establishment, where an examination was made. Mr. and Mrs. Barnett Matthews, who now live at 7739 South Sangamon street, were notified. But before their arrival Louis E. Hamburg, an uncle of the lost boy, made the identification.

"I am sure it is the body of my nephew," said Mr. Hamburg. "There was one positive means of identification, however. There was a scar on the hand. The action of the water has removed that scar. It will be necessary for Mr. Matthews to make the identification more complete."

"IT'S SONNY," SAYS FATHER.

Following the identification by Mr. Hamburg, Mr. Matthews, the father, arrived at the morgue at 3913 Cottage Grove avenue. He could not bring himself to view the body, but listened intently to the description given by Hamburg.

When Hamburg told of the little metallic buckles at the knees of the knickerbockers and the blucher shoes with a worn spot in the center of the sole, the father broke down.

"It is 'Sonny,' there can be no doubt of it," he said.

The teeth and the hair of the boy being described fitted exactly with the father's recollection and he declared there could be no mistake. He began making preparations for the funeral.

The funeral will be held from the undertaking rooms tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will be at Mount Greenwood cemetery.

FELL THROUGH ICE.

"'Sonny' had been forbidden to go on the lake edge ice," said Mr. Matthews. "The ice was too dangerous last February for a boy his age and he had often been cautioned. I suppose, being forbidden lent an extra zest to the sport, and he 'took the dare.' He must have gone out too far and gone down through an air hole. He was not a bad boy, but I suppose the spirit of daring caused him to venture out where it was dangerous."

MOTHER'S SUSPENSE RELIEVED.

"It is best that we know now what happened to Sonny," Mrs. Matthews told her husband when he returned home bearing the news that their son's body had been found. "The suspense of the search had been terrible. It was driving me insane."

As Mrs. Matthews spoke she fondled her baby, Dorothy Louise Matthews, whom she adopted when it was 2 weeks old, five months ago.

"That baby saved my wife's reason," Mr. Matthews declared aside to a reporter. "It gave her something to think about and to help her forget."

The point off Thirty-ninth street where the body was found is not far from the former residence of the Matthews family. At the time the boy disappeared they lived at 964 East Thirty-ninth street.

"We could not bear to live there

Report Carranza Troops Defeated by Villa Forces

Bandits Capture Trains; Massacre of Aliens Also Is Rumored.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Three de facto government trains were captured and several hundred government and Villista troops killed or wounded or captured in an engagement last night at Bachimba pass, fifty miles south of Chihuahua City, in which Villa forces and the advance guard of Gen. Jacinto B Trevino's army, now taking the field, participated, according to a report received tonight at American army headquarters here.

Report Massacre of Aliens.

A Chinese refugee who arrived in Juarez late last night on a Mexican Central passenger train brought a report from Jimenez, Chihuahua, that practically all of the foreigners in Parral had been killed by Villa bandits.

He said those killed included at least six Americans, all Germans, at least twenty Chinese, and fifteen Hebrew, French, and Arab residents of the mining camp. He also said a brother-in-law of Theodore Hoemuller at Jimenez had received confirmation of the killing of Hoemuller, a German subject, and his family in Parral. The Chinese refugee added that the general belief in Jimenez was that [illegible] Kock, German consular agent in Parral, had been killed at Santa Rosalia. Five Americans are known to have reached Culiacan, Sinaloa, from Parral.

Son of Gen. Scott Not Slain.

It was reported that one of the Americans slain was Everett Scott, a son of Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army. Later it was said the victim was William Scott, not a relative of Gen. Scott. Everett Scott left Parral several months ago.

United States government representatives here have also received practically the same report from a Chinese refugee who arrived in Juarez Thursday night. These reports agree that Villa and his bandits, after occupying the mining town, ordered the foreigners killed, looted the stores, arrested many of the natives, and held them for ransom and committed other depredations.

German Consul Fears Massacre

Juarez, Mexico, Nov. 18.—Max Weber, the German consul in charge of German diplomatic affairs in northern Mexico, announced here today he had received reports from Chinese and Mexican refugees arriving here from Jimenez that Villa had ordered all of the foreigners in Parral and the Parral district killed. These refugees, he said, had come from Jimenez after talking with their countrymen who had arrived there from Parral.

SHOOTS "S. S." IN HEAD, THEN LEAPS FROM CAR.

Unknown Assailant Fires Two Bullets Which Will Prove Fatal, Doctors Assert.

In a murderous attack last night a man bearing the initials "S. S." was shot twice, once through the head and once in the shoulder, while on the platform of a street car at Elston and Belmont avenues. His assailant escaped.

The man who made the attack was seen to leap on the platform of the car and fire twice. The wounded man fell. Police were called and removed him to St. Elizabeth's hospital, where it was said at a late hour that he could not live through the night.

The victim was described as 23 years old, dark, smooth of face, and wearing black clothes, a black overcoat, and lace shoes. The address, 532 West Grand avenue, also was found in his pockets.

GERMAN WOMAN SHOT AS SPY BY ALLIES, BERLIN REPORT.

Press Bureau Quotes Genoa Newspaper for Story of Sentence Carried Out by Italians.

BERLIN, via wireless to Sayville, N. Y., Nov. 18.—One more woman has been shot by the allies, the press bureau asserts in a statement today quoting an article from a Genoa newspaper. The dispatch asserted that a German woman began spying at Zurich, Switzerland, then went to Italy armed with British passports. On her attempting to return to Switzerland the newspaper declares she was arrested by the Italian authorities, sentenced, and shot.

FATE OF FROST, WING, AND BOURKE RESTS WITH JURY

Verdict Due Today on Charges Against Promoter, Attorney, and Former Mayor of Blue Island.

The fate of Albert C. Frost, a wealthy promoter; Oliver W. Bourke, former mayor of Blue Island; and Bert Wing, an attorney, who have been on trial before Judge Geiger in the Federal court on a charge of jury bribing, rests with a jury, but they will not know what that fate is until 11 o'clock this morning.

The case was given to the jury last night, but when a verdict had not been reached at 10 o'clock Judge Geiger left orders to hold the jury until 11 o'clock today.

If a verdict is not reached by that time, the bailiffs will notify Judge Carpenter of the Federal court, who will dismiss the jury.

The three men were tried on a charge of conspiracy to bribe a jury in connection with the $10,000,000 Alaska land fraud case, which was heard by Judge Landis in 1913.

CHICAGOAN IN DEATH CRASH.

N. L. Perry Killed Near St. Marys, O., When Auto Is Wrecked by Traction Car.

St. Marys, O., Nov. 18.—N. L. Perry, traveling representative of the Milometer company of Chicago, was killed tonight when his automobile was wrecked by a traction car near here.

MORE GRIEF AT LITTLE THEATER

President Browne and His Players Ordered to Vacate Just as Profits Come.

For four years the Chicago Little Theater company has been long on art but short at the box office. Maurice Browne labored for an unesthetic public's applause, but the great, heartless city admired his pluck and kept its dollars for vaudeville and the lowlier lure of musical comedy.

But with "Mrs. Warren's Profession" the Little Theater company finally broke into the percentages with a hit. There was something or other spicy about this Mrs. Warren's avocation that brought the box office a dizzy spell of business.

A Chance to Rejoice.

The Little Theater company rejoiced with the rejoicing of a company that has had no chance for merriment in four years. That was where they made their big mistake. The owners of the playhouse heard of the sudden affluence. They lost no time in sending their Mr. Hardy to the scene. Mr. Hardy arrived with his hand out, palm up.

"The rent for the French Players and for the Little Theater company," said he.

Browne Registers Pain.

President Browne, fingering profits for the first time, regarded Mr. Hardy with pain.

"It is impossible," he said.

"Then both of you go out," said Mr. Hardy, "and a picture goes in tomorrow."

The Little Theater company's contract runs for six weeks longer, during which they hoped to keep up the phenomenal run with "Mrs. Warren's Profession." Mr. Hardy's decision, however, blasts that hope. The Little Theater company stood responsible for the rent of the French players, which had not been paid for the first week. The French players and the Little Theater company were taking turns with their offerings in the Playhouse. Mr. Hardy asserted that both companies would have out without delay.

HITS PACIFISTS

Col. Roosevelt, in Letter to Gen. Young, Says He Would Disfranchise "Poltroons and Professional Pacifists."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—In a letter to Lieut. Gen. S. B. M. Young, retired, president of the Association for National Service, Col. Roosevelt urged that no one who has not served from six months to a year with the colors should be allowed to vote. His letter:

"My dear Gen. Young—I most cordially and emphatically approve your efforts as president of the Association for National Service to secure the passage of a law making it obligatory upon every male American citizen between the ages of 18 and 21 to serve six months or a year—as the case may demand—in the field with the colors.

"I believe no one should be allowed to vote who has not thus served—poltroons and professional pacifists are out of place in a free republic.

"There should be education towards military training along the lines followed in Australia, Argentina, Switzerland, and Japan.

"No man is fit to be a free man unless he has fitted himself to fight efficiently for his freedom.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

JOB FOR THE COLONEL ?

Warrensburg, Mo., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Here's a job for Col. Roosevelt: His excellency, United States minister to the kingdom of Arabia.

The Democrats of this town, believing that the colonel has done yeoman service in prolonging the Democratic administration for four years, cast about for a suitable reward. A new kingdom of Arabia has just been projected. That gave the Warrensburg Democrats an idea and they have drawn up resolutions and forwarded them to President Wilson, asking him to send the colonel to the Arabian post at once.

HITS CROWD WHILE GOING 100 MILE CLIP

Aitken Finishes First at Santa Monica, Setting Record.

THE WINNERS

Driver.	Car.	Time.	Ave.
1 Aitkens,	Peugeot..	4:42:47	85.55
2 Cooper,	Stutz....	4:48:59	83.74
3 Patterson,	Hudson	5:09:35	78.13
4 Roads,	Hudson...	.....	.....

Distance, 403.248 miles.

Santa Monica, Cal., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Four persons were killed and three badly injured during the running of the Grand Prix automobile race today when a Marmon car, driven by Lewis Jackson, left the course and crashed into the crowd.

Jackson himself was killed. The others killed were Harold Edgerton of Los Angeles, a spectator; J. B. Jenkins, a moving picture camera man; and Mrs. Leana Juratch of Venice, Cal. The seriously wounded were J. S. Harrington and Miss Georgia McCall.

John Ghianda, Jackson's mechanician, had a remarkable escape. He was thrown clear of the wreckage, landed on his feet, and was only slightly injured.

MINOR ACCIDENT CAUSE.

Jackson's fatal accident was preceded by a minor one which officials said might have weakened his car. Early in the race his car jumped the curb on the turn where later he was killed and ran onto the interurban railway tracks some distance from the race course. He changed a wheel when he reached the pits and little attention was given the accident.

The disaster came in the thirteenth lap. Jackson was going down San Vincente boulevard—the back stretch of the triangular course—at a 100 mile an hour pace. His car became unmanageable and swerved. The left front wheel hit the cement curb, which is fifteen inches high, and crumpled. The axle rested on the curb and the car raced along for twenty-five feet before it left the road.

Jenkins, the camera man, was filming Jackson's drive while standing at the side of the track. He was caught in the full rush of the racer. It swept his mangled body aside and went on.

SMASHES TREES AND SHED.

The catapulting wreck shot against a palm tree, uprooting it, crashed into and smashed a lemonade stand, killing Mrs. Juratch, the keeper, and Edgerton, a customer; cut down another tree, and then wrapped itself around a third palm. The motor was thrown twenty feet and the radiator and hood were thrown thirty feet farther.

Harrington and Miss McCall were not struck by the auto itself, but were wounded by flying pieces of the wreckage of the car, the stand, and the trees.

Pinned between the wreck of the Marmon and the third tree was found the body of Jackson. He was badly mangled and attendants were compelled to chop the tree down to remove him. He died a few minutes later.

CROWDS ARE KEPT BACK.

The officials of the race attempted to prevent the seriousness of the accident from becoming known to the crowd of 85,000 persons gathered about the course in order to avoid a rush to the scene of the disaster and the probability of further accidents.

The hurrying of a number of ambulances to the boulevard prevented this effort and the track guards had a hard time in restraining the crowds from getting in front of the machines, which still were racing. The more seriously injured were picked up and rushed to the emergency hospitals near the racecourse. Those who were not so badly hurt were taken to St. Catherine's hospital.

Mrs. Jackson occupied one of the boxes in the grandstand. She collapsed when the news of her husband's death was reported to her.

Johnny Aitken won the race, the blue ribbon motor event of the United States, for another man. Although he piloted a Peugeot car across the finish line first, credit for the victory goes to his teammate, Howard Wilcox, and the latter will be paid the $4,000 prize money.

Aitken was forced to leave the race when his car developed valve trouble in the first lap. In the twentieth lap he relieved Wilcox, and American Automobile association officials announced that to Wilcox must go the crown. Neither will Aitken be credited with any points in the contest for the American championship.

Wilcox, officially the winner of the race, was in first place when he was relieved by Aitken, who never lost first position.

Finishes on Rims.

It was announced that Aitken had blown out a tire in the last lap and finished the race on the rim. He narrowly escaped turning over at "Death curve." His time for the race was 4 hours 42 minutes 47 seconds. His average was 85.15 miles an hour. The best previous record for the course was made by Eddie Pullen in 1914. It was 77.2 miles average.

The winners of the first, second, and third places all averaged better time than the former grand prize record. Those finishing after Aitken, their times and average speeds, were: Cooper, second, 4:48:59, average 83.72; Patterson, third, 5:09:38, average 78.13; Roads, fourth, time not announced. Rickenbacher, driving for Weightman, who withdrew, and Cody were flagged while running.

Patterson in his Hudson established a new world's record for nonstop driving, having raced 403 miles without a stop.

Cooper, who finished second today, and Roads, who came in fourth, finished in like positions in Thursday's Vanderbilt race.

Many Cars Drop Out.

So gruelling was the pace from the outset and so unfortunate were the drivers that only six of the eighteen starters remained in the race. From the first lap, when Price, in a Gandy car, went out with a broken clutch, the drivers fell by the wayside rapidly.

Eddie Pullen was compelled to retire in the seventh and narrowly escaped death. His Mercer turned over and caught fire on the backstretch and burned after Pullen and his mechanician had scrambled to safety.

Dario Resta, winner of the Vanderbilt cup race on Thursday and of last year's Grand Prize race, withdrew on the eighteenth lap, on account of mechanical trouble, after leading at the fifth.

As the drivers continued to drop out the race resolved itself into an endurance test, with the result dependent upon freedom from accidents to the place winners, who ran in their finishing order from the thirtieth lap until the end.

"FORGERY PLANT" REVEALED AFTER RAID ON A FLAT.

Printing Outfit, Perforators, Stencils, Blanks, Checks and Money Found—One Woman Taken.

A "forgery factory" completely equipped and said to have done a business of $25,000 in the last few months, was raided last night and five men and a woman arrested at 115 South Halsted street.

The raid was made by Detective Sergts. Carmody and Burns, who confiscated a printing plant, blank checks, paper, stencils, and perforators in all styles.

The woman taken is Bessie Bowers of 23 Waverly court. The men are Frank Farnum, 1015 West Lake street; Henry Bartley, 1245 West Adams street; Harry Lewis, 115 South Halsted street; John Hogan, 2358 West Park avenue, and Frank Dillon, 23 Waverly court. All are locked up in the Desplaines street police station.

When the detectives burst into the rooms of the alleged forgers money was found scattered over the entire place. Bills in varying denominations were found under beds, chairs, and under rugs. It is declared this was done by the accused in order that incriminating evidence might not be found.

The alleged forgers are declared to prey systematically on factories in small towns. A "scout" first would cash a pay check for a workman in a suburb. This check would be duplicated in blank. Then a number of them would be made out to members of the band. These then would be taken to the factory town and cashed in some saloon or store frequented by employés of the factory victimized.

WEDS AT 74, AFTER M'NEIL MARRIAGE GIVES HIM HEART.

John McNamara, Who Felt Too Old to Take Bride, Regains Courage After Jobber of 84 Marries.

Two weeks or so ago John D. McNamara, 72 years old, was discouraged. He was in love with Mrs. Ellen Keefe, a widow of 54, but he was convinced that he was too old to be remarried. Then Malcolm McNeil, president of McNeil & Higgins, at 84, ventured into the matrimonial field. McNamara took heart.

"He's older than I," said McNamara. "I guess there is still a chance for me."

So the ceremony was performed with some secrecy Wednesday afternoon at St. Bernard's church. The couple went immediately to McNamara's home, 839 West Fifty-fourth street, where they will reside.

Mrs. McNamara is a prominent club woman. She has been secretary of the Sherman Park Women's club and the Wednesday Evening Civic club. At present she is president of Illinois Democratic Women's league in the Thirty-second ward.

MISS SHARPLEY FINDS HELP.

Declares She Has Witness to Her Story of How She Has Been Blackmailed.

Miss Annie Sharpley, who says she has been blackmailed out of $70,000, which she borrowed from friends on unsecured notes, declared yesterday she would bring evidence that others knew of her plight and will substantiate what she says. She says she will call on Miss M. E. True, treasurer of the Y. W. C. A., in whom she confided eight years ago. Miss True probably will be subpoenaed.

Boy Bitten by Dog.

Richard Klempt, 8 years old, of 1420 Carroll avenue, was bitten on the leg by a dog yesterday in Douglas park. The dog was later killed and its brain taken to the city laboratory for examination.

DIEMER MURDER MYSTERY ENDS; GIRL DROWNED

Autopsy by Chicago Expert Disproves Violence Theory of Pontiac Officials.

BY SHEPPARD BUTLER.

Pontiac, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Christine Diemer was drowned. She was not murdered and her body thrown afterward into the Vermilion river. This is the substance of Dr. Ludvig Hektoen's findings in the second postmortem, which he completed late this afternoon.

State's Attorney Ortman, Coroner Myer, and other officials stood by in absorbed interest while the evidence on which the dead girl's wealthy father, her mother, and her youngest sister were charged with manslaughter faded before their eyes.

On the two crucial statements in his report Coroner's Physician A. B. Mildleton was reversed. He had declared that Miss Diemer's skull was fractured and her neck broken.

Finds Evidence of Drowning.

Early in the examination there was a stir in the little group of physicians and officials about the body as Dr. Hektoen announced: "There is no evidence that the skull has been fractured."

A murmur of interest followed shortly afterward when he said: "There is no indication whatever of a fracture or dislocation of any of the vertebrae."

Still later Dr. Hektoen told those who watched his work that he found conclusive evidence of drowning in a peculiar wrinkling of the skin of the hands and feet.

"This," he said, "could never appear in a body which was dead before it fell into the water."

So Pontiac's biggest sensation is over.

History of the Case.

Christine Diemer, a young woman subject to frequent mental aberrations, disappeared from her home in the heart of Pontiac on Oct. 27. A woman in a rowboat found her body in the river, less than two blocks from the Diemer house, on Nov. 8.

An autopsy was performed and the coroner's physician reported the skull fracture and the broken neck. He said there was no water in the lungs and declared positively that the girl had not been drowned.

This report resulted in the father, mother, and daughter being held to the grand jury in bonds of $10,000 each.

The father, Jacob Diemer, is a retired farmer, churchman, and former county supervisor. The daughter, Magdalena, was graduated from the University of Chicago last August.

Chicago Expert Called In.

When Attorney Bert W. Adsit was retained by the Diemers his first move was to call in Dr. Hektoen and demand the second post-mortem. Christine Diemer's body was exhumed by lantern light before dawn this morning and taken to an undertaking establishment, where it awaited Dr. Hektoen's arrival at noon. Coroner's Physician Middleton, who watched the examination closely, accepted Dr. Hektoen's findings without comment.

"It's all over," State's Attorney Ortman said. "The family will have to remain under bonds for the present, but the case will not even be presented to the grand jury."

"PICTOGRAPHS" PROVE BIG TORRENS SYSTEM BOOSTERS

Publicity Brings Highest Record of Applications for Registration in History.

That people are picture minded is proved by the fact that the highest record for applications and receipts since the inauguration of the Torrens system in Cook county nineteen years ago was reached immediately following publication in the newspapers of a series of "pictographs" illustrating its cheapness and simplicity.

The "pictographs," which were devised by James C. Russell, chief clerk in Recorder Connery's office, to exploit the Torrens system, were published in the Chicago daily newspapers in September and early part of October. They produced immediate results.

The business for October showed an increase of 53 per cent in applications and 38 per cent in fees over the corresponding month a year ago. It was the maximum in the history of the land registration department. There were 127 applications covering property worth $500,000. The fees amounted to $7,192.75.

It is expected that a similar increase will be shown this month.

URGES SUFFRAGISTS TO AID CHICAGO TEACHERS IN FIGHT.

Mrs. Ida Fursman Assails School Board at Luncheon of Union Women in Baltimore, Md.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ida Fursman of Chicago, representing the Teachers' federation of that city, renewed her attack on the Chicago board of education for its action in dismissing forty-two federation members, at a luncheon given here today by the women of the American Federation of Labor to the wives of the federation officers. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and other leading eastern suffragists were at the luncheon.

Mrs. Fursman urged the interest of the suffragists in the fight of the Chicago teachers and said if necessary the Chicago Teachers' federation is ready to carry the fight further in the courts.

SONNY'S BODY IS FOUND IN LAKE

Father Believes Matthews Boy Must Have Fallen Through Ice.

after 'Sonny' went away," said Mrs. Matthews. "It seemed as if everything we looked at, everything we touched, everything we thought of, brought home to us all the more deeply the grief of our boy's disappearance.

"It was in the afternoon that he went away. I can hardly bear to see the little children coming from school now. He had just come from school. I remember as if it were but yesterday.

"He wore his little gray skating cap. It was a crisp day and he had it pulled down over his ears. His brown mackinaw coat was buttoned tightly. He wore gray knickerbockers, black stockings, and his lace shoes were rumpled from scuffing and outdoor play.

OFF FOR CANDY STORE.

"I gave him a penny, and he set off for the candy store. But before he got out of the house he raided the doughnut jar. And as he ran down the steps he held up his hand to me in a gesture of mock solemnity. Then he ran down the street. I watched him as he ran. It was the last time I saw him."

"Sonny" did not return for his supper. There was some concern in the household, but it was held against him as a small act of truancy. The night dragged through. Barnett Matthews, the father, of Armour & Co., made a search of the neighborhood and of the residences of little "Sonny's" playmates. The search went for naught.

Mr. Matthews returned home worried. Then the police were notified, but with no result. A week passed and then the broken father and mother settled down to the long sorrow of waiting and watching. Never a night passed but Mrs. Matthews sat in the front window of her home with a light burning for the little lost boy. But he never came home.

RANSOM LETTER ARRIVES.

Then the family began to be harried by mysterious letters. On Feb. 14 this letter came:

Mail 3 one hundred dollar bills, a 1 fifty dollar bill to the following address and receive your child not the worst for his experience. Mr. K. E. White, 919 West Madison street, City.

Say nothing to police. It will do no good, as we have a systematically way of getting your reply. Mail it in a plain envelope. K. E. W.

By not later than Wed. 16th by 4 pm.

Mr. Matthews and the police went to the Madison street address and found it to be the Comfort hotel. Investigation disclosed no one who knew of the letter writer or of a K. E. White. Letters written to "White" failed of delivery, and again the search fell into dull monotony.

Another Money Letter.

In a little time there came still another letter:

"We leave Chicago on the 16th. Better hurry with the money if you want your child. K. E. WHITE."

The police became of the opinion that the letters meant nothing save the criminal efforts of crooks to obtain money through the eagerness of the parents to retrieve their lost son. The search for "White" was dropped.

Another clew came from Crown Point, Ind., where a conversation of gypsies was overheard. One was heard to say something concerning a telegram sent to St. Louis [illegible] to "keep the child off the streets for a few days." A search of St. Louis and [illegible] investigation of all gypsy bands was [illegible]. No clew to the lost boy was discovered, and again the search was turned to Chicago.

Death Message Received.

Early in this month Mr. Matthews again was approached through the mails. This time it was a queer note written in a German hand. It said:

"Sonny Matthews died the twenty-first day he was lost."

It had been mailed from the Auburn postoffice and there was no signature—no clew to the identity of the sender. Mr. Matthews tried to get in communication with the writer and agreed to ask no questions if the body of his son could be but returned to him. The investigation reached nowhere.

Lake Searched Months Ago.

At first there was a belief that the boy had lost his life in the lake. A search was made, but because of the ice it was impossible for the investigation to proceed with any thoroughness. When in March the ice went out and still there was no indication of the boy's body, the search there was given up, and Mr. Matthews increased his offer of a reward to $1,000 in the hope there might be some evidence forthcoming.

In her sorrow Mrs. Matthews took up the work of aiding others who were in distress. One of these unfortunates was a comely Canadian girl she found in a south side hospital. There was a little baby. This was adopted by Mrs. Matthews to take the place of "Sonny." This infant is Dorothy Matthews, and the home given her is by way of doing good for those who have found Misfortune as the Matthews have found it.

NIELS GRON TO CONTEST WIFE'S ALIMONY SUIT

Danish Diplomat Says Court Clerk Supplied Him with Lawyers Without Authority.

Niels Gron, Danish-American diplomat, whose wife, the former Mrs. Madeline Stone, and daughter-in-law of the late Horatio O. Stone, real estate dealer, recently sued him for divorce and alimony, yesterday filed a declaration saying the clerk of the Superior court had appointed counsel for him without his knowledge or authority.

Gron says he was in Europe at the time the bill for divorce was filed against him. He left Europe on the first steamer he could get. He says also that he cabled the clerk of the Superior court to obtain a continuance, and that he also cabled to his counsel in New York to see that his interests were taken care of. He then found the clerk had employed counsel without his consent, and that this firm—Cassidy, Butler, Lamb & Foster—had filed a petition for a general appearance instead of a special appearance, endangering his interests. He announced he had lately employed Norman K. Anderson and Emil [illegible] Zolla as counsel to represent him.

Mr. Gron denied he had been guilty of habitual drunkenness or was of a "highly neurotic, visionary, and emotional temperament and given to terrific fits of passion."

BURGLARS MAKE $5,000 GEM HAUL ON THE WEST SIDE

Home of B. H. Schwarz Looted of Jewelry and Silver When the Family Is Absent.

Police were busy yesterday seeking clews to burglars who made a $5,000 haul in the home of Bernard H. Schwarz, 1316 Independence boulevard. The robbery occurred the night before when the family was out to dinner and the servants had gone to a movie show.

When Mr. and Mrs. Schwarz returned they found the place topsy-turvy. A small safe had been drilled and its contents of diamonds and jewelry were gone. Silverware, much of which was wedding presents, also was taken by the thieves.

It is thought the burglars were frightened away by the return of the family, for a large bundle of clothing, furs, and cut glass was on the floor of the dining room.

Fifty Pieces of Jewelry Taken.

All together fifty articles of jewelry were taken. The most valuable articles, as listed in the police report by Mr. Schwarz, are the following:

Diamond earrings	$800
Diamond ring	550
Brooch set with diamonds	450
Gold Swiss watch	260
Diamond ring	250
Diamond pendant	400
Dinner ring	150
Bracelet studded with diamonds	200

Several other pieces of jewelry were valued at $1,000.

Cared for the Silver.

Although the value of the jewelry was greater than that of the silverware, Mr. and Mrs. Schwarz prized the latter more on account of the association.

"The diamonds and other articles of jewelry," said Mr. Schwarz, "can be replaced, but the wedding presents cannot."

On discovering the robbery Mr. Schwarz telephoned the Fillmore street police. Investigation showed the burglars entered by breaking a rear window. It was thought finger prints on the window sill might lead to identification of the thieves, and an expert was sent for. The impressions were so indistinct, however, that they were valueless. Capt. Gleason took personal charge of the investigation and called on Chief of Detectives Larkin for aid. Capt. Gleason has had as much experience with burglars as any man in the police department, but he admits he is up against it in this case.

Capt. Larkin sent two of his best "burglar men" to coöperate with the Fillmore street detectives, but they have been unable to get a clew.

Has 179,553 to Wilson's 179,157, but Runs Far Behind His Ticket in the State.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 18.—Charles Evans Hughes carried Minnesota by 396. This was based upon official returns from Minnesota complete this afternoon giving Hughes 179,553, Wilson 179,157.

There will be no official recount of the Minnesota figures, Fred Wheaton, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and other Democrats intimated today. The Republicans got out a brass band and paraded the streets this afternoon.

Hughes ran just 86,299 behind his ticket in Minnesota, according to these officially canvassed figures. J. A. A. Burnquist, Republican governor, was reëlected with just 245,852 votes. Hughes' total was 179,553.

Hughes Gains in California.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 18.—Charles E. Hughes will gain 858 votes in Los Angeles county if "semi-official" results of the count given out today are borne out by the official returns.

According to the unofficial returns compiled last week, Hughes' Los Angeles plurality was 21,333. "Semi-official" figures given out today by the Los Angeles board of supervisors, covering all precincts except No. 338, which is in dispute, gave the high Hughes elector 135,429 and the low Democratic elector 113,238. This shows a maximum plurality for Hughes in the county of 22,191.

This gain for Hughes is not large enough to affect Wilson's plurality in the state, although it is the largest difference so far revealed between the unofficial totals and the totals resulting from the recount.

BURGLARS MAKE MINUTE SEARCH

Find Hidden Gold in Seven Places—Get Total of $1,000 in Flat.

EYE EVERY CUBBYHOLE

Burglars stole $1,000 worth of jewelry and silverplate from the residence of Mrs. Rose M. Kraus, 4735 St. Lawrence avenue, yesterday. They are believed to have spent several hours in the flat. That they took their time is indicated by the thoroughness of their search.

Mrs. G. A. Weinberg, Mrs. Kraus' daughter-in-law, who lives with her, had $100 in gold hidden in seven different places for the purpose of thwarting thieves. She believed if a burglar entered the home he might get part of the money, but not all.

In Trinket Boxes.

Some of it was hidden in trinket boxes in corners of bureau drawers, some in a pill box secreted on the lintel of a sleeping room door; some in a stocking under clothing at the bottom of a trunk. The burglars found every cent of the money.

"I never saw such thorough work," said Mrs. Kraus. "My house looked like a cyclone had struck it. Everything was inside out and upside down. Contents of drawers and closets, trunks, and boxes were scattered over the floors.

Don't Miss One Corner.

"The thieves had ransacked every corner and cubbyhole. They had even looked into all the old medicine boxes kept in the bathroom closet. They took away all my silverware, a $75 dresser set, three gold watches, a brooch set with twelve diamonds, a diamond ring with a ruby center, a diamond locket and a number of heirlooms and wedding gifts that have been treasured in the family for years."

Mrs. Kraus keeps a delicatessen at 549 East Forty-seventh street. She and Mrs. Weinberg were in the shop and the flat was empty all day. The police were notified.

PRICE BOOSTING IS SEEN IN RISE OF TOMATO COST

Forty Per Cent Increase In This Canned Goods Not Due to Output Shortage.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The retail price of canned tomatoes has advanced 40 per cent over last year. The can for which the housewife paid 10 or 11 cents in 1915 now costs her 15 cents.

Here, if anywhere in the canned goods trade, one finds foundation for the charge that speculation and market manipulation are responsible for the greatly increased cost.

In 1915 the pack of tomatoes was 7,500,000 cases of two dozen cans each. This year the best estimates are that 11,000,000 cases were packed. In other words, the canners put up in 1916 84,000,000 cans more than in 1915—almost enough extra to give everybody in the country an additional can.

Why, then, should the jobber charge the retail grocer $1.40 a dozen for the same goods he sold last year at $1 or $1.10? Why should the retailer take an extra nickle out of the family purse?

Some of the "Alibis."

Experts in the trade advance many explanations, none of which seems to this reporter altogether convincing.

They all admit, in the first place, that canned tomatoes are one of the few foodstuffs on which the export demand has little or no influence. This season, for instance, the exports have been almost nothing, except to Canada, which has taken, perhaps, 200,000 cases.

But indirectly the war has had its effect. The demand for all sorts of metals has brought with it a jump in the price of tin tomato cans from $17 a thousand to $27.75. Wooden cases and paper labels have also jumped in price. These advances, outside the control of anybody connected with the canning trade, may legitimately account for an increase of a few cents per dozen. But no real reason for the big jump in prices is to be found here.

Small Pack in 1915.

Most of the experts go back to 1915 to start their explanation. The pack in 1915 was the smallest ever known in the canned tomato industry. It was several million cases less than the average of the previous five years. The result was a shortage and much higher prices during the last of the season—though they did not approach the present market. Because of the small pack there were practically no tomatoes left over at the start of this season.

This year almost all the jobbers bought enormous quantities of tomatoes for future delivery. The ruling price at the canneries was 80 cents a dozen. The jobbers, in their anxiety not to be caught short as they were in 1915, are said to have contracted for almost the entire output of the canneries.

Retail grocers shared the prevailing nervousness in the canned goods trade. They bought heavily for future delivery, getting the tomatoes from the jobbers at an average of 97½ cents a dozen.

Housewife Stocks Up.

At this point enters the ingenuous housewife—not as usual in the rôle of a victim but, in the eyes of some canned goods experts, at least, as co-conspirator with the rest. Thousands of family closets, say these authorities, are now stuffed with canned tomatoes, where in previous years they have held but a can or two at a time.

At any rate, canned tomatoes have now almost vanished from the wholesale market, except where one is willing to pay $1.35 or $1.40 a dozen for them, as one of the biggest distributors in the country did for thousands of cases last week.

When a grocer who failed to buy a stock for future delivery or who has exhausted his supply pays between 11 and 12 cents a can for tomatoes to his jobber he can hardly be blamed for charging the customer 15 cents.

Held for High Prices.

"The present stock of tomatoes," says one leading expert in the canned goods industry, "is in the hands of people who have plenty of capital and will hold the stuff until they get high prices for it. The tomato canners did not profit greatly. Most of their pack was delivered at 80 cents a dozen. Some of them, no doubt, failed to deliver in full on their future contracts and held out part of their pack to take advantage of the very high prices prevailing. But the jobber who bought at 80 cents, plus freight, and is now selling at $1.35 or $1.40 is the man who is making the big money."

A somewhat similar and puzzling situation exists in the dried apricot market. The production this year is estimated at about 75 per cent of 1915. But in ordinary years Germany is said to consume more than half of the entire California output, which would seem to leave a surplus this year for consumption in this country. At the same time the jobber is now obliged to pay 17 cents a pound for dried apricots, as compared with 8 and 9 cents a pound last year.

$40,000 GONE ON FAKE RACE.

Rich North Dakota Farmer Reports to Police He Was Swindled Out of Big Sum.

COLD STORAGE BOOKS SEIZED

U. S. Detectives Raid Warehouses for High Living Cost Evidence.

Special agents of the local department of justice, assigned exclusively to the investigation of the high price of food, seized the books and records of two large cold storage warehouses and took them to the local office of the department, where they were immediately put under lock and key.

The records were seized after numerous complaints had been received by District Attorney Charles F. Clyne that the cold storage warehouses in Chicago and the immediate vicinity are heavily stocked with produce.

Hunt a Conspiracy.

All over the middle west the excuse of produce dealers for the high cost of living has been the shortage of staple commodities, and it is said that government officials are convinced that this shortage is due primarily to cold storage warehouses being filled to their capacity.

If the government's agents can prove that the shortage is due to this and that a conspiracy exists between producers, shippers, and cold storage house owners to hold supplies back in an effort to "boost" the price, numerous indictments may result, it was said.

That the records seized will be among the first evidence taken before the November grand jury when it convenes on Monday was common talk around the federal building. The records are being held in Mr. Clabaugh's office and are said to be expected to reveal the identity of the owners of the produce in question, the price paid for it, and the time the produce has been in the warehouses.

Prices Break Records.

Although facing an inquiry by the federal grand jury, butter and egg dealers at Chicago added further to the cost of these commodities.

Creamery butter was sold to jobbers at 39½@40c a pound, an advance of 1@1½c over Friday's prices, and the highest ever known here at this season of the year. Eggs were raised ½c a dozen, also touching unprecedented figures.

"In former years, if the housewife was asked to pay 40 cents a pound for butter she revolted and used a cheaper substitute," said a South Water street dealer. "This year she kicks like blazes at paying 50 cents, but she buys.

"Therein lies the secret of present high prices. There are liberal stocks of butter and eggs in cold storage and the holders have made more money than they ever expected to make. Still, there is no way to make them sell their products for 30 cents, when somebody is willing to pay them 50 cents, and as long as buyers will continue to pay advancing prices the cost is going to go up.

"It has gotten to be a joke. A seller will offer a lot of butter or eggs at a certain price, feeling that no one will be foolish enough to pay that high, and the first thing he knows his offerings are accepted.

Turkeys Go on Up.

Along with the advance in butter and egg prices came an increase of 1 cent a pound in live and dressed turkeys. Local dealers are hopeful of keeping the wholesale price of dressed turkeys under 30 cents a pound, but admit they will charge more if the demand for Thanksgiving birds is sufficiently large.

SANDWICH COST GOES UP

Kohlsaat's Restaurants Make Price 10 Cents and Huyler's Sodas Go to 15 Cents.

Kohlsaat's restaurants have made an advance of 5 cents on all sandwiches, and the new menu cards issued by the Huyler stores have the price of sodas 15 cents. This is due to the increase in the cost of sugar for the sirups, and of the advance in the price of eggs and production. The rise in the price of bread forced the ham sandwich cost up.

FREE FOOD (ADVICE)

How to Cut the High Cost of Living.

RICE, hominy, and apples were suggested as substitutes for potatoes and other high priced vegetables at a meeting of Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson's citizens' committee, which began its investigation of the high cost of living yesterday.

O. P. Kinsey, chairman of the committee, who for thirty-six years has been feeding students at Valparaiso, Ind., made the following suggestions to cut down the price of existence:

Eat slowly—you don't eat so much as when you eat rapidly.

Buy in larger quantities.

Don't buy foods put up in factory paper packages; you can't eat the paper.

Don't consume potatoes when they cost more than a dollar a bushel; eat rice or hominy instead.

SHE GETS $250,000; GOES TO MOVIES

Mrs. Hinrichs' Only Change in Plan Is to Phone for Auto to Take Her.

Mrs. Victor Hinrichs' preparations to go to the movies were complete except for the item of putting the cat out. The cat, unfortunately, was not at hand for the ceremony. Mrs. Hinrichs started to hunt for it and the door bell rang.

A messenger boy handed her a telegram. Mrs. Hinrichs did nothing illogical with the telegram. She wondered who it was from, looked for the postmark, tried to identify the handwriting, and finally opened it. She read that Mrs. Victor Hinrichs of 3313 South Leavitt street had fallen heir to $250,000 a legacy bequeathed by an aunt in Germany.

Mrs. Hinrichs folded the telegram and renewed her search for the cat. A neighbor called to pass the time. Mrs. Hinrichs glanced under the sofa.

Spreads the Joyful News.

"I've just inherited a quarter of a million," said she casually.

"Do-o-o tell!" exclaimed the neighbor.

"And my brother, Louis Gaefke of Ottawa, Ill., a printer, was bequeathed a like amount," said Mrs. Hinrichs. "Bother that cat!"

"I suppose you'll be getting automobiles and everything," gasped the neighbor.

"That's a good idea," said Mrs. Hinrichs. After a glance behind the gasoline can she picked up the telephone.

"What now?" said the neighbor.

"I'm going to order an automobile," said Mrs. Hinrichs. She did. Then she resumed the search for the cat. The telephone rang.

Wants No Publicity.

"THE TRIBUNE?" shouted Mrs. Hinrichs, picking up the receiver. "Now, I don't want any publicity about this. I'm a woman of ordinary circumstances who has fallen into a lot of money. Yes, it's true. Yes, and my brother, too. Is that the automobile driving up?"

"Yes," whispered the neighbor weakly.

"And there comes that blessed cat! Good-by, TRIBUNE; I've got to put the cat out and get to the movies, and I don't want to miss this episode for anything in the world."

Wife Dead with Poison Near.

Mrs. Julia Cecilia Roberts was found dead in her home, 428 South Homan avenue, last evening by her husband, Edward Roberts. An empty bottle labeled "poison" lay on a chair within arm's reach of the bed upon which the body was found. Mrs. Roberts had been in poor health. An inquest will be held.

THEY AGREE TO EAT 8C MEALS FOR TWO WEEKS

Health Bureau Experiment to Show Housewives How to Reduce Bills.

Twelve heroic souls volunteered yesterday to offer up their appetites, digestions, and entire gastronomic equipment on the altar of the public health.

They constitute a "diet squad" named by Health Commissioner Robertson, who, in a coldly scientific way, will feed them cheap foods for two weeks in an experiment to determine how little food a man may eat and at how small an expense and still live and do his daily grind of work.

Wiseacres on the food situation say that unless some embargo is placed on foodstuffs, the public will be face to face with a famine before the winter is over. So this experiment is meant to teach the poor people of the city how to tide over these times of starvation prices.

The heroic twelve whose names ought to live in Chicago's annals are six men and six women, employés of the health department. They will weigh in at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at Dr. Robertson's office in the city hall. Their weight will be closely watched during the two weeks of their regimen. They will be given three meals a day. The menu of each meal will be carefully prepared by a corps of experts. On this diet, the twelve will do their regular work. They will be pledged not to eat anything except what is served in their Spartan mess-room. They will be permitted to drink only water between meals.

Dr. Robertson says he expects to feed the twelve for $20 a week. This will be at the rate of a trifle more than 8 cents a meal or 25 cents a day for each one.

The Twelve.

The twelve whose unselfish immolation of themselves will teach Chicago's poor how to weather the period of high prices are:

Sophia Miller,
Cecilia Wilcox,
Eva G. Hansen,
Neva Morse,
Gertrude Nerrigan,
Gorghild D. Halvorsen,
H. L. Porschi,
Henry Gehring Jr.,
Irwin Kowohl,
R. Beckman,
Albert J. Stokes,
William C. Merker.

The commission that will superintend the experiment comprises O. P. Kinsey, head of the commissary at Valparaiso university; August Geweke, president of the Cook County Truck Gardeners and Farmers' association; Sol Westerfield of the National Retail Grocers' association; Lillian A. Kemp of the School of Domestic Arts and Sciences; Grace Hood of Lewis institute; Mrs. Aldine C. Coulter, Mrs. Mary V. O'Connor, Dr. A. C. Test of the Woman's City club, Mrs. Payson S. Wild of the home department of the Chicago Women's club, Miss Anna Johnson, dietician of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium; Mrs. N. W. Badenoch of the American School of Home Economics, and Miss Leila Cooper, director of the School of Home Economics of Battle Creek, Mich.

The meals will be prepared by Mrs. Kemp, Mrs. Johnson, Miss Badenoch, Mrs. Coulter, Mr. Westerfield, and Mr. Geweke.

Some Economy Suggestions.

Suggestions to reduce the high cost of living were made at a meeting of Health Commissioner Robertson's citizens' committee, which began its investigation of the food prices in the afternoon. Rice and hominy were named as good substitutes for potatoes and other high priced vegetables. Other foods suggested as still within the reach of the slenderest purse were oatmeal, carrots, navy beans, peas, and other canned goods and cornmeal preparations. Cornmeal is $2.75 a barrel.

Mr. Kinsey, chairman of the committee, who for thirty-six years has been feeding students at Valparaiso, Ind., made the following suggestions:

Eat slowly; you don't eat so much as when you eat rapidly.

Buy in large quantities.

Don't consume potatoes when they cost more than $1 a bushel. Eat rice or hominy instead.

Cost in Large Quantities.

"I am buying canned peas and pork for 77 cents a dozen cans," Mr. Kinsey added. "Hominy, one of the best and cheapest foods obtainable, I buy for $2.25 for a dozen gallon cans. I can buy rice now for 5 cents a pound and cracked rice for less than that. Cracked rice is just as nutritious as whole rice, too. Cornmeal costs $2.75 a barrel."

Dr. Robertson read a letter signed by John S. Hopkins of Franklin MacVeagh & Co. in which the writer said that "unless a satisfactory embargo is placed on foodstuffs this winter famine will follow."

The Grocer Speaks.

Sol Westerfield, representing the National Retail Grocers' association, asserted that with potatoes and wheat at practically the same price per bushel few potatoes should be consumed, as the wheat has the higher food value. He said that a car famine has prevented the moving of the Montana potato crop, and he agreed with Mr. Kinsey that the crop is much smaller than the latest government report states.

"The trouble is, taking it by and large," said Mr. Westerfield, "we are exporting more than we can afford to export."

Dr. Robertson recommended the following as a substitute for meat: Wheat flour, a little cornmeal, a few raisins, pepper, and suet.

"It makes excellent suet pudding and it is fully as nutritious as meat," he said.

Here's an Idea.

An elderly gentleman who gave his name as Dr. John Miller, after repeated efforts to gain the floor, finally told the committee that their ideas were all wrong.

"Eat only two meals a day and eat as much in the two as you usually do in one," he said.

K. P.'s Seek 50,000 New Members.

A campaign for 50,000 new members for the Knights of Pythias of Illinois was begun at a banquet in the Hotel Sherman last night by the Grand Lodge Representatives Association of Cook County, Knights of Pythias.

THE ALTRUISTIC PLOTTERS

Mother and Daughter Who Explain That Kidnaping of Aged Woman Was Matter of Affection.

Miss Marianne Schley   Mrs. Leona Schley

Two altruistic kidnapers and a "villain" who showed a good heart when the X-ray spotlight of publicity played on him appeared before Judge Scully yesterday in chambers and put a happy ending to events which whirled with dramatic speed about an aged and almost blind woman.

The kidnapers were Mrs. Leona Schley and her 19 year old daughter, Marianne, who live at 4257 Grand boulevard. But Mrs. Schley and her daughter explained to Judge Scully that it really isn't their steady business and they just adopted it to outwit apparent villainy persecuting helplessness.

Mrs. Schley and her lieutenant abducted Mrs. Valerie C. Phillips on Friday to prevent the service of commitment papers sworn out by her son, William Hubbard of Lake City, Minn. Mr. Hubbard came to Chicago in the belief that his mother was mentally unbalanced and sought to have her examined and committed to some asylum if his suspicions proved correct. He told of a long, hard struggle, and explained that he was only doing what he thought best.

"My mother deserted father and me when I was 9 years old," he said. "That is forty years ago. I am cashier of a bank at Lake City, and have my own family as well as my father to take care of. He is 72 years old now. I gave my mother $20 a month. I would like to have provided better for her, but it was impossible."

Judge Scully decided to leave Mrs. Phillips at the sanitarium in which Mrs. Schley and her daughter placed her at their own expense, and to have her examined on Tuesday as to her sanity.

DENOUNCES FLORISTS FOR SELLING DUNE FLOWERS.

Earl H. Reed Says Blooms Stolen by Despoilers Are Commercialized in Chicago.

Two hundred lovers of wild flowers applauded yesterday when Earl H. Reed, author and etcher, denounced florists of Chicago who place on sale wild flowers "stolen from the dunes by despoilers."

Mr. Reed told of seeing orchids and other rare flowers, found only in the dunes of Indiana, on sale in flower shops. He characterized those who take the wild flowers as "only partly emancipated from the bonds of barbarism." He appealed to the state and federal governments to stop the destruction of flowers, trees, and game in the dunes.

Prof. George B. Fuller of the department of botany of the University of Chicago said the dunes of Indiana and Michigan are wonder lands for the students of botany because of the great variety of plants.

Has Ex-Fiance Locked Up.

Sophie Hoffman of 3217 West Fifteenth street gave Morris Loeb $800 to start a mattress manufacturing business after he had promised to marry her. He obtained a license, but failed to marry her. He was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn out by the woman, charging him with operating a confidence game.

15C AN HOUR FOR THE MISSUS

AT TEACHERS' MEETING

The average housewife should be paid from 15 to 30 cents an hour, not so much for the monetary consideration as for the satisfaction of her soul, according to Miss A. L. Mariatt, director in home economics of the University of Wisconsin, who spoke yesterday at the annual meeting of the Chicago division of the Illinois State Teachers' association in the Congress hotel.

Mitigate Fear of Marriage.

"The teaching of applied economics to girls in schools will mitigate the fear of marriage on small incomes among the great mass of men and women," she added.

"There should also be practice apartments in schools so that the girls could learn the various duties in connection with furnishing and maintaining apartments. There should be cheap materials bought, so that they could learn to arrange agreeable color schemes in such apartments. They should be taught to extend the purchasing power of an income."

Ohioan Speaks.

"Democracy in the Public Schools" was the subject discussed by Herbert S. Bigelow of Cincinnati, president of the Ohio constitutional convention.

"I don't regard the army or navy as our first line of defense, but it is the teachers of this country in whose hands the minds of our future citizens are intrusted to solve the great problems of opportunity," he declared.

"The teachers' organization is one of the greatest forces in the republic and should render aid and social reconstruction. Politics can't do it, the newspapers can't do it, and it is up to the teachers to study economic conditions so that the children will have a better chance to in the outside world.

Problem for Teachers.

"In the original industrial survey in Cincinnati it was shown that a great majority of workingmen earn less than $15 a week, and the women less than $8; so it is quite obvious that the teachers have to prepare their scholars to face this condition when they get out of school.

"The teachers of this country are the most hopeful organization or force we may look forward to for assistance, not only in teaching but for improving economic and social conditions."

PROF. COX'S SON GANG BOSS.

He and Jack Turner Hold Jobs in Illinois Steel Company Mill.

When Jack Turner, son of the late Charles M. Turner, was found earning $2.90 a day on the open hearth gang of the Illinois steel mills, the discoverer failed to get the identity of Jack's boss, the bucko foreman, who was dragging down the easy money of $3.10 a day. Yesterday it was learned the gang boss is Paul A. Cox, son of Prof. Henry J. Cox of the United States weather bureau. Both boys worked up from common laborers on the gang.

CHICAGO TITLE AND TRUST GIVES SALARY BONUS

Employes to Get 10 Per Cent of Yearly Wage to Meet Living Cost.

Officials and employés of the Chicago Title and Trust company will receive as a Christmas present 10 per cent of their annual salaries instead of the usual Christmas distribution of gold coins.

This announcement was made by Harrison B. Riley, president of the company, in an address at the annual banquet of the Chicago Title and Trust Employés' Benefit association, in the Hotel La Salle last night.

"I desire to announce," he told the 535 employés present, "that because of the exceedingly high cost entering into the daily lives of our employés the usual custom of distributing gold coins will be omitted this year at Christmas time and in lieu thereof a payment will be made to each officer and employé below the rank of department manager of a lump sum equal to 10 per cent of the annual salary of such official or employé, including janitors, elevator men, office boys, and laborers, as well as those of higher position."

RIGID ECONOMY ON FOOD URGED THROUGHOUT WORLD.

Grave Situation Predicted by International Institute of Agriculture in Report.

ROME, Nov. 18.—Rigid economy throughout the world in the consumption of food in view of the deficient crops and the extraordinary requirements of the European armies is urged by the International Institute of Agriculture, which has made the most extensive report it has issued since the war began. The institute says all nations are confronted with a grave situation.

It is estimated that at least 2,300,000,000 bushels of wheat will be consumed in the year ending July 31, 1917, and that at the end of this period the world's surplus supplies of wheat will have decreased to 46,000,000 bushels.

The report says it is only on account of the fact that last year's harvests were abundant, leaving a balance of 350,000,000 bushels, that there is available sufficient wheat for the year ending with next July.

"POTATO DAY" IN CHURCH.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 18.—Tomorrow will be potato day in Wesley Methodist church, one of the most fashionable congregations in the city. Each member is expected to contribute at least one large potato. The high price of potatoes in Wisconsin is responsible for the unusual donations. Many Milwaukee families have not tasted potatoes for weeks, and those collected tomorrow will be placed in Thanksgiving baskets to be distributed among the city's needy.

BRITISH CONQUER NEW POSITIONS BEFORE BAPAUME

Official Report Says They Have Reached Edge of Town of Grandcourt.

LONDON, Nov. 19, 1 a. m.—The British yesterday made important advances both north and south of the Ancre river on the Somme front. Their gains, together with those earlier in the week, brought them to the outskirts of Grandcourt, only a few miles from Bapaume. The official report issued last night said:

> Today, despite stormy weather, we advanced our front north and south of the Ancre. Ground was gained chiefly on the south bank of the river, where we reached the outskirts of Grandcourt. In these operations of today 258 prisoners are reported as having passed through the collecting stations.
> Earlier we advanced our position northeast of Beaumont-Hamel and pushed out further north of Beaucourt. Beaumont-Hamel and Hebuterne were heavily shelled by the enemy.

The official report issued in Paris said quiet prevailed on the French front except for the repulse of one German attack south of the Somme.

German Official Report.

BERLIN, by wireless to Sayville, Nov. 18.—The official statement regarding the western front reads:

> The British artillery directed its efforts mainly against our positions on both banks of the River Ancre.
> After artillery preparation the French in the evening launched a strong attack against Sailly-Saillisel and the lines adjoining to the south. The attack broke down under our fire.
> On the front north of Verdun and in isolated sectors in the Vosges mountains artillery activity was temporarily revived.

Says British Failed.

The concentration of British artillery prior to the attack along the Ancre on Nov. 13 is held in an Overseas News agency review of the engagement given out today to indicate an attempt on the largest scale to break through the German lines.

"More than 200 batteries showered the flanked German trenches with steel," says the review. "In and about Hebuterne, farther to the west and also south of that village, the British had concentrated cannon of all calibers which were placed in dexterously constructed nests. More artillery was placed in masses east and southeast of Colincamps and between Englebelmer and Mesnil and likewise near Poseieres and Courcelette.

"Several hours of continuous, methodical, and destructive fire with shells from guns of the largest caliber and with gas grenades failed to shake the German infantry in either the sectors south of Grandcourt or that between Beburterne and the road from Serre to Sailly. At these points the German first line positions were nearly everywhere maintained. It was only in the thrust at the center that the British succeeded in crossing the first line of the Germans. The most important object of attacks, the heights of Serre, could not be taken."

"WAR NEARING A DECISION; BALKANS TO GIVE VICTORY."

German Expert Asserts That When Falkenhayn Crosses Mountains Success Will Be Assured.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—The war is approaching a decisive stage—and the decision will rest with the campaign in Transylvania and Roumania. Such is the expert military viewpoint here. As summed up today by a well informed military authority, the situation is:

"The triangular loss at Ancre does not offset the Somme battle as a whole. Viewing all the war theaters, the whole war has now reached a period of tension. The solution is drawing near. When this shall come depends upon the progress of the present fighting in the Roumanian passes.

"We are making progress there, but the mountain difficulties are greater than in Serbia. Once Gen. Falkenhayn crosses, the decision will come. How long this will take we do not know—but one must be patient and await coming developments."

AMERICAN RECRUITS FREED.

WILSON LAUDED AND BLAMED BY GERMAN PAPERS

Harden Sees President as Humanity's Champion—Tool of Britain, Others Say.

BERLIN, Nov. 17, via London, Nov. 18.—Maximilian Harden, writing in Die Zukumft, eulogizes President Wilson as a "man of high moral and spiritual rank—a man of whom we would be proud if we had him," adding, "Much that is foolish and, unfortunately, shameless has been said about Mr. Wilson, and his election is hailed as one no German may belittle."

The editorial writer, who quotes liberally from President Wilson's books to show from them his high character and ideals, says regarding the president's efforts in the direction of peace:

"This man so falsely regarded, so foolishly defamed, looms up as no other who is visible today."

Calls Wilson Clean, Talented.

Harden urges the public to burn ninety-nine one-hundreths of the "literature filled with rotten ignorance and defaming a clean, talented man, who is already experienced in governing and striving with a strong heart and an earnest will for the maintenance of a worthy peace," and then says:

"Not a wordmaker or a threatener, he has been chosen by the people of the United States for these hours of crisis on earth."

The Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung, one of the most pronounced chauvinist newspapers in Germany, ridicules President Wilson's reported peace proposals as a "general conference under the auspices of Great Britain and the United States for cheating Germany of all the fruits of this unheard of war." The paper adds:

"Even the most simple German must begin to see what we have to expect from a peace negotiated by England's pirate business manager beyond the ocean."

Tool of Britain, Charge

The Hamburger Nachrichten, which is only a shade less chauvinistic, says:

"President Wilson already has done so much for Great Britain that only one thing remains—namely: to secure such a peace as England needs, to rob Germany of all the fruits of her victories and leave her impotent and placed under a guardianship."

BRITON PRAISES WILSON AND U. S.

Editor of the London Daily News Sees America World Leader After the War.

SAVED BY NEUTRALITY.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—[Special.]—"America and the Future" is the title of another remarkable article by A. G. Gardiner, editor of the Daily News. He refers to the result of the presidential election and pays a striking tribute to the statesmanship of Woodrow Wilson and to the greatness of the United States.

"Woodrow Wilson is the president for a second term, and for four years he will be the executive head and the inspiration of the greatest single political potentiality on earth," he says. "Those who measure power by fleets and armies in being may question this description, but fleets and armies will soon materialize under the stress of necessity if the resources of which they are the expression are available.

"And of those resources the United States has a greater abundance than any country in the world.

U. S. to Be World Leader.

"When Europe emerges from the present struggle the balance of the world will have been fundamentally changed in favor of the western hemisphere and the United States will have an authority in the affairs of the world which it never had before and which, even if it had, its historic policy would not have permitted it to exercise.

"This is a fact which, as the European struggle continues, will assume increasing strength.

"It would be useless to deny that even in the popular mind there has been a certain hostility to the United States owing to its nonparticipation in the war. That is natural enough, for no belligerent ever likes a neutral.

"But that feeling is much less active than it was. There is now an increasing appreciation of the American position. The enemy knows quite well that but for the resources of the United States in the early stages of the war the allies could not have sustained the struggle. They know quite well that it was President Wilson's steadfast interpretation of strict neutrality which turned the scales against them.

Bryan Policy, Allies' Ruin.

"Had Bryan been elected as the Democratic president in 1912 and had he carried out the policy which he advocated and which President Wilson refused to adopt—the policy of stopping the supply of munitions to belligerent powers and making Americans travel only in American ships—it is hardly conceivable that the liberties of Europe could have been saved.

RUSSIANS BRING DOWN ZEPPELIN; CREW CAPTURED

Big German Airship Disabled in Pinsk Region—Fighting at Lull in Galicia.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 18.—Russian troops near Srany, southeast of Pinsk, have brought down a large Zeppelin airship. The crew of sixteen was captured.

Attacks by Austro-German forces on Russian positions in the Carpathians gained temporary success, but subsequently the Russians drove back their opponents, it was announced officially today, as follows:

> Firing is proceeding along the front. Our scouts are making reconnaissances. In the wooded Carpathians, in the region north of Shiben, the enemy is conducting attacks. At places he pressed back small Russian detachments. However, the enemy was beaten back by a counter attack and we regained our positions.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Only minor operations on the Russian front are reported by the war office in today's official statement, which reads:

> Front of Prince Leopold: On the Shara and on the Stokhod the hostile artillery was more active than on recent days. Near Vituneiz, northwest of Lutsk, a German patrol enterprise was entirely successful.

BRITISH AIRMEN ATTACK NAVAL WORKS AT OSTEND.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—An official report issued by the ministry of war tonight said:

> On the night of Nov. 16-17 one of our aerial squadrons dropped 157 shells on an enemy aviation field at Golancourt (Oise) and Griscolles (Aisne).
> Twenty-two airplanes of the British maritime aviation service set out Nov. 17 at daybreak to bombard the electricity plants and naval work shops at Ostend.
> They dropped 180 bombs, many of which reached their objectives. Another bombardment was carried out by seaplanes on the mole at Zeebrugge. All of the machines returned.

ALLIED ARMIES DRAWING CIRCLE ABOUT MONASTIR

Troops Only Five Miles from City—Enemies Continue Gains in Transylvania.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—London regards the fall of Monastir as imminent. Serbian, French, and Russian troops have the city almost enveloped. Its inner fortifications are within range of the allies' guns, and some are reported captured. French troops have reached Kavena, five miles from Monastir.

Monastir's fall is expected to have an important effect on the morale of not only the Bulgarian but the Teutonic troops now operating in the southwestern theater of the war—and a correspondingly important increase in confidence in Roumania. Bulgaria has attached great weight to holding the city and has even been able to persuade Teutonic war directors to divert reinforcements for the Teutonic-Bulgarian army defending Monastir from the ranks of Field Marshal von Mackensen, in Dobrudja.

Taking advantage of this weakening of the enemy in Dobrudja, the Russians are pressing forward and tonight's statement from Petrograd says "our troops continue to make progress to the south."

Paris Reports Successes.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The official report describing operations on the Macedonian front says:

On the left bank of the River Struma British troops repulsed a violent counter attack delivered by Bulgarians upon Barakli. East of the Cerna, Serbian troops have captured enemy trenches for a depth of 800 yards. In the bend of the river the fighting is going on to our advantage. Hill No 1,212, to the northwest of Iven, has been taken by assault by Serbian troops in spite of the resistance of the Germano-Bulgarian forces, which suffered sanguinary losses in the delivery of several fruitless counter attacks.

On the plain of Monastir, in spite of floods, our troops have made progress in the direction of Monastir and have reached the outskirts of Kanena.

Bucharest War Report.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 18.—The war office tonight issued the following statement:

In the region of Dragosiavele our troops attacked and succeeded in repulsing the enemy in the center and on our right wing, thereby making considerable progress. We captured 300 prisoners.

In the Alt and Jiul valleys fighting continues violently. We yielded a little ground in the direction of the Cerna [southern Transylvania], but the movement was unimportant.

Deny Civilians Fight.

Denial that the Roumanian population is taking part in the fighting is contained in a semi-official announcement made public here today. The statement says:

"A recent German official statement claims that the Roumanian civil population is participating in the hostilities. We offer the most energetic and formal contradiction of this assertion. The evident purpose of this German statement is to justify the measures they intend to carry out in Roumania as they did in Serbia and Belgium. Those whose airplanes are assassinating women and children in Bucharest need not go to the trouble of inventing such pretexts."

Berlin Official Report.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—The general army headquarters tonight issued the following report:

French attacks in the plain south of Monastir and against the front of Pommeranian infantry regiment No. 42 on the snow covered heights in the Cerna bend were sanguinarily repulsed. Each day there is violent fighting for the heights northeast of Chegel. One of the summits which had been captured on Nov. 15 by the Serbians was recaptured by storm.

The Roumanians made attacks in unsuccessful efforts to push back the center of the German front northeast of Campulung.

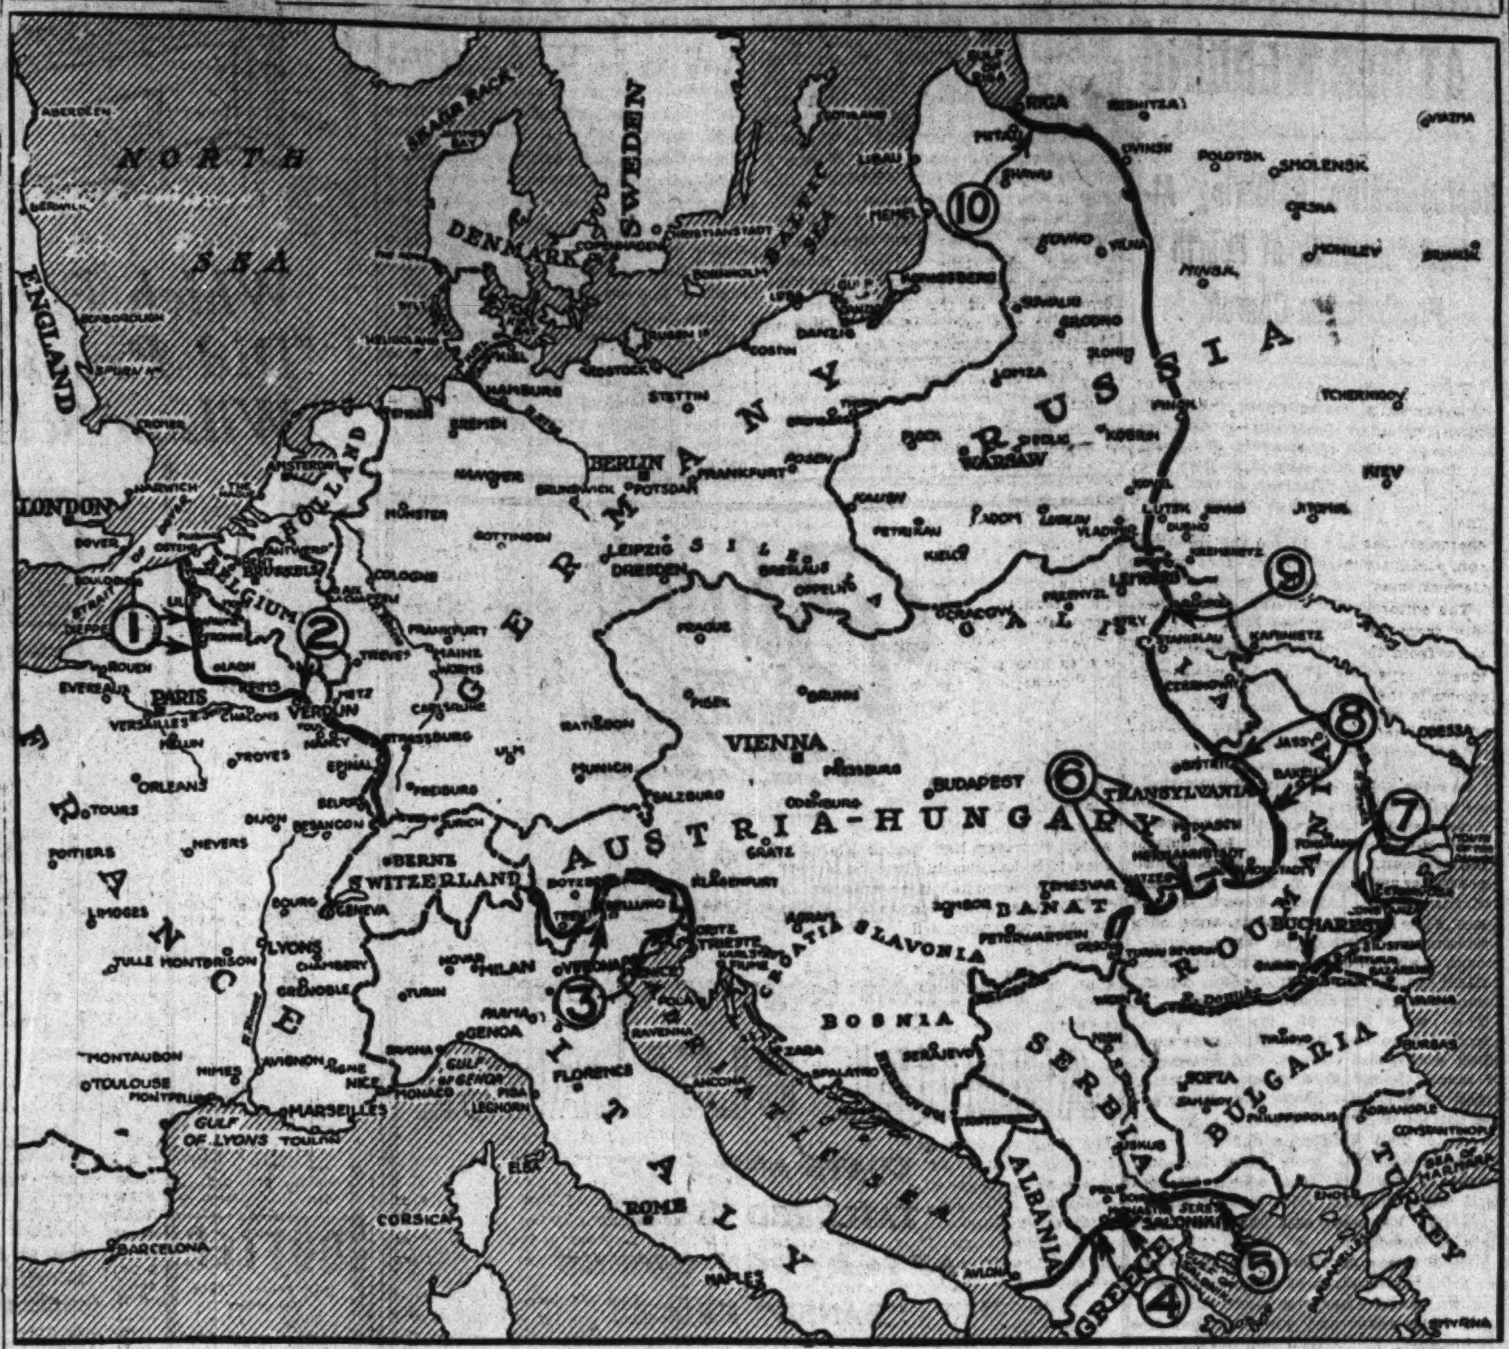
On both sides of the valleys of the rivers Alt and Jiul the attack of German and Austro-Hungarian troops progresses.

THREE MORE SUITS FILED AGAINST THE DEUTSCHLAND.

New London, Conn., Nov. 18.—Papers in three additional suits, each for $30,000, it was learned tonight, have been issued in the interests of the families of Capt. John Gurney, engineer; William A. Caton, and Cook Clarence B. Davison, three of the men lost with the Thomas A. Scott Jr., which was sunk by the German submarine Deutschland, off Race Rock light with the loss of five men.

The sailing of the Deutschland for Bremen will not be delayed by the action brought against it by the T. S. Scott company today for the loss of the tug, according to a statement tonight by Henry G. Kilken, president of the Eastern Forwarding company, American agents of the under water line.

DEVELOPMENTS ALONG EUROPEAN BATTLE FRONTS



1—The British attack by the left wing of Gen. Haig's army of the Somme was the most important development of the week on the west front. On a six mile front they carried the German positions for a depth of over a mile, taking the strongly fortified towns of Beaumont-Hamel, St. Pierre Divion, and Beaucourt. Over 6,000 prisoners were captured. Later in the week they made further advances in this sector, reaching the outskirts of Grandcourt.

As a counter offensive the Germans attacked the French lines at the southern end the Somme front, between Ablaincourt and Chaulnes, and occupied a part of the village of Pressoire. They also attacked the French north of the river above Peronne, making gains in the region of St. Pierre Vaast woods.

Desperate fighting directly before Peronne, at Saillisel and before Les boeufs, Le Sars, and Eaucourt L'Abbaye also was reported.

2—During the week heavy artillery firing was reported at Verdun, but no infantry actions were undertaken by either side.

3—Renewed activity by the Austro-Hungarians was reported on both the Isonzo and Trentino fronts. They took the offensive east of Goritz and forced the Italians out of a number of advanced positions. Weather conditions in the mountains is seriously hindering operations.

4—Important gains were reported by the entente forces along the Macedonian front. Steady advances by the French and Serbian forces toward Monastir during the week are said to have brought them within four miles of the old Macedonian capital. The Serbs are approaching from the southeast and are reported to have cleared the Cerna river bend of the enemy. They are aiming to the northeast of Monastir, so as to dominate the roads leading from the city and cut off the Bulgar-German retreat. The French, aided by the Italians, Russians, and Serbs, are advancing directly from the south and southwest.

5—Further to the east on the Doiran and Struma fronts the British reported the capture of several villages, forcing the Bulgarians to the east of Lake Tahinos and the Brook of Nihor.

6—Heavy pressure was maintained all last week by Gen. von Falkenhayn's forces along the Wallachian frontier north of Bucharest, especially in the region of Kampolung. Advances were reported south of Predeal, Rothenthurm and Vulcan passes and in the Alt and Jiul river valleys. These forces, debouching through the Transylvanian passes into the plains of Wallachia, unless checked shortly, will be able to effect a juncture and present an unbroken line in the advance against the Roumanian capital. According to latest reports, the Roumanians have been reinforced and were making desperate attacks to hurl back the Teuton invaders. Berlin claimed all these attacks were repulsed.

7—Conflicting reports of the fighting in Dobrudja were received during the week. Entente capitals claimed Gen. von Mackensen's forces were badly beaten and falling back in disorder. It was reported also that crossings of the Danube had been forced south of the Bulgar-Teuton line, but these movements were not verified. Bombardment of Rutschuk, the Bulgarian stronghold on the Danube, was reported, as was also an attack on Constanza by the Russian Black sea fleet. Apparently Von Mackensen is maintaining his position directly north of the Cernavoda-Constanza railway line across the neck of Dobrudja, though Petrograd and Bucharest continue to report him retreating and burning Roumanian towns and villages.

8—As a counter offensive against Von Falkenhayn the Russians have been attacking in the Gyergyo mountains along the Moldavia-Transylvania frontier during the last week. From all reports they have had little success further than to check the advance of the Teuton left wing. Apparently this Russian strategy of attacking on the flank has failed to check the direct thrust on Bucharest and heavy reinforcements are being rushed to the threatened front north and northwest of the Roumanian capital.

9—In Galicia, southeast of Lemberg, the Russians recaptured important positions from the Germans on the Narayuvka river. They report all counter attacks repulsed. Along the greater part of the eastern front winter conditions prevail and Berlin reported the fighting as insignificant.

10—North of Galicia along the eastern front no engagements of major importance were reported. Early in the week the Russians attempted an offensive along the Riga-Dvinsk front, which failed to develop, the Germans bringing all attacks to a standstill.

NEUTRAL NATIONS TO JOIN IN ASKING PEACE MEETING?

BERLIN, Nov. 17, via London, Nov. 18.—The movement for peace negotiations, according to reports from "the Swiss frontier" which were printed by the Koelnische Zeitung, is about to assume definite shape in the form of a joint call from various neutral governments to the belligerents asking them to send delegates to a peace conference.

The reports assert that several European neutrals are already in touch with the American government, and that various belligerents have been sounded on the proposition of a conference.

In authoritative official circles here it is stated that no facts are known upon which the Koelnische Zeitung's story could be based while it is considered not impossible that neutral governments may be considering some such step.

GERMANY PLANS EVACUATION OF BELGIUM, BELIEF

Reported Order for Deporting 300,000 Men May Be First Step, Army Men Say.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—"A possible preliminary to an evacuation of Belgium" is the interpretation of army officers tonight on the reported German plan to deport 300,000 Belgian civilians to points behind the German lines.

Officers recalled that the Russian military authorities took a similar step when after their drive into East Prussia at the beginning of the war they found themselves forced to retreat into Poland. Before the withdrawal was begun thousands of German civilians were sent to the interior of Russia, where they are now interned.

The practice of deporting native civilians of an occupied enemy territory before evacuation is a common one, it was said. It is done to prevent the civilians from independently harassing the retreating army and from aiding the pursuing enemy.

POPE INTERCEDES, REPORT.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Belgium's pleas against stripping the nation of its manhood by Germany resounded even above the din and noise of strife today. From Rome came word that Pope Benedict responding to appeals from King Albert of Belgium, had intervened with Kaiser Wilhelm and with Emperor Franz Josef of Austria.

From Amsterdam came reports of a riot at the Turcoing railway station when German military officers sought to carry out deportation orders.

According to the latter story 300 men and boys set aside for transfer to German factories rebelled and in the fighting which followed sixteen civilians were killed with two German soldiers. The same story said a score of the Belgians had escaped and fled to the border.

British Stirred by Reports.

British public opinion has seldom been more stirred than by the piteous stories which have seeped out of the little kingdom which has borne the brunt of the war's terrors, detailing families divided and homes disrupted by the "employment" orders.

Great interest is manifested here in the conference which Secretary to the American Embassy Joseph C. Grew is scheduled to have with the imperial German chancellor in Berlin on Monday. United Press dispatches this afternoon said that Grew had already made informal inquiry concerning the matter at the foreign office in response to instructions from Washington, and that on Monday he would have opportunity formally to apprise the chancellor of the American government's interest in the employment plans.

SEES GERMANS OUT OF BELGIUM

Van Heeke Says Deportations Indicate Early Retreat to Rhine.

AT UNIVERSITY CLUB.

Belgium and northern France will be evacuated by the Germans this winter or next spring, in the opinion of Prof. Albert G. Van Hecke, who spoke at the University club yesterday.

"The heavy deportations of Belgians by the German military authorities," said Prof. Van Hecke, "presages the early evacuation of the country. This, at least, is my interpretation, as it is that of many Belgians who are familiar with the situation. The reason for the deportations is that few men of military age may be left in Belgium after the German army is withdrawn. Many of my countrymen expect Belgium to be evacuated this winter. I hope so. But I feel confident the Germans will depart by next spring.

Calls Germans Whipped.

"The Germans are whipped. This summer's 'big push' of the allies has proved that. Their strongest places have been taken or destroyed. They have been pressed slowly back. They cannot stand the strain much longer. In a few months they will shorten their western lines by withdrawing from Belgium and northern France and retiring to their Rhine fortifications. Then Belgium will come back into its own as a nation.

"The Germans have deported 50,000 Belgians already. They are distributing them in their munition factories from the French frontiers to the Russian border. By these melting pot methods the Germans are trying to eliminate the Belgian nation by the absorption of its inhabitants among the German people. But they will not succeed.

"Before the war began Belgium had a population of 7,500,000. Now it has 6,500,000. Of the lost million, 200,000 are in the army fighting in northern France, 300,000 are refugees in Holland, as many more are working in England in munition factories. As soon as Belgium is freed of the German incubus it will spring back into national life and all its exiles will come home again.

Sees Allied Victory.

"I am not prepared to prophesy how long the war will last. But victory for the allies is a certainty. Despite the way it has been ground under the heel of German oppression, Belgium is united today behind its king. It would fight on to victory if it had to fight alone.

"Deportations have been conducted in two ways—by wholesale and in small groups. One day 20,000 will be sent across the border. The next day not more than 1,500 will be exiled. It is comparatively easy to keep count of the workmen sent out of the country in these large batches, but the public never learns how many Belgians are sent away in small groups. I estimate that 2,000 are being deported into Germany every day."

Prof. Van Hecke has been the delegate of the Belgian government to the refugee camps in Holland.

ADAMSON AND WILSON TO PUSH RAIL LEGISLATION

Confer Tomorrow on Congress Program—Four Bills Opposed by Employes.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special]—President Wilson will confer Monday with Representative Adamson of Georgia, author of the railroad wage increase bill, on the program of railroad legislation for the coming session of congress. Following this conference, Representative Adamson probably will go directly to the organization meeting of the Newlands investigating commissions, which begins its work Monday.

These events will mark the opening of actual work on the railroad program submitted by the president to congress last session in a special message. Of this program of six recommendations only two were passed at the last session, neither of which was objectionable to the employes.

Employes Oppose Other Measures.

There still remains on the program recommendations to which the employes seriously object and consequently the events of Monday will be the first definite moves in what is expected to result finally in almost a crisis between capital and labor.

The four things on the president's program yet to be acted on are the enlargement of the interstate commerce commission, the consideration by the commission of increased freight rates for the railroads, the Canadian plan of investigation before a strike may take place, and the giving of power to the president to operate the railroads in an emergency.

The two recommendations that are expected to meet the most serious opposition are the possible increased freight rates and the Canadian disputes plan.

Take Up Strike Prevention.

The national council of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States adjourned today after resolutions reported by the committee to the council had been accepted. These resolutions call for a referendum on the whole question of strike prevention to the members of the chamber of commerce. The directors are expected to lose no time in providing for the referendum.

The language in which the resolution asking for a referendum was phrased follows:

"To prevent interruption to transportation service, pending the settlement of disputes between employers and employes of transportation lines and to avoid any recurrence of the situation created by the recently threatened railway strike, which situation the president of the United States declared in a statement made public Aug. 18, 1916, 'must never be allowed to arise again.'"

Starts Reforms in Dairy.

Henry Weisberg, who for four years has been assistant chief of the bureau of food inspection, has taken a leave of absence for one year to assume management of the Younger Dairy company. According to Mr. Weisberg, it is the company's intention to have him put into effect the most advanced health department methods of handling dairy products.

"BOBSY" FULLER, BRIDE

Society Attends Her Wedding at Fourth Presbyterian Church.

Miss Charles B. Goodspeed

'BOBSY' FULLER CHARMS SOCIETY AT HER WEDDING

Representative Gathering Attends Nuptials at Fourth Presbyterian Church.

There was a charm about "Bobsy" Fuller's wedding yesterday to Charles B. Godspeed that made every one present understand just why it is that her beautiful name of Elizabeth Barret Fuller has been so universally shortened by her friends.

The 4:30 bells had chimed the wedding hour some minutes before the bridal party entered the center aisle of the Fourth Presbyterian church, but it was not because the bride was late.

Wait for Belated Guests.

All the wedding party stood in line and at one side, facing them, stood the bride enveloped in her filmy veil, with her father, Dr. Charles Gordon Fuller, blowing kisses at her bridesmaids and nodding brightly at the belated guests. It was for them she was waiting that they might not be disappointed.

Preceded by the ushers, who were Laurance Armour, John A. Stevenson, Leeds Mitchell, Edward S. Moore, Huntley Gilbert, William A. Fuller II., David Forgan Jr., Abram Brown, Lawrence Viles, and Noble Judah, were the bridesmaids, gowned in white charmeuse, with full skirts caught about the bottom with huge pink roses. About their throats were collars of sealskin.

They wore hats of purple velvet trimmed with one single pink rose and silver cords, and they carried bouquets of many shaded pink roses, tied with broad pink satin ribbons that hung to the bottom of their gowns.

The Bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids were Miss Isabelle McBirney Robbins, Miss Helen Hinde, Miss Alice Cudahy, Miss Gladys High, Miss Lila Leonard, and Miss Barbara Gale of Boston.

Mrs. William A. Vawter II., sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a gown made after the same fashion, with white roses and white ribbons to her bouquet. Her little 3 year old daughter, Dorothy Fuller Vawter, preceded the bride, making a cunning picture in a white dress, the full skirt caught up with blue forget-me-nots after the same fashion as the bridesmaids. She carried a basket of sweetheart rosebuds.

Watson Armour was best man.

The bridal gown was of white satin, cut quite low at the throat and made with a court train of white satin edged with silver lace. The veil was of tulle caught with a band of silver, a white orchid, and a few white buds. The bride carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Society Leaders Present.

The wedding guests included practically the entire north shore. Mrs. Fuller, mother of the bride, wore taupe chiffon and satin with a hat of moleskin and a scarf of mole. Mrs. Cyrus McCormick wore gray velvet, combined with chiffon, and a hat of gray with goura trimming. Mrs. William R. Linn was in black velvet and seal. Mrs. Thomas Hinde was in gray satin and pointed fox furs. Mrs. Austin Niblack wore brown satin with a large black hat.

Mrs. Vaughan Spaulding, Mrs. Laurance Armour, Mrs. Watson Armour, Mrs. Henry Robbins, Mrs. Leeds Mitchell, Mrs. Edward S. Moore, Mrs. Chauncey Borland, Mrs. Leroy Fuller, Mrs. George Henry High, Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy, Mrs. John A. Stevenson, Mrs. Harry G. Selfridge, Miss Violette Selfridge, Miss Ermina Carry, Miss Louise Garaghty, Miss Janet Pauling, Miss Mildred McCormick, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Miss Elizabeth McCormick, Mrs. Howard Linn, and Mrs. Mason Phelps were among those present.

MORGAN PARTNER CALLS ON WILSON; TALK 8 HOUR LAW?

Henry P. Davison Spends 45 Minutes in Conference with President—Denies Adamson Act Discussion

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—Henry P. Davison, a partner of J. P. Morgan, held a forty-five minute conference with President Wilson at the White House tonight. The engagement was made at Mr. Davison's request. Afterwards he responded to all questions by saying:

"I have nothing whatever to say about my visit to Washington."

Mr. Davison's call at the White House was linked in some quarters with a report that the Morgan interests had helped form the national industrial conference board with the purpose of organizing employers to fight the eight hour day. Mr. Davison told friends here that the story was an "absolute fabrication." To newspapermen he said he did not wish to make a formal denial because his house never commented on newspaper reports.

HARVESTER MACHINE COSTS NOT INCREASED AGAIN.

Secretary Ranney of International Says Only Advances Made Were Announced Early in Fall.

In connection with statement published concerning increased prices of farm implements and machinery, G. A. Ranney, secretary of the International Harvester company, issued the following statement:

"There has been no change in prices of Harvester company products since that announced through the regular trade channels early this fall when a revised schedule of prices, with increases ranging from 10 to 20 per cent on various machines, was given out to the trade.

"Although prices for binder twine are not announced until February or March, the present price of sisal fiber indicates the necessity for a substantial increase in the price of twine for the coming harvest.

"The organization that met in Chicago on Nov. 17 is composed of manufacturers of threshing machinery. The Harvester company does not manufacture thrashing machinery and is not a member of this organization, nor was it represented at this meeting."

RAILWAYS REPORT PROGRESS TOWARD ENDING CAR FAMINE

Coal and Refrigerator Equipment Moving Back to Home Lines—Marked Relief Expected Soon.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 18.—Reports by representatives of various carriers upon the progress being made by their lines in the movement of foreign coal and refrigerator cars back to the owning roads occupied much of the time today of the hearings in progress here in connection with the interstate commerce commission's investigation into the exchange and return of freight cars by the railroads of the country.

These reports indicated that the movement of such cars had assumed a considerable volume and the opinion was expressed by witnesses that as a result a marked relief of the coal shortage in various localities would probably be effected within the next two or three weeks.

Money Grows if rightly planted

A Yearly Income for Every Man and Woman

Would you save $10.00 monthly for a few years if you felt assured it would earn for you an income of $1,500 to $2,000 yearly? This without a stroke of work on your part. You do not have to leave your present business or employment unless you choose.

That is what a Dixie Estate planted to fancy grapefruit, oranges and avocadoes should earn after it begins bearing. Past and present prices for these fruits prove this an EXTREMELY CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE.

Picture for yourself a cozy home in balmy Florida, beneath beautiful skies, among flowering shrubs and luxuriant money-producing fruit trees. SUCH IS A DIXIE ESTATE, which awaits you whenever your inclination draws you to it.

SAVE NOW—SMILE LATER

We expect to plant at least 1,000 of these Dixie Estates this year and bring them into bearing for their fortunate owners. Will you be one? Think of this great and unparalleled opportunity ! ! !

A Few Dollars Saved Monthly Will Secure for You a Dixie Estate

You are not paying out or spending this money but saving and investing it in a safe, money-making property—a highly developed fruit grove which, according to statistics, should within a few years bring you a substantial income. Think what this really means to you—figure it out for yourself.

A Dixie Estate Will Insure Your Future

HERE IS THE ONE INVESTMENT which must appeal to every man and woman. Whether you are drudging along for a mere living wage—whether you are a merchant or farmer—or whether you have an independent income—you cannot afford to miss this chance to own a Dixie Estate.

Citrus fruit and avocado trees are long lived. This is not a temporary investment, but one which should bring a permanent income and continue to increase in value yearly. Compare this with any investment you have ever heard of—you will have to admit a similar offer has never before been made.

YOU ARE PLANTING MONEY RIGHTLY WHEN YOU INVEST IN DIXIE ESTATES.

LOCATION—The best in all Florida, in the vicinity of Tampa—population, including suburbs, 70,000, growing so rapidly that it is destined to become the Los Angeles of the South. Dixie Estates will be near paved boulevards, railroad stations, schools and churches.

THE SOIL is as good as any of the best fruit land in all Florida. You could not buy better land for fruit growing no matter how much you paid for it.

THE CLIMATIC CONDITIONS are ideal for fruit growing. A more health-giving, charming climate could not be desired.

THE TREES are the very finest obtainable—budded, pedigreed stock, grown by experts. Owning extensive nurseries and having years of experience developing Florida lands enable us to develop these Dixie Estates in the most approved up-to-date manner.

Fancy oranges and grapefruit are well known money producers, when brought into bearing by expert, scientific methods.

The avocado (commonly called alligator pear) is known as the aristocrat of fruits. The supply is so limited that in northern cities only the rich can afford to pay the extravagant price it sells for. In December, 1915, avocadoes sold in Chicago at the almost unbelievable price of $3.00 to $4.00 each. It is no doubt the highest priced fruit known.

NORTH TAMPA LAND CO.
Room 804, 6 N. Michigan Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

ONE SINGLE AVOCADO TREE HAS PRODUCED $1,500 IN FRUIT ANNUALLY. When you realize what a wonderful fruit the avocado is you will understand why we claim that in Dixie Estates (which will contain 20% avocado, 40% grapefruit and 40% orange trees, you are offered a heretofore unheard of opportunity to derive a splendid YEARLY INCOME FOR A SMALL INVESTMENT. The proof is what you want ! ! ! We have it and will gladly send it to you FREE.

YOUR DIXIE ESTATE receives expert and scientific care and attention for three years. A grove manager then takes charge if you do not wish to look after it personally. He will care for your Dixie Estate—its development and marketing of fruit—indefinitely for a percentage of the profits. You can receive the benefits of this truly marvelous proposition even if you never intend to live in Florida.

Every one of the several hundred thousand readers of this paper who mails us the coupon below will want a Dixie Estate after reading our illustrated booklet giving detailed information—therefore act at once and be certain of obtaining one of the first locations.

MARMON 34

Closed Cars that Weigh Less than Touring Cars

Bodies by "Kimball," "Holbrook," "Thompson," and "New Haven Carriage Co."

MARMON Closed Body models entirely remove the objection of excess weight, cumbersome and top-heavy, which has heretofore restricted the popularity of closed cars for year 'round use. Here now is a Closed Motor-coach which, through scientific construction and extensive use of aluminum, weighs even less than any touring car of the Luxury class.

In fuel and tire economy it brings you the advantages of a touring car, plus all the attractions of the closed type selected—Limousine, Landaulet, Town Car, or Convertible Sedan.

With a chassis built close to the ground, a wheel base of 136 inches, low center of gravity and perfect balance of weight above and below the springs, the Marmon 34 holds the road, does not sway, and resists skidding far more effectually than any other car we know.

The nation's most gifted coach builders, given the right foundation, were able to design these Marmon Closed Bodies, long and low, without straining for effect or curtailing the spaciousness of the interior.

Please feel free to arrange an appointment for demonstration. Prompt deliveries can be made.

SPRING STYLES WILL BE SEVERE, TAILORED TYPE

National Garment Manufacturers Outline Lines of New Suits and Coats.

The style committee of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' association, which has been in session in the Hotel La Salle, yesterday announced its recommendations for spring styles.

"It must be emphasized that suits for the spring season will represent a radical reaction against the elaborate, betrimmed suit styles which have been in vogue for the last few years," says the report. "The coming season promises well because the new styles are different and simpler—more suited to the requirements and desires of American women.

Three General Types

"Suits will be of three general types, each suited to the particular needs of the purchaser. The three types are:

"The simple tailored suits that are always favored by the truly fastidious and aristocratic clientele, whose wardrobe consists of an appropriate garment for each occasion. These suits will naturally be new in cut, conforming to the straight line tendency of the 1917 silhouette.

"Straight line suits made with variations of plaits and gatherings, based on modifications of the English gentleman's outing costume, the fullness of the jacket, whether represented by gatherings or by plaits, being held at the waist line by belts, partial belts, and sashes.

"The sport or recreation suit, suitable for outdoor use in sport or recreation. These suits will be increasingly in demand the coming season and will be distinguished by a wide variety of bright and cheery colors in suitable fabrics.

Length of Jackets.

"The jackets will range in length from wrist length to finger tip length, the tendency in the sport type of garment being from finger tip to a point a few inches longer.

"The skirts will be somewhat longer, just covering the shoetops, with less fullness than in preceding seasons. The straight lines that will characterize the season are exemplified in the skirts by the fullness hanging straight from the belt, either gathered or plaited, so as to produce straight hanging lines.

"All suits will have a marked tendency towards brighter and more cheerful effects. Beiges, tans, rookie, heathers, grays, and blues will all be favorably received, the darker suits being brightened by touches of color to make them conform to the cheeriness of the season.

"The sport suits, as well as coats, will both come in a veritable riot of colors, for they are especially designed to stand out in brightness and in cheer against the green of the golf course and the tan of the field.

Two Types of Coat.

"There will be two distinct types of coats for the coming season, with a third type occupying a place not quite so prominent as the first two. These types are:

"The motor coat, ranging in length from a point below the knee to one a few inches above the bottom of the skirt, with large collars convertible so as to button at the neck or open in a graceful, pleasing fashion. This type will be both loose hanging and belted, with a great variety of belts and partial belts.

"The sport coat, ranging from a point a little beyond the finger tips to one approximately knee length, designed on straight lines, with belted effects, set in sleeves, as well as sloping shoulders and large collars.

"The third variety is a street or top coat, a trifle longer than knee length, to be used for street or afternoon wear, designed on lines of fullness and straightness."

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS NOW CLAIM CONTROL OF HOUSE.

Late Returns from North Carolina and Michigan May Dash Republicans' Hopes of Power.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—With the information that the election officers of the Tenth North Carolina district had counted a majority for Weaver, Democrat, over Britt, Republican, making a full delegation of ten Democrats from that state, and the further claims of the Democrats that Representative Beakes, Democrat, of the Second district of Michigan, had a majority over his Republican opponent on the face of the returns as developed by the official count, the Democrats were today making claims on the house of representatives.

The figures as they finally appear on the face of these claims are 215 Republicans and 214 Democrats, with six independents holding the balance of power.

Another disquieting report that has reached the Republican managers is that Martin, protectionist, in Louisiana, will act with the Democrats on the organization.

At this time neither party feels entirely safe as to whether the next house organization will be Democratic or Republican.

NIGHT SESSION ON MEXICO HELD AT WHITE HOUSE

President Spends Three Hours in Conference, but Nothing Is Given Out.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—President Wilson conferred for more than three hours tonight on the Mexican situation with Secretary of the Interior Lane, Secretary of State Lansing, and Secretary of War Baker.

There had been reports that the conference would mark the end of the seemingly fruitless session of the American-Mexican joint commission, in Atlantic City. However, no announcement was made following the president's conference. Secretaries Lansing and Baker referred all inquiries to Mr. Lane who said there was nothing to be given out.

Asked if there had been a change in the national policy as a result of the conference, Secretary Lane replied in the negative.

Still Hope for Agreement.

In reply to a question as to whether the three American members of the joint commission expected to reach an agreement with the Mexican commissioners Mr. Lane said:

"O my, yes."

Secretary Lane took to the White House with him a thick bundle of papers understood to contain a summary of the work of the conference to date. Every phase of the Mexican problem as developed in the meetings of the joint commission was discussed at tonight's conference.

Mr. Lane appeared to be in a genial and hopeful frame of mind when he left the White House. If at all discouraged over the outlook for a settlement satisfactory to both governments he did not betray the slightest sign of it. He said the conferences would be resumed Monday morning in Atlantic City.

Parleys Soon May End.

The expectation here is that the work of the joint commission soon will end. Secretary Lane is believed to have laid before the president and his two cabinet associates a tentative plan for the settlement of border and other differences.

As a result of tonight's discussion of the Mexican situation the president knows exactly how far Dr. Luis Cabrera and his two Mexican associates are willing to go and Secretary Lane left the White House with a full understanding of the terms on which President Wilson is prepared to accept a settlement of existing differences.

Mr. Lane said he did not expect to have a further conference with President Wilson. He will leave for Atlantic City tomorrow afternoon.

Police Transfer Order.

Senior Detective Sergts. James Mullen and Edward W. Marpool, eight detective sergeants, and seventeen patrolmen were shifted in general order No. 181 issued by Chief Healey yesterday.

CLASS FEELING WILSON TARGET

'JUSTICE WITH HEART.'

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—President Wilson told a delegation from the American Federation of Labor late today that all class feeling in America should be wiped out by the establishment of a "justice with a heart in it." He declared that no one who fails to work for this end is qualified to call himself a true American.

The delegation comprised the membership of the federation's annual convention, which has been meeting in Baltimore. Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, acted as their spokesman, declaring laboring people had come to recognize that Mr. Wilson stands for justice, freedom, and righteousness.

"We have taken joy in upholding your hands in your great work," Mr. Gompers said.

Gratified by Labor's Visit.

"I need not say that, coming to me as you do on such an errand, I am deeply gratified and greatly cheered," the president replied. "It would be impossible for me to say off hand just what thoughts are stirred in me by what Mr. Gompers has said to me as your spokesman, but perhaps the simplest thing I can say is, after all, the meat of the whole matter.

"What I have tried to do is to get rid of any class division in this country, but also of any class consciousness and feeling. The worst thing that could happen to America would be that she should be divided into groups and camps in which there were men and women who thought that they were at odds with one another, that the spirit of America was not expressed except in them, and that possibilities of antagonism were the only things that we had to look forward to.

Would Blot Out Class Lines.

"As Mr. Gompers said, achievement is a comparatively small matter, but the spirit in which things are done is the essence of the whole thing, and what I am striving for, and what I hope you are striving for, is to blot out all the lines of division in America and create a unity of spirit and of purpose founded upon this: the consciousness that we are all men and women of the same sort and that if we do not understand each other we are not true Americans.

"If we cannot enter into each other's thoughts, if we cannot comprehend each other's interests, if we cannot serve each other's essential welfare, then we have not yet qualified as representatives of the American spirit.

Rifts Alarm America.

"Nothing alarms America so much as rifts, divisions, the drifting apart of elements among her people, and the thing we ought all to strive for is to close up every rift, and the only way to do it, so far as I can see, is to establish justice not only but justice with a heart in it, justice with a pulse in it, justice with sympathy in it.

"Justice can be cold and forbidding or it can be warm and welcome, and the latter is the only kind of justice that Americans ought to desire. I do not believe I am deceiving myself when I say that I think this spirit is growing in America. I pray God it may continue to grow, and all I have to say is to exhort every one whom my voice reaches here or elsewhere to come into this common movement of humanity."

Baldwin Manualo

The Player-Piano that is all but human

Matter-of-fact father who never has been accused of possessing musical talent, musical mother who gave up her practice because of family cares, fun-loving youngsters who rebel at taking lessons, and dear old grandparents who think they are past the age for musical activity—each and everyone of them can enjoy—not the temporary novelty of operating a mechanical player-piano—but the soul-satisfaction of personally playing a musical instrument from the day the Manualo enters your home.

Everybody in your family was born to play the Manualo in the same sense that the virtuoso was born to play the piano. This is why—

1. Everybody has musical feeling.
2. When operating a player-piano everybody tries to put his or her musical feeling into the music through the pedals.
3. The Manualo is controlled from the pedals, therefore directly by the musical feeling of the performer.

New guaranteed Player-Pianos from $365.00 to $1800.00.

Scholle's Good Furniture

Scholle Pillow Davenport

Do you realize that making good upholstered furniture is an art requiring great skill and a thorough understanding of the tremendous strain to which such furniture is subjected?

It is no simple thing to create the soft elasticity of luxurious furniture and at the same time to give it the strength to withstand, for generations, the weight of hundreds of pounds more or less violently thrown upon it.

These are some of the reasons for shunning cheap upholstered furniture; it can't last; and you can't tell about the inside by merely looking at the outside.

Not to prove our statements about our upholstered furniture, but to give you an opportunity to see the building of the finest and most durable upholstered furniture so that you may know what to demand, we invite you to inspect our upholstery department on the 7th floor of our store. It's an educational opportunity.

Rugs

Just in, a beautiful lot of new domestic rugs of the best quality made anywhere. A good assortment and prices lower than after Dec. 1st when a 10% advance in price goes into effect.

You will appreciate the oriental rug situation when we tell you that wholesale houses are buying at retail and adding their profits, after which they again offer them to the retail trade. We've been approached on this very thing. We'd rather sell to you.

VAR'S BURDEN ON BACKS OF GERMAN POOR

ood Limited and Trade at a Standstill, but Militarism Thrives.

ARTICLE II.

BY MADELEINE G. DOTY.

[Author of "Society's Misfits."]

I awake to find myself in Germany. ith quivering excitement I spring rom bed and creep to the window. Beeath lies an empty courtyard, quiet, till, no sign of life. I press the electric utton and order breakfast. A pale, orried little man arrives with a tray.

There is the same undrinkable coffee the night before, a tiny drop of blue, atery milk in a doll's pitcher no bigger an my thumb, no sugar, some black, ur, uneatable bread, no butter, and a nall saucer of marmalade.

Irritation seizes me. How can I spend weeks in Germany without proper food? I remember my box of American crackers and the Danish butter and sausage reposing in the hotel refrigerator. But I have the decency not to send for them. I have at most some weeks of discomfrt, the German people months of paent suffering.

Food Saved for Friend.

The Danish food shall go to a German end. By the time I am dressed my aveling companion, Number 50, has ined me. We decide to make a tour the city. It is a gray, sunless day. he weather increases the gloom of the y. Only a few persons are upon the eet; old people or very young peoand tiny children.

But occasionally we pass a silent, dected group lined up before a meat shop. is a meat day. Working women with bies in their arms, or tiny children rrying baskets, or old decrepit men d women clutching a government meat rd patiently wait their turn. The op door flies open, three or four are lmitted and a miserable half pound of eat portioned out.

Except for these food purchases the y seems actionless. We enter a book op and ask for a map. But to sell a n of Hamburg is verboten. So many ings are verboten. Perhaps that acunts for the inactivity. Store windows esent a fine display, but inside the op is silent and empty.

Little Life in City.

Even in the business section there is tle life. We find a small boat that kes a three hours' trip about the har, and take it. The great wharves peopleless, no hurrying men, no inging derricks, no smoke issuing om smokestacks or funnels.

In the docks lie big and little boats, sty, paintless, deserted. The great perator, like a towering monster, comands the center.

The paint is peeling from its sides. Its ass is dull; some dirty stained blans flap on an upper deck. Like a thing ve it seems stricken with plague. Its oud title "Imperator" is gone and in place is the word "Cap Polonia." cept for our tug and two others, no sels move upon the water. There are no whistles, no chug-chug and swish of passing boats, no vibrant, thrilling life.

Hamburg is a city of sleepers. Its big hotels, its many stores, its impressive buildings stretch out endlessly, but within all is still. All that modern industry and the ingenuity of man can achieve has here been flung upon the land and then the force that created has vanished, leaving these great monuments to rot, to rust and to crumble. The tragedy of unused treasures is as horrible as rows of dead. A city seems visibly dying.

Faint from want of food we leave the boat to seek a restaurant. We find one directly opposite the Hamburg-American docks, on the hillside. We seat ourselves on the outdoor porch which commands the harbor. As we do so we notice a long line of women and children filing into the big Hamburg-American buildings. Each bears a pail. When they emerge it is with steaming contents.

Docks Become Kitchens.

The docks have been turned into big feeding kitchens. When the women leave a whistle blows. Then from every direction come old men and young boys. They come running, hopping, jumping, each striving to be first, driven by hunger, or by fear that the last may have nothing. The police keep them in order. They file into the big building to eat.

The meals furnished us is scanty, but after this scene it seems beautiful. There is soup, fish, meat, vegetables, fruit and cheese. The bread and meat are to be had only with cards. Like the day before, the food is watery and tasteless. It is such food as is served in institutions.

Prison diet does not promote health or strength. One can live on it, but patriotism and temper suffer. I discover there are two kinds of bread. One a small roll, its substance only slightly dark. This is eatable and quite different from the ordinary black bread. Six of these small rolls can be had on a daily bread card. This bread with a piece of Swiss cheese do much to restore me to cheerfulness.

Visit Bismarck Statue.

When we have finished, No. 50 suggests a trip to the Bismarck monument [Denkmal]. She is an ardent admirer of Bismarck and all German officials. It is only a short walk to the Denkmal. It is situated on a small hill, and the gigantic figure is further elevated by a high pedestal, until it towers over the city.

There is something sinister in the figure. It is clad in armor and leans on a gigantic sword. It seems to say, "No force in the world shall deter me; I conquer all." Yet there is weakness behind the strength. As a work of art it is a failure.

But my companion is enthralled. This massive greatness of arrangement means to her strength.

"Isn't it wonderful!" she breathes. "If only he were alive, how different it would be. Germany could conquer all."

The words have hardly left her lips when we hear voices. A crowd of children is gathering just below.

There is no passing populace to swell the throng. We approach and see in the center of the crowd of children a woman crouched upon a bench. She is dirty, ragged, and dark in coloring. She may be Armenian or Italian.

On the ground at her feet is a baby just big enough to walk. It also is dirty and possesses only one ragged garment. The mother sits listless, gazing at her child. It is evident she is soon to be a mother again. There is great chattering among the children. I turn to my companion for explanation.

"The woman wants to sell her child. She says she hasn't anything to eat. She isn't a German mother. Of course no German mother would do such a thing. You can see she isn't good. She is going to have another baby."

A school child gives the toddling youngster some cherries. She eats them greedily. My hand goes to my pocketbook, but my companion pulls me away. If I bought the baby, what could I do with her on a trip through Germany?

Military Class Flourishes.

Then my eye rests on the Bismarck Denkmal. I gaze at that massive, methodical, solid war god at whose feet this human tragedy is being enacted. Rage seizes me and a brilliant and crazy idea comes. Why not blow up the military Denkmals as a way of freeing Germany from the war bug?

The allies are stupidly making women and children suffer while the military class and militarism flourish. What is wanted is a bomb for each Bismarckian and royal Denkmal.

From the monument we go to the residential quarter. We try to get a taxi, but there is none. I saw just three during that day. It has become tea time. After a short walk we enter a popular café. Here at last is a large group of people. There are many well dressed women, retired officers or officers home on leave, and some slightly wounded soldiers.

The tables in the big building or scattered about on the sidewalk are all occupied. A band is playing gay music. On the surface all looks well. But a line of Whitman flashes through my mind:

"Smartly attired, countenance smiling, form upright, death under the breastbones, hell under the skull bones."

There is no chatter, no laughter. The faces are lined with sadness. Except among the women there is no youth. All are shrunken, listless, distraught. Coffee "ersatz" [coffee mixed with a substitute] and tea "ersatz" is being served. There is no milk and no sugar. The few cakes are made of unknown substance. I try one, but cannot swallow it. Only the music is cheerful. There is a revival of band playing in Germany. It is needed to hide the lack of laughter and talk.

Life Is Mere Existence.

There are only two topics of conversation—war and food shortage. That is the whole of life. There is little business, no trade, no reforms, no scientific discoveries, no creative work to discus. Life has become mere existence—a prison existence. Mind and bodies are shrinking from a shortage of intellectual and physical nourishment.

This first day in Germany is the worst. Fresh from war-free countries the impression is vivid. After a little I become adjusted. All who live in Germany get adjusted.

The changes have come gradually. One month sugar stops. When this is an old story then one must learn to do without milk. Herr Smyth falls one week and Herr Bauer weeks later. This slow decline blinds Germany to what is really occurring. But the total, seen by a stranger, is appalling.

Bread Rescued from Dirt.

Across the street from the café is a little circular space with benches. On a bench is seated a tragic, well dressed mother in deep mourning. Her child plays beside her, innocently happy.

He climbs up and down and finally knocks a paper bag from the bench. A roll tumbles into the dust and rolls under the bench, covering itself with dirt. The mother picks it up, carefully brushes it, gives it to the child, who eats eagerly. Everywhere are similar pathetic incidents.

My spirits sink lower and lower. "Look here," I say firmly to my companion. "I've got to have a square meal. We are going to the best and most expensive hotel in town."

That evening we dine at the Atlantic and have a meal that is satisfying. By a skillful use of wine, salt, and some stray scraps of fat, the table d'hote dinner is equal to that of a second rate American hotel. The slice of meat served is no bigger than my hand, brown and juiceless, but the soup, fish, vegetables, and dessert would pass muster anywhere.

It seems cruel to eat of Germany's best, but henceforth I decided to live at the most expensive hotels.

That night a picture flashes before me. It is the vision of a big unoccupied building. In large black letters upon its front is the inscription: "English Reform Church," and in its gaping windows are plastered, printed signs reading: "Zu vermieten" (to rent). No wonder the Deity's buildings are to rent. The spirit of love must have difficulty finding any place to rest these days.

Starts Trip to Berlin.

The next morning my companion and I separate. She starts for Switzerland and I for Berlin. My inability to speak German is disconcerting. I manage to get on the train, but in the dining car I am helpless. I content myself with tea, bread, and cheese, the only words I know.

In the compartment with me is an attractive young woman and her husband. They offer me magazines and papers. I summon up courage to say, "Ich kann nicht Deutch sprechen," and show them my credentials. The young woman is immediately interested. She speaks to me in excellent English.

In May, 1915, I spent ten days in Berlin. Then English could not be spoken with comfort. Flushed faces and angry looks were the result. Today English is tolerated. Occasionally eyes follow me questioningly; the official class resents it, but the people are always friendly.

Hate for America Dying.

A year ago there was bitter hatred of America. "American bullets" were flung in one's face everywhere. Today the average person is pathetically eager to be friendly. Slowly the people are awakening. For months the newspapers have fed them on the triumphs of Germany and the perfidy of other nations. But these stories of glorious German victories have resulted in what? A lean and barren country, undernourishment, death, the hatred of other nations. The people begin to doubt their leaders.

To call these people "barbars" is an outrage. They are like ourselves, just folks kindly and generous, deceived and brow beaten by a ruthless military group.

The young woman in the railway carriage belongs to the well to do bourgeois. She is eager to talk. "Why," she asks, "does the world think we're beaten when we have soldiers in Belgium and France?" So often this question is asked.

Boasts Things of Past.

Boasting no longer exists. Instead comes the plaintive query: "Why are we beaten and why must we suffer?"

We gaze out of the window as the train speeds on. We pass great stretches of desolate, barren, juiceless land. It is sandy and difficult to cultivate. It is the worst portion of Germany. A tear is in my companion's eye.

"We have got to have food," she avers, and then a moment later: "O, why can't we have peace?"

It is early afternoon when we reach Berlin. I leave the train slowly. When I reach the station entrance the taxis and carriages are all taken. An aged porter with a push cart volunteers to conduct me to the Adlon. It is Sunday. I follow the push cart through the silent streets, but as we pass the Thiergarten a great throng of people is visible. They flow in and out about the Hindenburg Denkmal. That figure is made of wood and covered with nails. You pay a small sum and hammer in a nail. In this manner patriotism and Hindenburg devotion is inculcated and the government gets the money.

If ever there were a systematic smashing of Denkmals it would create a busy day for Berlin. There are so many of them. The Thiergarten strasse is lined with ugly monstrosities of royalty. Many figures are portraits of English nobility who intermarried with Germans. Evidently whatever comes to Germany becomes German, for all are decorated with wreaths and flowers.

But the Sunday crowd that moves about the Thiergarten is not happy. As in Hamburg and elsewhere, the men are old or young, except for the sprinkling of lean, pale, nerve racked soldiers.

So on the surface there is bustle and action; life somewhat resembles normal. But it is a queer, limited, down at the heel activity. People are upon the streets, but the stores are nearly empty. There is a shortage of things to buy. The rich still purchase, but cheap things are only to be had with government cards.

That is the tragedy of Germany—the sore spot that festers. The pinch has come, and the rich protect themselves at the expense of the poor.

It is marvelous with what ingenuity the big hotels conceal deficiencies. That is why visitors and reporters fail to see the underlying truth.

Duck is served the night of my arrival. The table d'hôte dinner is $1.75. I eat every scrap. It is not enough for a hungry man, but for me it is satisfying. As I rise from the table I say to the waiter, "That is as good a dinner as I ever ate." He smiles broadly, greatly pleased.

But I go to bed tormented by the lean and shrunken people I have seen. Is it not foolish to starve out Germany? This procedure does not hurt the governing classes and the rich. They will not suffer until the rest of Germany is dead.

Starvation kills off the poor but leaves the militarists intact. This is not the way to crush militarism. It cannot be done by pressure from the outside. Regeneration always comes from within. Revolution or evolution, not smashing, is what is needed.

GIFT OF $3,200 YEARLY TO SPUR ART ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan Make Endowment to Aid All Classes.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan announced yesterday through the Art institute the first endowment fund of its kind in the country, designed to encourage American artists to their best efforts.

Mr. Logan is vice president of the Art institute. George W. Eggers, acting director of the Art institute, made the formal announcement of the fund and its purpose. The amount of the fund was not named, but it produces $3,200 a year, which will sustain a series of annual awards of cash, in addition to customary medals. These awards will be made at the various annual exhibitions of the Art institute.

How Money Is to Be Used.

The conditions under which the fund is to be used are so flexible that almost any kind of real artistic effort can be rewarded by the directors. The announcement says that the money is to be used in these ways:

A—For the award of a medal, carrying with it, either for purchase or as a gift, $1,500, for a painting or piece of sculpture executed by an American and exhibited at the annual exhibition of American oil paintings and sculptures at the Art institute of Chicago, provided such painting or piece of sculpture never before had received an award or prize.

B—For the award of a medal, carrying with it, either for purchase or as a gift, $500, for a painting or a piece of sculpture executed by a resident of Cook county and shown at the annual exhibition of works by artists of Chicago and vicinity at the Art institute.

C—For the award of a medal, carrying with it, either for purchase or as a gift, $200, for a painting or piece of sculpture executed by a resident of Cook county and shown at the annual exhibition of works by artists of Chicago and vicinity.

D—An award of a medal, carrying with it $75, for an etching made by an American; and another award of a medal, carrying with it $25, for an etching made by an American.

E—Awards of medals, carrying with them sums amounting to $900, either for purchase or as a gift, for works of industrial arts (arts and crafts).

Puts Art Institute to Fore.

"The placing of these awards in the hands of the Art institute for annual distribution," the announcement says, "puts this institution in the foremost position of all American agencies in the systematic endeavor to encourage production in the fields of the fine and applied arts. No other institution in this country at the present time offers prizes equal in total value or in breadth of distribution to these.

"The awards, which are to be known as the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medals, will be given without emphasis of rank. There is no 'first,' 'second,' or 'third' prize. There is to be no distinction of 'gold,' 'silver,' or 'bronze' medals. The money gifts which accompany the prizes will be the sole mark of difference among them. The terms of the gift do not even require that the awards be given for the 'best' work, but rather for work of high merit, which is worthy of encouragement.

"In this way the series of awards will have the greatest practical effect upon the economics of the art situation. It may be said that the entire series of Logan medals is unique in the art world because of the breadth and liberality of the conditions under which they are to be awarded."

ITALIAN SOPRANO SCORES BIG SUCCESS.

Amelita Galli-Curci

GALLI-CURCI HAS THRILLING DEBUT AT AUDITORIUM

Italian Songbird Is Cheered Wildly After First Appearance in America.

Dr. Donaghey, the scrutator of sweet sounds for this newspaper, came in late last night in high excitement and persuaded the editors of The Tribune that the integrity of this issue hung largely upon the insertion of a piece about Amelita Galli-Curci. He wrote the piece, which is subjoined:

Yesterday's matinée audience in the Auditorium gathered for contemplation of a routine performance of "Rigoletto." It was a calm, suave, sophisticated gathering, which, as to most of its units, knew all about Marcella Sembrich, Luisa Tetrazzini, and other coloratura celebrities who have, upon occasion, taken this opera away from the singer of the title part.

When the curtain fell on the second act, the calm, suave, sophisticated gathering rose in its seats and cheered and shouted and screamed its delight with Mme. Galli-Curci, the Gilda of the afternoon. Nothing like her had been heard, the audience individually and as a body asseverated, in the six years in which Chicago has had an opera company named for it.

Mr. Campanini, who had rather casually arranged with Mme. Galli-Curci for two performances—yesterday's and a "Lucia" next Tuesday night—hunted round till he found the singer's husband, through whom she was immediately placed under contract for the remaining nine weeks of the season.

From which piece by Dr. Donaghey it may be gathered that Amelita was something in the nature of a soprano conflagration. So gathering, it seems well to print a picture of her.

Seumas MacManus to Speak.

Seumas MacManus, Irish poet and litterateur and one of the originators of the Sinn Fein movement which culminated in the recent Dublin revolt, will be in Chicago Thursday night to give a lecture in the Clark theater, 4538 North Clark street, for the benefit of Our Lady of Lourdes church. His subject will be "A Merry Ramble 'Round Ireland." Mr. MacManus is now giving a series of twelve lectures at Ann Arbor university.

MISS VITTUM AND MRS. BASS OUGHT TO SEE THIS SHOW.

Men Will Take Their Parts in Suffrage Burlesque at "Society Circus" in Woodlawn.

"Why Women Should Have the Ballot" is the subject of a burlesque dialogue on the program of the "society circus," to be given next Thursday and Friday evenings by the Woodlawn Business Men's association at the Woodlawn Masonic temple, University avenue and East Sixty-fourth street.

Miss Harriet E. Vittum and Mrs. George Bass, rival leaders in the recent campaign, will be impersonated by John N. Kimball and John Hayes, dressed in garments characteristic of the originals of the "parts." The debate will be decided by the audience.

One of the favorite performers of the show will be little Chin Chin, weighing something less than a ton, who will give all her pet tricks for the circus-goers. Chin Chin is said to be the smallest baby elephant in the world.

A circus parade through Woodlawn district Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings will advertise the show. George H. Doty is president of the association and George W. Lyons is impresario and circus trainer and chairman of entertainment, all in one.

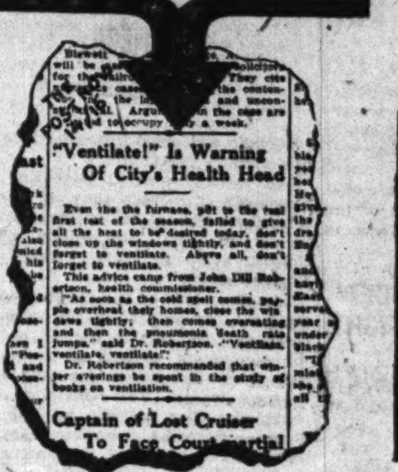
FRESH AIR

ADVICE — DEVICE



"Ventilate!" Is Warning Of City's Health Head

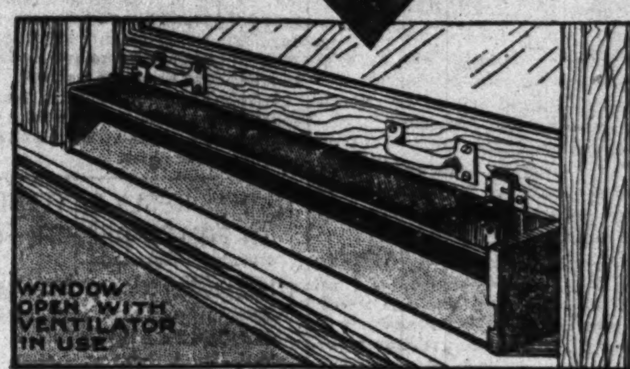
Even tho the furnace, put to the real first test of the season, failed to give all the heat to be desired today, don't close up the windows tightly, and don't forget to ventilate. Above all, don't forget to ventilate.

This advice came from John Dill Robertson, health commissioner.

"As soon as the cold spell comes, people overheat their homes, close the windows tightly; then comes overeating and then the pneumonia death rate jumps," said Dr. Robertson. "Ventilate, ventilate, ventilate!"

Dr. Robertson recommended that winter evenings be spent in the study of books on ventilation.

Captain of Lost Cruiser To Face Court-martial



WINDOW OPEN WITH VENTILATOR IN USE

Any physician, every physician, will advise you to breathe FRESH AIR CONSTANTLY, day and night, to avoid disease, but they don't tell you HOW.

All physicians tell you to keep your windows open, but they don't tell you HOW!
What they say of the necessity of fresh air is as true as the Multiplication Table, but for the ordinary family it is mere IMPRACTICABLE THEORY.

Open windows in winter mean blasting drafts, laden with misery, discomfort, chills, colds, rheumatism. Open windows mean draperies and rugs ruined by snow. For people in first floor apartments, they mean danger from burglars.

BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR is the marvelous invention of Dr. Milton H. Berry, which makes the THEORY of Doctor Robertson, Doctor Evans, and other health experts PRACTICAL. Breathing FRESH AIR is as simple as breathing, if your home or office is equipped with the BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR.

There is no other practical, successful window ventilator on the market, although thousands of devices have been patented. Only the BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR has withstood the severe test of years of actual use.

Only the BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR is collapsible—opening and closing with the window—detachable from the window—not interfering in any way with the operation of the window.

It is the only window ventilator that prevents drafts, screens the air, excludes rain, snow, and dirt.

It is the only window ventilator approved by the National Board of Underwriters, for use on fireproof windows.

Indestructible: Made of 18-gauge steel, reinforced so that a man washing windows can stand on it.

Weatherproof: All metal used in the BERRY invention is rust-proof and has two coats of baked enamel.

Sightly: Ventilators are finished in oak or mahogany, and present an attractive appearance.

Prices Were 40% More Than Now

Orr & Lockett, former exclusive sales agents, have gone out of business, and as a result the manufacturer now offers Berry Ventilators direct to the consumer at a big reduction in price, and gives a money-back guarantee of satisfaction. Any Berry Window Ventilator may be returned within two weeks and money will be refunded.

To determine size of ventilator needed, close your window and measure (with rule, not tape measure) from window stop to window stop on inside of sill close up to window. The "window stop" is the perpendicular strip that holds the window in place. Any size in this table will fit window openings any part of three inches wider than the length of the ventilator.

ARTIST-COUNT GIVES UP MODEL TO ESCAPE CELL

An Austrian nobleman, who gave up his title and his wife for his art and his model, showed up in the Morals court yesterday with the model.

He left without her.

His wife is on his trail and she declares she will, for the remainder of her life, make his existence a matter of one darn thing after another.

The artist is reputed to be the former Count Otto von Rosenbaum. He is known as plain Otto von Rosenberg. The model is Anna Jacobs. She is 23 years old and Rosenberg declares she has been the inspiration of his life and work. There also is a child and this was brought into court. Miss Jacobs will keep the baby.

A "Love Match," They Say

Rosenberg and the model were in court on a warrant obtained by Mrs. Josephine Von Rosenberg of St. Louis, the artist's wife. They were arrested at 1842 Waveland avenue, where they had been living as man and wife. They admitted having lived so for the last two years. Mrs. Von Rosenberg testified she married the artist in St. Louis seven years ago.

"I eloped with Miss Jacobs," admitted the artist. "We lived together for two years in St. Louis. Then we went to Canada, where we lived for two years, and then we came to Chicago.

"I love Miss Jacobs and she loves me. She is the inspiration of my paintings. A child was born to us in St. Louis and it is present here."

Made Nobleman for Bravery.

"He is the descendant of a famous field marshal of the Austrian army who fought in the years of 1740 to 1780. For his bravery Empress Maria Teresa made him a nobleman. I am personally acquainted with the artist and know him to be an Austrian nobleman."

Von Rosenberg agreed to adopt the child and give Miss Jacobs custody. Then Judge Fisher ordered them to separate, and this was agreed upon. Mrs. Von Rosenberg refused to accept the custody of the child.

"I will prosecute my husband for the rest of my life," was Mrs. Von Rosenberg's statement.

His Paintings Honored.

A number of Von Rosenberg's paintings were found hung in Chicago yesterday. Three are in an auction room in Wabash avenue. There are also several in Milwaukee homes, it was said.

Neither Von Rosenberg nor the model could be found at the conclusion of the hearing. The house in Waveland avenue was dark last night.

THOMAS KELLY SENTENCED TO PRISON DESPITE FIGHT.

Winnipeg Contractor, Who Resisted Extradition in Chicago, Gets Two and One-Half Year Term.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 18.—Thomas Kelly, wealthy Winnipeg contractor, denied a new trial by the Supreme court at Ottawa, was sentenced late today to serve two and one-half years in the penitentiary by Justice Prendergast.

Kelly was convicted at the summer assizes on charges which arose from alleged fraudulent dealings in connection with contracts for the Manitoba parliament building.

Kelly was convicted and sentenced on the specific charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. His conviction followed a long legal battle, in which it was charged by the government that he enetred into a conspiracy to defraud the province of Manitoba in the erection of the parliament buildings here.

FIRST CAVALRY BREAKS RANKS AFTER RIDE HOME

Chicago welcomed home the First Illinois cavalry yesterday.

Led by its mounted band and with thousands of citizens cheering it on its way, the regiment on its Texas broncos swung into the loop shortly after 1 o'clock, after a record "hike" from Fort Sheridan.

Less than half of the members of the regiment, which has in all some 1,300 troopers, took part in the "hike" and the subsequent parade, as there were only thirty-two horses for each of the fourteen troops. The remainder of the regiment, after tidying up the Fort Sheridan barracks, came into Chicago by train, the cavalrymen disbanding and returning to their homes following their arrival at the station.

Ride Like Veterans.

An enthusiastic welcome was given the mounted troopers, who, bronzed and hardened by nearly four months' training on the border, presented the appearance of veterans.

There was no serious mishap, though several troopers came into sudden and unpleasant contact with the pavement. The horses were unusually frisky because they hadn't been exercised for several days.

The start was made from the fort early in the morning at a brisk trot that was maintained a good part of the distance. It was at first planned to make a halt in Evanston for lunch, but because of the fast time made no stop was ordered until the heart of Chicago was reached.

At Chicago avenue and State street the column was met by an escort of 100 mounted policemen and a band of 100 pieces. The parade wound up in Grant park, where exhibition maneuvers were held and Col. Milton J. Foreman said good-by to his men and thanked them for the service they had given. The column then proceeded to the armory at 1330 North Clark street, where the troopers were dismissed.

Hay Oath Postponed.

It was announced that during the latter part of the month the question of taking the Hay oath will be put up to the cavalrymen. Many of the troopers will not take the oath unless they change their minds meanwhile, it is believed.

Several members of the regiment have asked THE TRIBUNE to aid them in getting positions.

Written applications should be sent to Private Gilman M. Parker, THE TRIBUNE. Applications should include the age and previous business experience of the applicant and the names of his former employers.

Dinner to Battery B.

Capt. Frank M. Course and his men of Battery B, First Illinois field artillery, were tendered a "homecoming" banquet at the Auditorium hotel last night. Col. P. J. H. Farrell presided as toastmaster and among those responding to toasts were Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara, Capt. George M. Winchelt, U. S. N.; Col. James Ronayne, Capt. R. C. Hand, Lieut. Col. Jacob Frank, Maj. W. J. Garard, and F. J. Jacobson, chairman of the banquet committee.

STARTS ACTION TO ADOPT CHILDREN OF HIS WIFE

C. H. Pierce, Who Married Divorcee with Two Little Girls, Seeks to Give Them Legal Home.

With their real father in far away Australia, Ramon Forsyth, 8 years old, and Georgette Forsyth, 5 years old, are to have another father, according to a petition for adoption filed yesterday by Cedric Harlan Pierce and Claudia Pierce, 330 Washington boulevard, Oak Park.

Mrs. Pierce is the mother of the little girls. She and her husband, John Elder Forsyth, were divorced Sept. 4, 1915, she charging drunkenness and desertion.

The last heard of Forsyth was in Ballina, New South Wales, Australia. Mrs. Forsyth recently married Mr. Pierce, and the petition for adoption filed yesterday insures a legal home for her daughters.

HELEN KELLER DENIES SHE WILL WED SECRETARY

Famous Deaf and Blind Woman Refutes Story of Forthcoming Marriage to Peter Fagan.

Wrentham, Mass., Nov. 18.—Miss Helen Keller, the world's most famous deaf and blind woman, who it was reported was soon to marry her secretary, Peter Fagan, today authoritatively denied the report through her companion, Mrs. Annie S. Macy.

Mrs. Keller, mother of the blind woman, and Fagan himself joined in the denial.

In a statement today Mrs. Macy, who taught Miss Keller to speak, after denying the reported marriage plans, added:

"Her mother has been with Miss Keller ever since last June, and I have been with her constantly during her recent illness. If she had any affection deeper than friendship for her secretary or any one else we would have known of it."

Fagan said that despite the statement of the registrar of Boston that he had made application for a marriage license to wed Miss Keller ten days ago, he had never considered such a thing.

Another bottle was found in a pillow.

CITY CONSIDERS TRACTION UNION, NEW ORDINANCE

Council Committee Studies Indeterminate Grant, Cleveland (O.) System.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—One of the big secrets of the Chicago traction and subway commission was thought to have "leaked" here today during a conference between Cleveland traction officials and members of the Chicago council committee on local transportation.

Ald. Henry D. Capitain, chairman of the committee, asked numerous questions about the indeterminate franchise of the Cleveland Railway company. He has attended some of the meetings of the traction and subway commission, and from his queries and his treatment of the replies received, his associates arrived at this conclusion:

That the commission is considering the advisability of recommending an entirely new franchise for the surface and elevated lines if they will consolidate.

That this franchise would be for an indeterminate period, that it would establish absolute city control over the lines and guarantee the company fair treatment.

Capitain Hints at a Change.

Asked about this deduction following the conference, Chairman Capitain admitted that he "thinks" the traction commission is considering such an ordinance along with "all other possible solutions of our traction problem." But that was as far as he could be persuaded to go.

His questions concerning the Cleveland franchise came during a visit to the office of John J. Stanley, president of the Cleveland Railway company, by the local transportation committee, which now is on the last leg of a tour of inspection of eastern traction facilities.

Fielder Sanders, city commissioner of street railways, who was present, gave the preliminary explanation of the Cleveland franchise of 1910.

"It is indeterminate," he said, "although nominally for a twenty-five year period. A provision for a readjustment every ten years is what makes it indeterminate. At the end of the first ten years the city has the right to renew the franchise on the same terms and the company is compelled to accept it.

Provision for City Ownership.

"If the city chooses not to renew, the company has the remaining fifteen years in which to retire its investment. During that fifteen years it would have the right to operate at the maximum fare allowed by the ordinance and all city control except for the police powers would be suspended."

President Stanley explained the franchise provisions for the city taking over the lines.

"At the end of twenty-five years," he said, "the city can buy the stock at par, but if it chooses to buy at the end of ten years it can take it at 110. But I have notified them that they can have it at any time for that price."

Commissioner Sanders explained the city's control over the company.

"The council is absolute boss of the service," he explained. "If it wants to put on more service it can do so and if it wants to cut down the service it is responsible only to its constituents for doing so. New stock can be issued only for improvements and council has the power to approve or disapprove those improvements."

Fare Lower; Haul Shorter.

Second only to the Boston subways, the Cleveland street car system, with its 3 cent fare, appealed to the Chicago visitors as a valuable object lesson. The city has no subways or elevated roads, but its surface lines are considered models in many ways.

"The initial charge is only 3 cents, but there is a charge of 1 cent for every transfer," Chairman Capitain said, "so that the average fare is nearly 4 cents. The average passenger here pays almost 4 cents and he rides 2.19 miles. The passenger in Chicago pays 5 cents, but the average ride is approximately five miles."

Cleveland has fought for a reduction of the taxes imposed on the company. Although Chicago compels the companies to pave and clean their rights of way, Cleveland rents street flushing cars from the company, paying about $20,000 a year for them. Formerly sprinkling its tracks cost the company about $75,000 a year.

Traffic Regulations Valuable.

From the operating standpoint Cleveland's "skip stop" plan of having cars stop only at alternate corners appealed to the visitors. Its establishment was ordered after a referendum had been submitted to the passengers. The engineers say it made an increase of 20 per cent in the speed of the cars.

The most drastic traffic regulation encountered during the trip was found here. Between the hours of 4 and 6 in the afternoon automobiles and horse drawn vehicles, everything in the vehicular line except street cars, are excluded from the central district for the radius of a block each way from the public square. In some streets parking of vehicles is prohibited at all times of the day.

The aldermen will leave here at midnight and will reach Chicago early tomorrow morning.

HELD FOR SWEDEN CRIME.

George Oskar Emanuel Johansson, a Swede, was arrested yesterday by United States Deputy Marshal Thomas Sheehan on a warrant charging embezzlement. According to the charge sworn out by G. Bernard Anderson, acting Swedish consul in Chicago, Johansson formerly was treasurer of a butchering concern in Mjoelby, Sweden, and embezzled about $5,000 in American money. He was arrested at the plant of the Agar Packing company, where he has been employed as a butcher.

A comprehensive civil service bill to cover all county offices in Cook county has been drafted by the Cook county commission. It was mailed yesterday to all members of both branches of the new general assembly.

The local supporters of the law are planning an elaborate drive on the new legislature, and announced that they have assurances of success this time.

At present only 1,500 of the 4,500 county employés are under civil service, and these are limited to the charitable institutions. The proposed law would bring the offices of sheriff, coroner, all court clerks, treasurer, and state's attorney under the merit system.

Three on Merit Board.

The proposed law would place in the hands of the president of the county board the naming of a board of three civil service commissioners, who would serve for three years. They could only be removed after a trial. The same provision applies to all employés. Summary discharge would be impossible, and each employé would have the right of a public hearing before being removed from office.

Accompanying the draft of the bill mailed to the lawmakers was the annual report of the Cook county commission, just off the press yesterday, in which appears the following statement of the situation:

"During the session of the last legislature this commission made repeated endeavors to procure for Cook county a comprehensive civil service act. A bill was drafted by the commission, and after public hearings, participated in by the various department heads of the county, including the sheriff, the treasurer, the state's attorney, the recorder, the clerks of the various courts, and with the ratification and coöperation of the Civil Service Reform association, the City club, and others, was unanimously recommended by the president and board of Cook county commissioners, and this commission at Springfield worked for many weeks trying to effect its enactment.

Bill Fails of Passage.

"The bill failed of passage by a vote of less than ten majority. The bill contains the best provisions of the old civil service act of Illinois, the city of Chicago civil service act, the model Oakland and Ohio acts, and conforms closely with the terms and provisions of the model act recommended by the national civil service commission at its last assembly in Ottawa, and it should be placed on the statute books by the next legislature.

"A large majority of the members elected to the house and senate have pledged themselves in writing to the passage of such an act, and in each of the platforms of the political parties appear distinct planks and indorsement of such comprehensive civil service legislation for Cook county, and the newly elected governor has pledged himself in his speeches and public utterances, as well as by his record, that he is a friend of civil service, and will undoubtedly work for the passage of this act so drafted and recommended."

Forty-five legislators have expressed themselves as favoring anti-loan shark legislation, according to Attorney James E. Callahan, whose law firm sent out queries on the stand of senators and representatives. The bill urged by lawyers provides for a maximum charge of 3 per cent a month, state supervision, and a wife's signature to her husband's assignment of wages.

Woman Tries to End Life.

Mrs. Esther Szuasy of 1531 North Halsted street attempted to end her life last night by turning on the gas in the kitchen of her home. She was found unconscious on the floor by Louis Sapponas, 1528 North Halsted street, a friend who went to visit her husband.

ROGER AT HOME, HAPPY AS LARK OVER ELECTION.

Sullivan Doesn't Let Little Thing Like Cook County Defeat Plunge Him Into Political Doldrums.

Roger C. Sullivan came back home yesterday after a week's tuning up at French Lick, Ind., to look over the local battlefield.

Mr. Sullivan saw a silver lining to the Illinois and Cook county cloud, took the whole matter philosophically, blamed it all on to the straight ballots, and allowed that there would be a few grains of comfort in the minority patronage.

He was glad President Wilson had been reëlected, whether he gets any of the federal patronage or not. As to whether Senator Lewis is going to have all the say about federal pie this trip and as to just what minority state jobs he will ask to be delivered to his followers he would not say.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, murmured Mr. Sullivan, or words to that effect. He thought it too early to begin making books, opined that the situation might be worse, pictured Chicago as an everlastingly Democratic town, and in general was quite bland and cheerful about it all.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo is the first of the Democratic chiefs to be projected into the political arena as the successor to President Wilson in 1920. That the president's son-in-law has the call on the nomination already was the Delphic message brought to Chicago yesterday by Cato Sells, United States commissioner of Indian affairs.

JORDAN

The Luxury Car

Here is the Jordan Four Passenger Sport model—smart, virile, distinctive—a car that establishes Jordan style leadership even in the Sport Model class devoted exclusively to smart cars.

Other producers in advancing their prices, in a sincere effort to equal Jordan standards—in appearance, finish and appointments, do us honor.

Gladly Jordan accepts the responsibility of style leadership. But Jordan inspiration is a quality ideal which emphasizes performance as well as style.

Jordan performance is just as distinctive—just as emphatic an expression of the quality ideal back of the car—as Jordan style.

Jordan dealers are as proud to demonstrate as to show this Sport Model at $1750, the first of its kind and class to sell for less than $2500.

What Other Sedan Can Match This Jeffery?

This is a winter top advertisement.

It is written for the man who realizes these three things—that it is mighty poor economy to invest the price of a motor in a vehicle and use it but a part of the year—that to use a car in winter in Chicago is uncomfortable unless you have protection from the weather—that to have that protection you ought not to be required to lug around a winter top all summer.

And the most satisfactory solution of the whole problem is the Jeffery Demountable Sedan. This car, with the Sedan body in place, gives you in appearance and in luxury a perfect closed car of the finest type.

It is not a makeshift. From the broad plate glass windows to the details of finish—whip cord upholstering, silk shades, electric dome light, double wind shield, etc., it conforms to the requirements of fine motor-coach building.

And next spring, when the Sedan is removed in an hour, your touring car will not be a makeshift either. No redesigning of the beautiful roll-edge Jeffery bodies was necessary to fit this Sedan top. You will have no sense of something gone. Your car will be a regular Jeffery, without mar in finish or upholstering.

Last but not least, this closed car luxury costs you but little more than the price of the open car alone. There is absolutely nothing like it elsewhere—Jeffery Demountable Sedan bodies are obtainable only with Jeffery cars—built in the Jeffery Body Factory.

As to the cars themselves, nothing need be said. Chicago knows Jeffery cars—the ever dependable "Four," of which almost 2,000 are now in use here, and the wonderful "Six," which out-performs any other car in Chicago selling at under $2000.

THIRTY SENATORS IN DRYS' LINEUP; SUFFRAGE SAFE

Replies Insure Caucus of Republican House Members on Wednesday.

Rumors that the woman suffrage law might be placed in jeopardy when the next Illinois legislature gets going were set at rest yesterday when a final counting of noses in the upper branch of the assembly disclosed thirty members lined up with the dry forces, according to their claims. This gives the suffrage people four more than the required constitutional majority to handle such bills in the upper chamber.

This claim of the dry leaders followed the sending out of the formal call yesterday for the caucus of Republican members elect of the lower house to be held at the Great Northern hotel next Wednesday afternoon.

Replies Insure Majority Present.

Representative Dahlberg announced that a sufficient number of replies had been received from downstate members to insure the attendance of a majority of the Republican members. Representative David E. Shanahan will be formally chosen for speaker, the action to be ratified further by the official caucus the night before the legislature convenes.

Mr. Shanahan also will be given authority by the Chicago caucus to proceed at once with the preparation of his committee lists, so that the general assembly can start off on both feet the first week.

As soon as the caucus call was issued the formal statement came from the dry forces that both the present dry legislation and the woman suffrage law are safe.

Lower House Will Be Wet.

While the lower house will be wet—a total pledged vote of about eighty-five, or eight more than the constitutional majority—the upper branch will be safely nailed down by the white ribboners to block any attempt to put over anything.

The wet leaders have been quietly canvassing the situation for several days with a view to determining whether there is a possible chance to repeal the suffrage law.

The determination of Catharine Waugh McCulloch and her friends to open up the suffrage question again in the next legislature by demanding provision for full suffrage in this state gave the wet forces the opportunity they were looking for to stage a fight for the repeal of the law.

The senate, however, according to the count now made by the dry leaders, will stand in the way of any such attempt, and as a result the attempted repeal of the law may be abandoned.

Out in the state the suffrage forces and the Anti-Saloon league have been working together.

In an official statement issued yesterday by the Chicago office of the Anti-Saloon league it is claimed that of the thirty-four Republican members elect of the upper house twenty-eight are dry and two Democrats have joined them.

See a Real Contest.

"We must make the fight at Springfield," says the statement. "It will be a real contest. In every session of the legislature for years the wet or dry question has been the big issue and each time the wet vote has been getting smaller and the dry vote larger. The wets will not be able to repeal any of the present laws nor can they pass any of their legislation. Drys have replaced wets in the senate in at least five districts. Of the senators who voted for the amendment that made possible the defeat of the residence district bill in 1913 and who yet claimed to be dry, one-half were defeated for reëlection."

A "DRY" WARNING

Get Ready for Saloonless Chicago, Philip Yarrow Says.

BY PHILIP YARROW.

[Superintendent Chicago Dry Federation.]

The Dry Chicago federation plans to bring the saloon question to vote in the spring of 1918. A member of Mayor Thompson's cabinet has said that he expects us to win in our campaign.

We are advising all those who are in any way connected with the liquor business to make the readjustment which will be called for by a successful vote. Wherever the saloon has been voted out there has been an immense increase in legitimate business and brewers in all dry states have found ways and means to change the character of their work so as to conduct prosperous and righteous business concerns.

An Omaha brewery is already being turned into a modern apartment house.

The Reymann brewery of Wheeling, W. Va., is now the P. O. Reymann company, engaged in meat packing.

William Jennings Bryan will make an address for the Dry Chicago federation at the Hotel Sherman tomorrow at noon. Mr. Bryan is giving his services gratuitously for this meeting.

DOLAN WINNER BY NEW TOTALS AFTER A SHOCK

Zeman's Figures Make Judge Loser for a Time—Fraud Charges Weaken.

It was a sort of an "on agin, off agin, gone agin Finnegan" game between Judge Harry P. Dolan, Democratic candidate for Municipal court judge, and his Republican rival, Anton T. Zeman, at the board of election commissioners' canvass yesterday. By the police returns Zeman landed in eleventh place, with Judge Dolan in tenth and a winner.

In the afternoon Mr. Zeman made public figures he said had been obtained by his watchers during the canvass, which showed he had defeated Dolan by 5,114 votes. The news spread Zeman had won. Judge Dolan heard it and investigated.

Finds Dolan in Lead.

Dennis J. Egan, chief clerk of the election commissioners, thereupon put auditors to work on the totals. Their figures indicate Judge Dolan won by between 800 and 1,000 votes. These totals were obtained by using police returns from fifty-two precincts which are being held out of the official count until judges and clerks are questioned on discrepancies in the figures.

The official count of the thirty-five wards, less these fifty-two precincts, gives Judge Dolan 189,613 votes and Zeman 187,081, a plurality for Dolan of 2,532. Zeman has a plurality in the fifty-two missing precincts sufficient to bring Dolan's lead down to 800 or 1,000.

Haas and Miller Win.

The completion of the canvass in Chicago and Cicero showed the election of both Joseph F. Haas for recorder and August W. Miller for clerk of the Circuit court by pluralities greater than indicated by the police returns.

The final count, which will not be announced for several days, shows Haas to have carried the city of Chicago over Joseph F. Connery with a plurality of 317. Haas' plurality in the country towns, on the face of the police returns, was 11,533, and added to this is a considerable lead in Cicero, which brings his total plurality up to between 12,000 and 13,000.

Miller Plurality Increased.

Miller also wins over John W. Rainey for court clerk with increased plurality over the police returns. With the country towns canvass yet to be completed, and in which unimportant changes are indicated, Miller has an indicated plurality in the entire county of 4,928, as compared to 2,097 on the face of the police returns.

All candidates made big gains in the canvass. In the thirty-five wards alone Miller made a total gain over the police returns of 19,229, and Rainey made a total gain of 16,398. Miller's net gain in the city was 2,831.

The country towns canvass is said to be showing further gains for Miller. Both Haas and Miller, with the city totals in hand, were taken out of the speculative class and shown to have been elected by good pluralities.

Ayers Sorry He Slammed Women.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank D. Ayers who is representing the city hall forces at the canvass, is sorry he criticized the efficiency of women acting as poll officials, he said yesterday.

"Some people seem to have misconstrued my meaning," said Mr. Ayers. "I did not cast any reflection on their honesty and integrity, as Judge Scully would have the people to believe. I meant that they did not have the experience that the men had and on account of that the mistakes were made."

Judges and clerks of election in Oak Park will be subpoenaed to appear before the canvassing board Monday to explain alleged discrepancies in several precincts. The board found that there were more votes counted for candidates in some precincts than there were votes cast in the precincts.

Second Ward Fraud Hearing.

The examination of judges and clerks of the Second ward last night was devoid of the sensations expected to develop. The chief hint of violations of the election laws was given by the judges and clerks of the Forty-ninth precinct.

They testified that in checking up the names and residences of voters registered for the primaries they frequently found cards in buildings upon which were written the names of the persons who are alleged to have occupied either flats or rooms there. Usually no response was given to ringing of doorbells, so it was taken for granted that the persons whose names were written on the cards actually lived at the places visited, they said. They admitted that the cards were nearly alike in size, color, and handwriting.

The precincts from which complaints caused the citation of the officials were the Sixty-fifth precinct, where the tally sheets show no straight votes for all the offices; the Fifty-fourth precinct where 333 votes were cast, and all were tallied straight votes with no "splits"; and the Forty-sixth precinct, which shows that all candidates ran alike; and the Forty-ninth precinct, where more votes were tallied than were cast.

Explanations were given by precinct officials in which they blamed the mistakes to clerical errors.

Save $175 Now

On the World-Record-Breaking

HUDSON SUPER-SIX

You can save $175 on such a car as has won all worth-while records if you buy before December 1st. On that date we begin manufacture of cars made from materials that have advanced enormously in cost. There is to be no change in models. Some dealers have still a few cars due them of the present production. They can take care of car buyers up to their allotment at the present prices. But you must act quickly if you wish to obtain the saving.

This season's output of Hudson Super-Sixes is built of materials contracted a year ago. Our present prices are based on their cost.

Our next production, starting December 1, will be built of materials contracted lately. The costs have enormously advanced. And, to cover that added cost, our price on the Hudson must advance $175.

So cars of our present output, which dealers have still unsold, are the last Hudson Super-Sixes to be sold at present prices. We urge you to get one if you can.

There will be no change in motor, chassis or body. You get the same exclusively Hudson Super-Six motor. You get the same chassis, which in every worth-while test has shown endurance beyond what any other car has proved, and you get the same beauty and luxurious body with all its excellencies of detail. Changes, if any, will be slight. So $1475 now buys the same car as $1650 will next month.

It Can't Be Helped

We dislike these price advances fully as much as you do. They limit the number who can buy Hudsons.

But the Super-Six motor makes the Hudson supreme in performance and endurance. And we must continue to match that supremacy in quality and luxury.

We cannot skimp on this car if we wish to keep our pinnacle place. Nor shall we add an extra price for prestige. We add only our added costs. The new Hudson prices will be nowhere near as high as numerous other fine cars.

But that is a later question. Today you can save that $175 if your dealer has any cars left.

Can Any Other Car Content You?

If you want an enclosed model or a convertible model, now is the time to get it. If you want an open model, and could wait until spring, the advantage in buying now is the $175 saving.

When you buy a fine car—open or enclosed—you will want, we think, a Hudson Super-Six. It has been so this year with 25,000 buyers. It will be far more so next year.

This year the Super Six was new. It takes time to gain great prestige. Also it takes time for surpassed cars to lose it.

Note the facts about the Super-Six. Mark its efficiency, matchless and amazing. Then ask yourself if a lesser car is likely to content you, and then decide if it isn't worth while to save $175 by buying now.

Holds All Worth-While Records

The Super-Six has won all the worth-while records. It has outperformed all cars, old or new, in all the tests attempted. Its endurance remains unequalled.

A Super-Six broke the ocean-to-ocean record. It ran from San Francisco to New York in 5 days, 3 hours and 31 minutes. Then that same car, on the same day, started back. And it completed the round trip—6972 miles—in 10 days and 21 hours. No other car ever even attempted the round trip ocean-to-ocean run against time.

It has broken all stock-car records for speed. A stock car exceeded all other records by 52 per cent for a 24-hour run. It holds the record in the Pike's Peak hill-climb against 20 famous rivals.

Does this not prove the Super-Six to be the unquestioned monarch of Motordom?

BRYAN LAUNCHES FOUR YEAR FIGHT TO MAKE U. S. DRY

Urges the Democratic Party to Take Lead for Prohibition and Suffrage.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—William Jennings Bryan in this city tomorrow will begin a four year fight to make the United States a totally dry nation by federal enactment.

The Nebraskan will urge the Democrats of the country to join him in a campaign to compel the next Democratic national convention to include a plank for national prohibition in its platform. He will also seek a plank favoring federal equal suffrage.

All of the political energies of Mr. Bryan until 1920 will be devoted to the purpose of making the Democratic party declare for these two objectives, which he considers the two big issues of the day. The Nebraskan has made known his intentions in emphatic terms.

"The Republican party," he said, "stands defeated on old issues and will be looking for new ones on which to base the fight of 1920. It may champion prohibition in the hope of winning the west, which already has declared its position on the wet and dry question.

Wants Party to Lead.

"The returns of the recent election make it easy for the Democratic party to take the lead on prohibition and equal suffrage.

"Of the twenty-three dry states seventeen went for Wilson, two more were close, and in four other states which he carried prohibition has practically been decided on.

"Again—the president carried nearly all the states in which women vote. These two issues are paramount to the party. They should not, and will not be sidetracked."

Cities Against Saloon.

The election brought the most sweeping victories for the anti-saloon cause in the history of the movement.

Four states, containing a population of 5,409,166 and an area of 326,112 square miles, equaling more than one-twelfth of the area of the United States, in a single day went from wet to dry.

Of the 2,543 counties in the United States, 2,047 were dry before the election Nov. 7, when 191 more counties were added, leaving only 355 wet counties in the entire nation.

The significant trend of the times is the turn of big industrial cities against the saloon. Kansas City, Grand Rapids, Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, all gave decisive dry majorities.

Pledged to Prohibition.

In addition Florida and Utah elected legislatures and governors pledged to immediate statuatory prohibition. Both of these states will be in the dry column within the next four months. This will leave only eleven states more to adopt state-wide prohibition before three-fourths (thirty-six), the number necessary to ratify the amendment to the constitution, of all the states in the union are dry. The situation in a number of these eleven states is as follows: Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Texas, New Mexico, Wyoming, and Delaware are just ready to drop into the dry basket. The chances are more than even that five of these will adopt prohibition within the next twelve months—namely: Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, New Mexico, and Texas. The situation in the remaining states necessary for the adoption of prohibition is as follows:

New Hampshire: Unless there is an affirmative vote in each town for licenses each two years no licenses can be granted. At the vote in 1915 203 towns voted against license, twenty-one towns for license. The majority all over the state against license was 7,663.

Seventeen Wet Towns in Vermont.

Vermont: The same kind of local option prevails in Vermont as in New Hampshire. Only seventeen of the 246 towns in the state have saloons and seven of the seventeen have in the aggregate only twelve saloons.

Delaware: Has only 200 saloons left in the entire state and state-wide prohibition is imminent.

Wyoming: The issue is a live one and statutory prohibtion probably at the coming session of the legislature.

California: California reduced the wet majority of two years ago of 170,000 down to 45,000 for prohibition of the saloons and all retail selling of liquor and to 100,000 for complete prohibition of the liquor traffic, retail, wholesale, and manufacturers.

Maryland: Maryland is coming to state-wide prohibition. Seventeen of her twenty-three counties are dry.

Kentucky: Of the 120 counties in Kentucky 106 are dry and 80.5 per cent of the population resides in dry territory. State-wide prohibition is imminent.

PADEREWSKI LEFT DAZED BY SIENKEWICS' DEATH.

Pianist Mourns Loss of Bosom Friend and Joins Conference to Aid in Polish Relief.

Sorrowed by the death of his bosom friend, Henryk Sienkiewics, the Polish novelist and patriot, who is dead in Switzerland, Ignace Jan Paderewski, the pianist, arrived in Chicago yesterday and went into conference with various relief societies seeking aid for Poland.

Paderewski is vice president of the relief committee, of which Sienkiewics was president.

"The death of Sienkiewics dazes me," said Paderewski. "I can hardly realize it is true. We have lost a great man in the rehabilitation of Poland. It is a blow to the nation and to me, for he was a great personal friend."

Paderewski will appear in a concert today and also will meet members of the Chicago Polish relief committees.

STREETS BUREAU GETS PROTESTS ON TRANSFERS

Ten Ward Superintendents Are Shifted for Political Purposes, It Is Charged.

Numerous protests are being made in various wards as a result of a big shakeup in the assignment of ward superintendents.

Shortly after the election Superintendent of Streets Miller issued a general order transferring ten of the thirty-five superintendents. Some of the men shifted have worked in their particular wards for years, and the charge has been made that political considerations dictated their transfer.

Felix S. Mitchell, first assistant superintendent of streets, denied that politics was a factor. He cited the case of E. J. Aldine, who has been superintendent of the Twenty-first ward, where he lives, for eighteen years.

"We realize that Mr. Aldine is a good man," he said, "but we needed a good man in the Eighteenth ward. The transfers were made for the good of the service and for no other reason."

Following are the superintendents transferred:

	Former assignment.	New assignment.
E. J. Aldine	21	18
T. C. Ryan	35	19
W. J. Higgin	27	21
R. R. Hertzog	29	23
Charles I. Smith	18	25
F. A. Hurley	19	27
C. F. Walsh	25	29
J. McInerney	30	34
J. J. Carroll	23	30
P. Q. Rehm	34	35

It is believed that the protests may have the effect of getting some of the men shifted back to their old locations.

Woods Dual-Power Car

Gasoline and Electric Combined!

The Woods Dual-Power combines Gasoline and Electricity in a marvelous two-power automobile—An Electric in simplicity, elegance, convenience; a Gasoline Car in speed and unlimited mileage.

Dual-Power is an Electric that charges its own battery while the car is running, thus eliminating entirely the cost of current—it is a gasoline car of unfailing power.

You can run the car on electricity alone, you can run on gasoline power alone, you can use both together.

There is no clutch pedal, no shifting levers, no transmission gears. Power is applied directly from the gasoline motor and the electric motor through the propeller shaft to the wheels.

The car is started electrically, it brakes electrically, and speed is controlled electrically. The gas engine is non-stalling, the electricity is never exhausted.

All operations are controlled by two small finger levers on the steering wheel which start, stop and control speed; or these levers may be set at speed desired, and a single foot pedal will start, stop, accelerate, retard, brake and reverse—all with the utmost ease and simplicity.

Dual-Power has a quick, easy get-away. The magnetic brake will slow the car down without danger of skidding and the mechanical brake stops like a shot when necessary.

The phenomenal ease of driving is a feature that attracts all car owners, gasoline or electric, men and women. It offers the driver a chance to enjoy the motor trip, allows women to drive a powerful car without muscular effort.

Dual-Power is a car of the greatest economy because it generates its own electricity, because of its slight consumption of gasoline and its low cost of maintenance. It touches the very bottom of power economy and will interest you from the dollars and cents standpoint.

It combines the advantages of the Electric and the Gas Car—it is efficient, economical, simple.

It has unlimited mileage, will travel the roughest roads and climb the steepest hills. It is an ideal car for country trips or city use, an all-family, all-year-'round automobile for every purpose.

And it is beautiful, roomy, easy riding. It is the most luxurious four-passenger enclosed car that can be built. The elegance of its appearance will make it distinctive in any crowd.

It is a car that any woman can drive and it's a smart, powerful car for a man.

It is a wonderful car—a triumph of automobile engineering.

Dual-Power combines the simplicity and luxuriousness of the Electric with the speed and unlimited mileage of the Gas Car and is more economical than either of them.

You should ride the Dual-Power yourself to appreciate its wonderful performance. You may choose your own roads and specify your own tests.

RICH AND POOR SAVING TO AID BRITAIN IN WAR

Cost of Food Makes Living Serious Problem Despite Efforts of Government.

BY MAUDE RADFORD WARREN.

(Mrs. Warren, who is a Chicagoan and a gifted and well known novelist, went abroad a few weeks ago and the following is the third of a series of letters giving her impressions of England and Ireland in war time.)

LONDON, Oct. 25.—They were two women concerned about eking out a living. One of them was the daughter of an earl and the young widow of a baronet. She was riding in the underground because she could not afford to hire a chauffeuse for her car and because she had lent the car to the Red Cross. She was going to a real estate agent to see if she could not rent her big house to some one who could afford to keep it up; she, meantime, would rent a little one.

"I am afraid, Lady A.," the agent said, "that I cannot get you a tenant for your house, and I am equally afraid I have no small houses for rent in the locality that would suit you. Many of your friends have come to me wanting to get small houses; there are no more to be had."

Lady A. had to go away wondering if she could go into some coöperative housekeeping scheme, or if she must shut up the big house where she had gone only three years before as a bride.

Poor Woman Losing Trade.

BRITON WHO DIRECTS FOOD ECONOMY PLAN

Walter Runciman

The other woman was a little person, who, to eke out the separation allowance she was paid because her husband was at the front, kept a cheap confectionery and tea shop, patronized by workers from a nearby factory. She came out of a grocery shop wiping her eyes and said to her little girl:

"What I shall do I don't know. First it was sugar that went away up, and now it is bread. The factory girls won't 'ardly be able to pay 'igher prices, and what'll 'appen is they'll carry their own sandwiches from 'ome, and they won't come in askin' for tea. It'll end with you keepin' the shop and me goin' into a factory."

Perhaps the little girl reflected that she would rather take care of the shop than lug about a heavy baby for which the government paid a half crown a week allowance.

"Never mind, you stop frettin'," said the soldier's wife, cheerfully; "it won't matter what we go through if just your father comes 'ome safe. Some women's 'usband's don't. It'll just mean a bit more pinchin' and 'arder work for you and me."

Bread and Milk Costly.

It was to be expected that food would rise in price. Bread that used to be 9 or 10 cents now is 19 or 20 cents. Milk has gone up from 8 to 12 cents; coal has gone up about $2.50 a ton.

The average increase in the retail price of food is 68 per cent, or, deducting the increased sugar and tea duties, 62 per cent. The cost of living of the working classes, according to the most recent Board of Labor Gazette, is between 40 and 50 per cent higher than it was.

Fish are dear because the trawlers are trawling mines instead of fish. Eggs are dear because the supplies from Russia and Serbia are cut off. Yet people are working harder than ever, and should be eating more than ever. The time was when a clerk going into an A. B. C. shop or one of Lyons' restaurants could afford for luncheon a boiled egg, bread, tea, and cake or stewed fruit, and she could get it for 15 or 16 cents. Now she would have to pay from 26 to 28 cents.

Carry Lunches to Shops.

It is no uncommon thing to see men and women doing as the little shopkeeper feared her factory girls would—going into these shops with food which they have brought from home and ordering a 5 cent cup of tea. They will do the same thing at 5 o'clock and then go home to a carefully contrived 7 o'clock supper.

These people are paying for the war by giving up luxuries, comforts, and sometimes necessities; they pay even as the soldiers do, and quite as patiently. Those on whom the burden falls most heavily are men over war age with half grown families to support, or sickly men exempted from service, or women unable to work outside the home on account of having small children and whose separation allowances are not sufficient to keep their standard of living as high as it used to be when their men were working at home.

On the other hand, wages have risen, and many persons who before the war had to live below the standard of efficiency are now able to live decently and to make up their deficiencies in the way of bedding and clothes and shoes.

Britain Slow and Deliberate.

It is a fairly human trait to wish to upbraid the government, to be irritated at its slowness and clumsiness. When we come out of an Illinois Central or elevated train we are sometimes struck with impatience because fifty people cannot get up or down stairs so quickly as one person. Any government is just about as slow as such a group of people. The British government makes me think of the caterpillar tanks; it is ponderous, creaky, slow, but, as H. G. Wells, says, it "muddles through."

Like thousands of British individuals the government has not liked the rise in prices. In the last few days it has taken over the state control of wheat, just as it took some time ago petrol and then sugar. A royal commission has been appointed to insure adequate supplies of wheat for the United Kingdom by buying, selling, and controlling the delivery of wheat and flour and by taking steps to maintain the supply.

Ships Must Carry Wheat.

The government has made a large purchase of Australian wheat and is preparing to supply all the ships needed to bring it to England. British shipowners will be compelled to carry wheat and flour from the United States in preference to less necessary products. The government wants to safeguard the people from those who would make unjustifiable profits out of food.

Certain keen eyed critics are clamoring to have on the royal commission not merely men "who have rendered expert service to the government" but men and women who are experts in the life of people to whom it is a tragedy when bread is 16 cents a quartern loaf.

Malcontents say that food has gone up for the reason that shipping freights have risen. The government replies [the discussion is going on in parliament] that freights have risen little, that merchants' profits are strictly limited, that unnecessary middlemen have been eliminated, and that the government means to do away with food profits.

Urge Government Control.

Some radicals assert that before the government can accomplish this it will have to take control of all the necessaries of life.

If rich and poor at home do not share and share alike as do the officers and soldiers in the trenches, at least they all make sacrifices. They do not fear a shortage of necessities, but they mean to prepare against any possible emergency. To that end the government and various individual societies are carrying on a campaign of economy.

To save coal and gas it has just been ordered that shops are to close in the evenings, after the end of this month, at 7 o'clock [9 on Saturdays]. People are asked to give up their motor cars and hundreds who used to have them are using taxis; those who used taxis are using busses, and those who used to use busses are walking. People are asked not to take unnecessary railway journeys. They are told to be careful of water and not to throw away food.

Economy Taught by Exhibits.

Economy exhibitions are teaching them how they can economize in food and still get the proper number of calories int otheir systems. They are told exactly how a nourishing dinner for a family of four can be provided at a cost of say 28 cents. They are shown how to use ashes, under certain cirsumstances, for cleansing purposes.

To the distress of various high priced costumers they are advised against costly clothes. For the sake of the soldiers they must not buy new things till their old ones are worn out; they are warned against the vagaries of fashion.

Needless to say, there are rebels who pay no attention to such advice, particularly girls who never had a chance before to buy pretty clothes or to have soldier boys of their own.

Urged to Invest Savings.

Whatever money the economizers save they are urged again for patriotic motives to invest in the nation. The savings certificates and bonds bring a rate of 5 per cent—high, as all the world knows, for England.

As I sit in Trafalgar Square preparatory to going to see "Our Mary" Anderson in her first appearance since she left the stage twenty-five years ago (she is to play "Pygmalion and Galatea" and "Tragedy and Comedy" by William Gilbert), workmen are putting ropes and wreaths of laurel about Nelson's statue in readiness for the services the day after tomorrow.

Old Man Brings Offering.

An old man comes up with a spray of laurel and a few late marigolds; he looks as if he might have fought in the Crimean war. There he stands, old and uncertain, not quite sure what to do with his offering, and young, untested soldiers pass him, their interested eyes on the living cables of green, and the doves flutter at his hand to pick at the marigolds.

Life and movement everywhere, and there at the top of the shaft, Nelson looking straight away from it all. We can estimate the losses and gains of the war he lived through; posterity will some day put down in cold figures all this present welter of blood and pain, courage and magnificent silence.

MEXICAN CRISIS SHOWS FLAWS IN MILITIA SYSTEM

Mobilization of State Troops on Border a Failure, War Expert Asserts.

Herewith is presented the first of a series of eight articles by Capt. Henry J. Reilly, the "Tribune's" military expert, dealing with the problem of adequate defense for the United States. Capt. Reilly has made a study of army mobilization and in the following articles shows the faults revealed in the movement of troops to the Mexican border.

ARTICLE I.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

The question of national defense was one of the most important before congress last winter. The need for defense was so well recognized that the struggle was more a question as to what would constitute adequate defense rather than whether or not any defense at all was necessary.

The fight revolved around two main issues. The first was whether the army should be controlled by a general staff made up of officers of the fighting branches of the army or whether the control should remain in the hands of a number of more or less independent staff bureaus, such as the adjutants general, the quartermaster, and the ordnance departments.

The second was whether the army should be recruited by continuing the voluntary system of enlistment or by adopting a system of universal military service.

Voluntary System .. Failure.

In general it may be said that the supporters of the general staff system also favored universal service, while the supporters of the bureau system favored voluntary service. The former based their arguments on the failure of the bureau and voluntary system, as shown by the past military histories of Great Britain and the United States, and the fact that all countries with the exception of these two and China have adopted general staff control and universal service.

The supporters of the bureau and voluntary system systematically evaded every issue and contented themselves with advocating measures similar to those put in operation in Great Britain prior to the present war, every one of which has failed during this war and has had to be discarded.

Almost without exception the members of the fighting branches of the army, the men who risk their lives in battle, were for general staff control and universal service.

Pork Sways Army Affairs.

The shortsighted politicians in congress, and above all those interested in pork, wanted a continuance of bureau control, knowing that general staff control would inevitably end political trading. The staff corps, being virtually independent, naturally fought any system which would mean a subordination of their interests and a loss of their independence.

Some of the higher ranking officers of the national guard, thinking more of the maintenance of their own positions than of the wishes of the majority of the guard, who wish to be properly instructed, equipped, and led, also supported the bureau system as against the general staff system.

The administration sided with the politicians and the bureaucrats. The result was the passing of the present national defense act. This act reduced the power of the general staff, already too weak, and thereby strengthened the bureaus. This act relies on the voluntary system to produce the large number of troops needed in time of war. In other words, it in no way changes the fundamental defects of the system under which we have always gone to war.

Burden Unequally Divided.

The only marked change is the oath required of the members of the national guard which makes them serve for three years with the colors and three years in the reserve. This increases the sacrifice demanded of those who are willing to give some of their time to their country, but does nothing to demand some sacrifice from those who are unwilling to give any time.

Sooner than was expected the bureaucratic and voluntary system was put to a test. Our policy with respect to Mexico having given the Mexican government the idea that aggression would help them to obtain their wishes, a double invasion of Texas and of Arizona, coupled with a rising of the Mexicans in the United States, was planned.

The menace was so serious that Gen. Funston called for 25,000 troops to be sent immediately. The administration ordered out the national guard of the United States, on paper a force of 123,000.

Defects in U. S. Mobilization.

To meet a threatened invasion, the forces of the defense should be quickly mobilized along the threatened frontier; there should be a sufficient number of troops; they should be in properly organized units; the troops should be properly trained and equipped; the system of obtaining men should be so fair and democratic as to equitably distribute the military service required, with the minimum expenditure of money and the minimum disturbance of the ordinary life of the country.

The recent mobilization along our Mexican border failed in every one of these particulars. Nothing but the fact that we were faced by a poorly equipped, worse led, badly organized enemy lacking the determined spirit necessary to prosecute war saved us from humiliation.

[The next article on the militia mobilization will appear in tomorrow's issue of "The Tribune."]

The Correct
Arch Support Shoe
for Women

THIS shoe has proven its superiority because it is designed and constructed scientifically for the correction of broken down arches. It bears this famous name—

·LA·FRANCE·

The foot, first of all, must be properly protected from the weather and must be provided with ample room for the ball, upon which rests the entire weight of the body in walking.

LA FRANCE arch support shoes are designed so as to prevent any undue pressure on any particular spot, and to avoid squeezing and cramping of the foot bones.

The arch of the foot has perhaps been the cause of more untraceable aches and pains than any other part of the human anatomy, and should be properly supported and snugly fitted at the shank to prevent the muscles, tendons and bones from dropping into an unnatural position, which gives rise to the troubles against which nature rebels, and eventually results in the very common affliction of distorted or flat feet.

If the tarsal or meta-tarsal bones of the foot forming the arch are properly supported, no one need be troubled with broken down arches.

If you have weak or broken down arches, the sooner you put on a pair of these "LA FRANCE" Arch Support Shoes the sooner you should find relief.

THE LA FRANCE ARCH SUPPORT SHOES are made of fine selected quality imperial vici kid—the soles tanned by a special process that assures flexibility—Goodyear welt sewed. Complete range of sizes and widths. Price, the pair.. $6

MAROONS SHOW FIGHT AND SURPRISE ILLINOIS, 20-7

GET THREE TOUCHDOWNS WITH HELP OF BREAKS

Fumble, Penalty for Fces, and Freak Play Yield Chicago's Scores.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—That old time Maroon speed, gameness, cunning, and fighting spirit returned to "Old Man" Stagg's athletes of the University of Chicago today and upset the football dope completely, for the boys from the Chicago Midway outplayed Bob Zuppke's high geared Illinois eleven on Illinois field and won, 20 to 7.

Stagg's men played as if out to right all their wrongs of the year and they certainly succeeded. They had the downstate men licked and stunned before ten minutes of the first period was over. They uncovered new formations and displayed a most admirable driving power in everything they did.

Illinois Held 2 to 1 Favorite.

When they went upon the field Illinois was favorite at odds of 2 to 1. Not many of Chicago's rooters cared to risk their allowance money even at these odds. When the quarter was over one couldn't have found any Illinois money at any odds.

It was a somewhat ragged game, one in which luck figured, and as in olden days, the luck went to Chicago. The first Chicago touchdown was made after the fight had been on about five minutes, when Sternaman, the fiery little half back of the Illinois eleven, fumbled one of Agar's punts on his own twenty-five yard line.

Big Higgins of the Maroons was one of about six men who were right upon the little Illinois man when he caught the ball. Higgins crashed into him, the ball flew out of his arms, and bounced right into the arms of Capt. Jackson of the Maroons, and the latter raced unhindered to the goal for a touchdown.

Break Gives Maroons Confidence.

That bit of luck, or it might have been alertness, gave Stagg's men added fighting spirit, and when Illinois kicked off to the Chicagoans a moment later the Stagg team played ball it hadn't played in the last three years. The boys ripped through the Illinois line, crashed off the tackles, and dashed around the ends until the ball was on Illinois' thirty-five yard line, with about five yards to gain.

From there Red Graham hurled a beauty forward pass to Pershing, who was rammed to earth on Illinois' nine yard line. The Maroons tried some trick formations, but were able to make only six yards in three plays, and Graham tried another forward pass.

So desperate were the Illinois men that they were off side, and, although the forward pass was intercepted by an Illinois man back of the goal line, the ball was brought back and Illinois penalized half the distance to the line, which gave Chicago a first down a yard and a half from the goal. Here Illinois made its most gallant stand of the day, but Chicago scored, though it required three plays before Hanisch could get over.

Stop Sternaman and Macomber.

From then on Bob Zuppke's boys were beaten. In the second quarter they braced and fought desperately, but showed nothing new in football. They tried to depend upon the ability of Sternaman and Macomber to run the ends, and these two stars could not make good, and the half ended without further counting.

In the third period the Illini came back with renewed spirit and fought like wild animals. They outplayed the Maroons in that quarter, but Stagg's men never became excited and never blew up. They fought a beautiful defensive game, even to the point of wasting time near the end of the quarter so they would have the advantage of the wind when the change was made. In this way they thwarted all the desperate attacks of the local warriors and still had their commanding lead when the final quarter started.

Illinois' Passes Go Wrong.

By this time the Illini were desperate. Capt. Macomber opened up with a series of forward passes, mostly of the long distance variety, but seldom made good with them. He threatened several times, but never could continue long enough to make good. He had to kick often, and after one of his high punts there happened the champion lucky play of the game, though of course that play did not win for the Maroons, for they already had the game won.

The high punt came down amid a circle of athletes, no one trying to catch it. It hit the ground on Illinois' forty-five yard line. From the press stand it seemed to bound back and strike against the body of an Illinois player, then carom out on the field and stop at the feet of Red Graham. Every one except Graham apparently figured it a dead ball. Referee Knight went to the spot where the ball hit the first player and marked the spot as if to place the ball there for Chicago's first down.

Then, with all hands gathered around, Red Graham suddenly started in a circle around the mass for the Illinois goal. Sternaman was the only Illinois man to chase him, and he brought him down just after Graham had crossed the goal in the northwest corner.

Touchdown Is Allowed.

The ball was brought back and there was an argument of several minutes. Apparently one of the officials ruled Graham had a perfect right to run with the ball, for the final decision was that Graham had made a touchdown.

After that there was no chance for Illinois. With only about five or six minutes left to play, Capt. Macomber

YALE BEATS TIGERS, 10-0 BEFORE CROWD OF 41,535

Princeton Mistakes Give Elis Touchdown and Goal from Field.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Great is the name of "Cupid" Black in Yale football. By sheer spirit he led his team to victory over Princeton in the Palmer stadium today by a score of 10 to 0.

Jim Braden kicked a goal from the field early in the third period, when the opportunity never should have been presented. Harry Le Gore scored a touchdown early in the fourth period, from which Comerford kicked goal, after Yale had grasped a second opportunity which came as the result of glaring blunders, first of the head and then of the hands, by two Princeton men.

Mistakes Beat Princeton.

An erratic, but keenly alert Yale team defeated a sluggish, bewildered, loose playing Princeton team by being wide awake and ready to take full advantage of mistakes which the Tigers so often and so accommodatingly made.

Thrills there were for the 41,535 shouting, cheering lovers of football who looked on, but the thrills were not of the inspiring kind, except to those Yale men who saw only good in their own players and who saw only a victory which, while hoped for, was not confidently expected after that 21 to 6 defeat by Brown a week ago.

As a matter of fact, such neutrals who looked on—and they were far in the minority—left the stadium with the impression soundly grounded that it was just about the loosest, poorest played game of football ever put on by elevens of the first rank.

Tigers Lack Team Work.

The real story of the game is the story of a Princeton team which failed utterly, even though every individual of that team stood out boldly because of the struggle against overwhelming odds. The players worked together in spots, but that is about the best that can be said. Grievous errors of judgment, damaging fumbles, and the total lack of an offensive punch made the eleven a more or less easy victim to its own sorrowful weakness.

It would be better, then, to lay greater stress on a Yale team with a spirit which could not beb roken even by the loss on the very eve of the game of Trever [Toad] Smith, its quarterback.

Smith was in the last signal practice, but complained of feeling ill, and a diagnosis showed he was suffering from a badly infected throat. He came as far as New York with his mates and hoped he would be well enough to start, but wiser counsel prevailed and he listened to bulletins of the game on a cot in the Manhattan hospital. The score almost cured him.

La Roche Fills Smith's Shoes.

When the news of Smith's disability was broken to the players the gloom could have been cut with a knife, but Capt. Black and Coach Tad Jones soon dispelled this, and the men went on the field and played almost as if inspired.

La Roche jumped into the breach left vacant by the illness of Smith, and on the whole handled his team with good judgment. Moseley and Comerford on the ends and Capt. Black at left guard rose to great heights. Every man did his little part, and altogether the team was equal to the needs of the game. Little more could be asked.

Plenty of Good Football.

Let it be emphasized too, before 'going any further, that a lot of good football was scrambled with a lot of bad football. The tackling, on the whole, was hard and sure; the ends of both teams and the tackles, too, were down under practically every punt with sureness and precision; the defensive work of the forwards was uniformly sound, and this can be said for both elevens, while here and there both teams were nicely tuned.

Unfortunately, however, the good things were largely lost sight of in the bad things—the lack of any real strategy or head work on the part of the Princeton field general; the damaging fumbles, which, while not many, were critical; the absence of anything which approached a driving, whirling attack. Larry Le Gore got loose for one brilliant dash of twenty-six yards. That was all. Hardly a play was made which brought the vast crowd upstanding.

Great Crowd Sees Struggle.

The crowd, amazing in its color, wonderful in its enthusiasm, was huge even for football. It was high tide for Palmer stadium; every seat was occupied and hundreds stood around the parapet against the background of sky. There were only 41,535 tickets sold because there were only 41,535 seats.

On one side the Princeton undergraduates were camped, surrounded by their followers, and on that side the brilliant yellow chrysanthemum made dashes of red and blue and purple and green stand out because of the contrast.

Across the stadium Yale blue waved far more riotous and far more enthusiastic than the orange and black. But then a drop kick, a touchdown, and a goal from touchdown are worth rioting about.

Conditions Perfect for Spectators.

The day was perfect. The weather was a fruitful source of conversation. If any man or woman came to Princeton today without commenting on the warming sun, the invigorating air, the beauty of it all, that man or woman should be placed on a pedestal.

Reams could be written of the crowd,

BERRY AND DERR BEAT MICHIGAN FOR PENN, 10-7

Strong Wolverine Line Unable to Check Two Stars.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Howard Berry, Pennsylvania's powerful full back, and Ben Derr, performing at right half, gathered ten points and a victory for their team this afternoon in the clash that ended Michigan's gridiron season. The final count totaled up 10 to 7.

Credit for the Quaker victory goes to Berry, who made the initial touchdown, possibly by pulling down Sparks' bad punt early in the first period and lugging it thirty-five yards to Michigan's eleven yard line and then going over the mark for the counter. Derr kicked the goal.

Berry Boots Field Goal.

Berry added the three points that won the clash in the first two minutes of play in the second division, when he dropped back to Michigan's twenty-five yard line and booted a narrow field goal. It was by no means a perfect one and the crowd waited breathlessly for a fraction of a minute before it was sure the kick was a success.

From this time on until the last few minutes of the third period Penn fought hard to keep its lead, with the play almost entirely in its own territory. At this point it looked as though the Wolverines were on their way to an easy touchdown when Maulbetsch, Smith, and Sparks rushed the ball twenty-five yards to the thirteen yard line, but here Penn stiffened its defense. Light threw Smith for an eight yard loss and the ball went to the Quakers.

Penn Center Put Out.

Alex Wray, Pennsylvania's center, let the referee catch him roughing too often in the third period and a penalty of half the distance to the goal followed, with his own removal. With the ball on Penn's twenty-five yard line the Wolverines started a march down the field that ended in the first minute of the final period, when "Pat" Smith pushed the oval over the line for Michigan's only touchdown.

During the remainder of the game neither team was in any grave danger of scoring, the clash staying well in the middle of the field. Penn was able to occupy the time with a collection of punts until the disappointed crowd heard the closing whistle.

From the very start it was evident that the Quaker line would make serious trouble for the Wolverines. Both teams were strong on defense, but the man Berry, backed up by the rest of the Quaker ground gaining machine, was able to make enough gains at critical moments to keep his team out of danger.

Derr and Light Gainers.

During the first period the Wolverines seemed to be unable to stop Derr and Light. Both men took part in the journey from midfield to Michigan's fifteen yard line, which was followed in the next division by Derr's winning field goal.

The Wolverines were unable to get their forward passes into working order when they needed them most. Late in the second division of the clash Berry punted outside on his own thirty-seven yard line and saw the Wolverines rush the oval back to within twenty-two yards of a touchdown. Here Yost's warriors essayed a series of tosses, but a Quaker was on hand to knock down every one of them.

Wolverine Line Strong.

The whole Penn back field worked well, but Berry and Light were the only ones who succeeded in making consistent gains. Time after time the Quakers were forced to punt after futile assaults on the Wolverine wall, and if they had not had the man Berry to depend upon in emergencies they would have found themselves in difficulties.

On the whole, Pennsylvania was not so successful in open ground gaining as the Wolverines. Bell and Urquhart connected for slight gains by passes on a trio of occasions, but Michigan showed a more valuable knowledge of the method. The condition of the field was responsible for several failures, the warm sun that came out in the morning softening the turf and causing a large number of losses on both sides during the first two periods.

Three Michigan Stars.

Michigan had three linemen who did the best work today that they have done this season. They are Wieman, Weske, and Rehor. It was their consistent tackling and blocking that kept the Quakers from gaining through the front wall and due to their speed in getting down the field long runs after punts were rare. Lineup:

GOPHERS CRUSH BADGER ELEVEN IN 54 TO 0 ROUT

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—A brand of football almost perfect in every way, offensively and defensively, resulted in the defeat of Wisconsin by Minnesota today on Northrup field, 54 to 0.

The score shows plainly the relative merits of the two teams. The battle was watched by some 25,000 fans, some of whom, although Gopher rooters, cheered for the game and plucky Badgers during the final period. This feeling of sportsmanship brought forth the "Ski U. Mah" and the "U. Rah Rah" yells, led first by the Wisconsin leader, directing the cheers of the Gophers, and then by Minnesota's cheer leader, urging a tribute to the Badgers.

Minnesota Has Great Team.

Minnesota showed it is a football team of unlimited possibilities. It had unity of attack and concentration of effort, offensively and defensively, and always had enough in reserve for the supreme effort. The writer must truthfully state, after having seen all the teams in the conference this season, that the Gophers are almost invincible. Coach Williams has developed an eleven which would not only be a match for Ohio State and Northwestern, the Big Nine championship contenders, but also for the best teams in the east.

Take today's game as an example. The men fought with a determination hard to beat. Coach Williams had his players keyed up to such a point that they came on the field with half-arm Jerseys. Their arms and legs were bandaged in such a manner as to warrant danger.

Wyman Ranks with Best.

In Full Back Wyman Minnesota has a man who would be a great player on any team. He started to pile up the points in today's game by scoring the first touchdown after his teammates had worked the ball down the field after receiving the kickoff. He was a power in more ways than one, being all over the field and mingling in every play. Capt. Baston and Long came in for their share of glory, but the lion's share of the honors belong to Wyman.

Baston, the Gopher captain, electrified the crowd by receiving the kickoff on his ten yard line in the third period and worming his way through the entire Badger team in one of the greatest plays of the contest. Simpson kicked the ball to the Gopher captain. Baston caught it on his ten yard line and zigzagged his way through the entire Badger eleven. In making his run Baston used straight arm to the best of advantage, while his teammates helped considerably.

Victors Score at Start.

Minnesota won the toss and elected to defend the south goal. Long received the kickoff and made a neat return of ten yards. The two teams jumbled on difficult plays, but finally the Gophers got the ball on the Badger forty yard line. From this point the terrific line plunging of Wyman and the off-tackle drives of Wise worked the ball to the Badger one yard. With the Wisconsin delegation appealing to its team, Wyman drove off the Badger left tackle for the first score of the unexpected rout. Long missed goal.

There was little activity during the remainder of the period, but it came in bunches later. Forward passes were hurled about the field with reckless abandon, and finally the Gophers got the ball in midfield. By line plunges and off-tackle drives the ball was carried to the Badgers' one yard line and again Wyman answered his call to duty and shot off tackle for another score.

Subs Finish for Northmen.

From then on the game was all in Minnesota's favor. Capt. Baston and his players so successfully executed forward passes and other trick plays that the scoring became a monotony. Coach Williams began to pull out his regulars until there was practically a second eleven on the field when the game ended.

In the Wake of the News
By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

NOV. 15.

I HAVE just had some words with Miss Walters and for a moment I almost wished I was not a lady so I could tell her what I thought of her.

This morning when I started to work Mr. Cooley was still eating his breakfast but was nearly through. When I had walked about half a block I found that I had forgotten my handkerchief and went back after it. As luck would have it Mr. Cooley was just putting on his overcoat and though I tried hard to avoid it we came down the steps together and walked over to the elevated and rode down town together. There was no way I could avoid it only by being rude.

When we had just gotten out of the house I happened to look up at the window of one of the front rooms and it was Miss Walters's room and there she was looking out of the window at us. I was very sorry at the time because I did not want to hurt the poor thing's feelings but now I am afraid I am glad her feelings was hurt the way she acted just now.

We were all alone in the living room and I had merely said good evening to her when I came in. She said good evening back but the way she said it was insulting.

"What is the matter, Miss Walters?" I said. "What have I done to offend you?"

"Nothing is the matter," was her reply.

"You act like there is something the matter," I said. "You act like you was sore at me about something."

"What would I have to get sore at you about?" was her reply.

"I guess we may as well be frank," I said. "You saw me walk down the street with Mr. Cooley this morning, and that is what you are sore about."

"You have a good imagination," was her reply and it was the way she said it more than anything else.

"I am a lady," I said, "and I have no desires to get into an argument with a person like you. But I want to assure you that it was not intentional me walking with Mr. Cooley and I tried hard to avoid it as I do not want you to think I am trying to steal a man who you or anybody else are engaged to be married."

"You are welcome to try," she said.

"I am not going to try," was my reply, "but I guess you know what the results would be if I did try."

"You hate yourself I guess," she said.

"No I do not hate myself," I said, "but if I was you I would hate myself whenever I looked in a looking glass."

Then I left her and came up to my room. A girl that can talk like she did deserves to get their feelings hurt and I guess she would not feel so good about her Mr. Cooley if she had heard our conversation together on the way down town and seen the way he looked at me. If I was in the business of trying to steal men away from other girls I guess there would be no difficulties in this case so it is lucky for Miss Walters that I am through with the opposite sex forever.

NOV. 16.

Mr. Cooley and I went down town together again this morning though I would not of had it happen for the world had I of been able to avoid it.

It was plain that it was intentional on his part this time as he was still at his breakfast when I got up from the table and I thought I would hurry up and be out of the house before he was through. But before I had got more than half a block he overtook me and he was still eating his prunes when I left so he must of deliberately hurried.

I do not know if Miss Walters saw us or not. But I will see that it does not happen again even if I have to come right out and tell Mr. Cooley that I do not care for his attentions under the circumstances.

PURPLE ROLLS UP COUNT ON PURDUE WINS 38 TO 6 TILT

BY EVAN STONE.

Running riot over Purdue in the third quarter yesterday the Purple cleared the decks for a championship game with Ohio State next Saturday at Columbus. The Boilermakers suffered a 38 to 6 defeat at the hands of Coach Murphy's men and after the first half were completely outclassed.

Purdue led at the call of time for the first two periods, 6 to 3, due to two pretty drop kicks by Full Back Huffine. Capt. Driscoll scored three points for the Purple by the aerial route, booting the ball over the cross bar from the thirty yard line at a difficult angle a few minutes after the game started.

The Purple started off in whirlwind fashion. Capt. Driscoll juggled the kickoff, but made a quick recovery and ran back ten yards. Brightmire immediately added six more around left end, and then Capt. Pattie dashed to the visitor's thirty yard line.

Purdue Stops Evanston Attack.

Purdue checked the Purple here and punted after failing to gain. Northwestern had the ball in Purdue territory again a minute later and Driscoll kicked his field goal. The Purple apparently slowed up, while Purdue began to be ambitious. At the beginning of the third quarter Purdue became dangerous, due to some splendid work by Huffine, who booted a field goal when the Purple stopped his line plunging on their twenty yard line. A few minutes later a fumble by Kohler on his twenty yard line gave Huffine another chance at the cross bar, which he accepted for a score.

Williams went in for Brightmire and immediately began to run wild. In three runs he took the ball from his own twenty yard line to the Purdue fifteen yard mark, but here the Purple foozled and Purdue punted out of danger. Northwestern made several onslaughts at the Purdue defense, but failed to earn a score.

Then Purple Gets Busy.

Coaches Murphy and McDevitt evidently put new life into their charges between halves, for as soon as play started in the second half the Purple showed a superior game. The backs began to rip off tackle, through the line, and around the ends. When a check became apparent forward passes were brought into play for long gains. Within twelve minutes Murphy's earnest athletes had counted four touchdowns, and Putnam added four extra points by his accurate goal kicking.

At the start of the fourth quarter Coach Murphy sent a corps of seven substitutes. They immediately began to ape their seniors and had Purdue on the jump until by a couple of slips, which the visitors took advantage of, the substitutes were in warm water themselves. Purdue here had its best chance to score a touchdown, but the Purple held on its five yard line. Norman attempted to punt out from behind his goal line but was forced to kick off at an angle to avoid being blocked. With the ball on Northwestern's fifteen yard line Purdue made first down, aided by a forward pass. Huffine got to the one yard line in two downs.

Williams Makes Feature Run.

Hume then slipped over the goal line, but Purdue was offside. From the five yard line Huffine tried a forward pass to Dixon over the goal line. Here occurred the thrill of the afternoon. E. P. Williams, speed artist, grabbed the pigskin from the immediate vision of

HARVARD BEATEN BY BROWN ELEVEN, 21-0, AS POLLARD STARS

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Brown defeated Harvard in football for the first time in history today by a score of 21 to 0 and as the conqueror of both Yale and Harvard the Providence team stands at the head of the list for championship honors.

The slippery Fritz Pollard, a graduate of Lane Technical High school of Chicago, was directly and solely responsible for Harvard's defeat. His long rushes and his wriggling from the grasp of the Crimson tacklers were the outstanding features of the game for the 28,000 spectators.

Harvard Uses Substitutes.

Harvard had its whole substitute team in the field against Brown, but it is doubtful if the Crimson regulars could have been able to stop the wily colored boy.

Brown scored once in the first half when Pollard got away for a long run of thirty-five yards and brought the ball to Harvard's five yard line. A forward pass failed and the ball went to Harvard, but when Flower punted from behind his own goal line Williams blocked the kick and Brown regained the ball. On the third assault on the line Pollard went over for a touchdown.

Pollard Makes 47 Yard Run.

In the second half Pollard slipped through tackle and raced forty-seven yards for his second touchdown. The third score came when Hillhouse, the Brown back, stood in the middle of the field and threw a long forward pass to Pollard. The latter whirled down the field to Harvard's three yard line, where he was tackled, but Purdy went over for the touchdown shortly after.

Most of the first string Harvard players were taken to Princeton by Head Coach Haughton to see Yale battle with the Tigers. The subs, on whom Haughton placed so much faith, were unable to cope with the scrappy playing of the Brown liner, the elusive Pollard.

GRAHAM'S SCORE LEGAL: REFEREE IS AT FAULT.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Inquiry after the Chicago-Illinois game today revealed that Red Graham's run for a touchdown with an apparently dead ball was allowed because Referee Knight had failed to blow his whistle. An Illinois punt hit the ground and bounded against Rundquist of the Illinois team, and as every one supposed, was a dead ball on that spot. Graham, realizing the referee hadn't blown his whistle as he should on such occasions, picked up the ball, sneaked around the crowd of unsuspecting players, and ran for a touchdown. Graham won his point in the argument and Illinois coaches and students tonight are blaming the referee.

opened up with forward passes. Substitute Snyder, who is especially gifted at shooting passes, was brought into the fray to help. One of those passes shot by Macomber to Sternaman resulted in Illinois' only touchdown, and it was harmless.

When the game was over the 800 or more Chicago rooters gave a snake dance that not only covered the battlefield, but extended clear to the town of Champaign, a mile away. They were overcome with enthusiasm. The Illinois crowd was stunned. It was a regular crowd, too, at least 16,000 persons being present. All the old Illinois grads who could reach the place were on hand for the annual home coming celebration. No one ever seemed to entertain a thought of defeat.

Fierce Attack Stuns Illini.

Even when Chicago made its first touchdown, with the aid of Sternaman's fumble of a punt, no one suspected it would be harmful. After the Maroons followed it by a regular touchdown gained by ferocious attacks all was still on the Illinois side of the field. The team with which Zuppke defeated Minnesota two weeks ago was being trampled upon just as it had trampled upon the Gophers. The men of Stagg, alleged to possess no mentality and no fighting spirit, had suddenly showed a reversal of form and appeared as champions.

The element of luck which entered into the battle caused hard feelings. Chicago got its first touchdown because of that fumble. It got its second because Illinois was penalized for being offside when Chicago tried a forward pass on a fourth down and failed, the ball being sent back and given to Chicago a yard and a half from the goal with afirst down. Then the Maroons got their third touchdown on Red Graham's freak run of forty-five yards while all except one Illinois man stood still, thinking Red was running with a dead ball.

Free for All Follows Game.

Such luck filed the Illinois students, and when the Maroon rooters, dancing on the field after it was over, attempted to tear some of the Illinois colors off the goal posts to take home for souvenirs the Illinis rooters rushed at them. There was a bit of a free for all fight, and we haven't learned yet whether the colors were taken or lost.

NOTES OF MAROON GAME

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Among the Illinois mourners was Fred Lowenthal, who played more than a decade ago.

The entire east stand and part of the west stand was used by the Illinois rooters, and it looked as if every one of them wore a yellow chrysanthemum.

It was almost impossible for the visitors to find lunch in either Champaign or Urbana before the game. Lunchrooms were packed and at least half the visitors went without eating.

The Illinois players came off of the field with the tears streaming down their faces, nearly every man breaking down under the disappointment of defeat before the homecoming crowd.

The Chicago players who showed marked improvement in individual playing today were Charles Higgins and Roy Parker. Carl Brelos and Jack Agar were up to their usual high standard.

The game was remarkably clean, considering the intense rivalry. Not a fifteen yard penalty for roughness was called by the officials. Bart Macomber said it was the cleanest game of the season.

Bob Carmichael, the railway expert who had charge of the Chicago troopers, said that almost 3,000 persons were hauled to Champaign for the game. About 1,200 of that number remained over until Sunday for the return trip.

AGGIES BEATEN BY NOTRE DAME; GAME ENDS 14-0

Hoosiers Score at Start and Rydzewski Makes Long Run for Counter.

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Notre Dame defeated the Michigan Aggies, 14 to 0, in the final game of the season here today. Only once did the Aggies seriously threaten the Catholics' goal, but the local eleven lacked the punch, and after three vain attempts to cary the ball seven yards, Heubel threw it away in an attempted pass over the line.

Notre Dame Scores Early.

Three minutes afetr the first kickoff J. Miller, Notre Dame's fleet full back, shot over the Aggies' goal for a touchdown. Capt. Cofall made twenty yards around right end, and Bergman duplicated his performance around the other end. Three times the local line held when the Catholics were within striking distance, but on the fourth down J. Miller went through tackle for a touchdown. Capt. Cofall kicked goal.

Rydzewski Makes Long Run.

In the second period neither team appeared to have the advantage and both resorted to punting. At the beginning of the third period Rydzewski intercepted a forward pass on the M. A. C. forty-five yard line and ran the remaining distance for a touchdown. Both Capt. Henning of the Aggies and Capt. Cofall of Notre Dame left the game because of injuries.

CORNELL TEAM VICTOR OVER MASS. AGGIES, 37-0.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Cornell easily defeated Massachusetts Agricultural college, 37 to 0, on a mud soaked field. Conditions made open play impossible and both teams resorted to line plunging. The Ithaca back field gained almost at will. Speed made several long runs and scoring four of the touchdowns. In six attempts only one goal from touchdown was kicked. Fritz Shiverick, Cornell's star quarter back, did not play, the coaches saving him for the Pennsylvania game. Tilley, Cornell's right guard, injured a leg in the third period and may be out for the rest of the season.

DARTMOUTH HELD TO TIE BY WEST VIRGINIA, 7 TO 7

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 18.—Dartmouth closed its football season today by playing a 7 to 7 tie with West Virginia. Dartmouth's score came in the third period on a long forward pass from Cannell to Dussossoit. Gerrish kicked the goal. The visitors tied the score in the last five minutes of play on a series of rushes by Hite and Rodgers. Rodgers carried the ball over the line and Chenoweth kicked the goal. The game was played on a field two inches deep in mud.

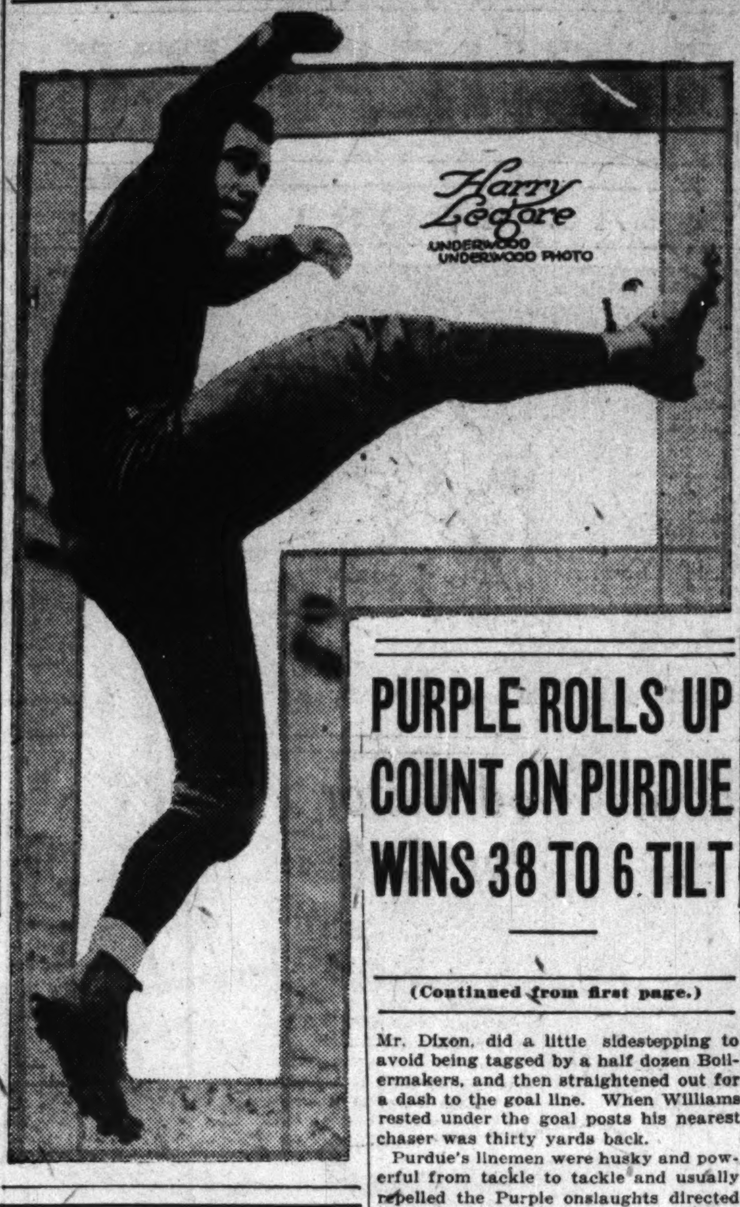
YALE'S VETERAN PLAYER WHO SCORED TOUCHDOWN AGAINST PRINCETON TIGERS



NOTES OF PURPLE GAME

The Purple freshmen scrimmaged against a greased pig between halves. The pig scored two touchdowns but failed to kick goal.

O'Flaherty won $40 yesterday on the Purple. He placed $1,200 against $40, and was nervy enough to offer to double it again between halves when Purdue led, 6 to 3.

Director Omer was pleased with the crowd, which numbered about 8,000. Mr. Omer is so happy over the gate receipts of the year that he was moved to promise the reporters he would install electric light in the press coop next year. Evan Stone would like a stove.

William O'Flaherty, Evanston's most prominent German, rode to the game in the electric he won betting on the Iowa-Northwestern game. "O" had his boat newly painted a bright green. The Northwestern-Iowa score was printed on each side of the body in bold black letters. Purple streamers added to the effect.

Hot stove talk by the Purple rooters is to the effect that seven back field men must start against Ohio State because they can't agree on any set of four. An agreement was reached that the start didn't mean anything more than a play in strategy, anyway, and that the banner selection could well be left to "Murph."

OPEN PLAYS OF CARROLL BEAT LAKE FOREST, 25-12

Waukesha, Wis., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—On a sloppy field Carroll college ended its season by defeating Lake Forest, 25 to 12, on open plays. PURPLE ROLLS UP COUNT ON PURDUE WINS 38 TO 6 TILT

Mr. Dixon, did a little sidestepping to avoid being tagged by a half dozen Boilermakers, and then straightened out for a dash to the goal line. When Williams rested under the goal posts his nearest chaser was thirty yards back.

Purdue's linemen were husky and powerful from tackle to tackle and usually repelled the Purple onslaughts directed toward the center of the line unless the play fooled them by its deception. The visitors' main weakness was their inability to break up Murphy's forward pass plays. Kohler made three-fourths of his passes count for gains, and tosses by the other backs were nearly as successful.

KANSAS BEATS NEBRASKA, FIRST TIME SINCE 1909, 7-3

Lincoln, Nb., Nov. 18.—The University of Nebraska suffered defeat at the hands of the University of Kansas here this afternoon by a score of 7 to 3. It was the first defeat Nebraska has suffered since 1911 and the first time Kansas has beaten Nebraska since 1909. Capt. Corey's place kick in the first quarter gave Nebraska its only score. Kansas came back with a whirlwind attack in the third period and three times carried the ball to within ten yards of the Nebraska goal. The third time Nellson carried that over and Woodward kicked goal.

BUCKEYES JOLT CASE TEAM IN 28 TO 0 GAME

Ohio State Holds Rivals to Four First Downs—Chick Harley Victors' Star.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Playing rings around Case, Ohio State soundly spanked the local eleven, 28 to 0, and cinched the Ohio conference championship today.

It was State from start to finish. Only once during the entire game did the Cleveland team make two consecutive firstdowns, and only four firstdowns were recorded by them. Not once did Case have a chance to score.

The Buckeyes, with their star, Harley, playing up to his record, took the aggressive from the opening whistle. Left Tackle Boesel's skill in blocking punts drove String Howard, Case's star booter, out of the punting department. Four times State crossed the Case goal, Harley making three of the touchdowns, and on several other occasions the victors had the ball within yards of the goal.

SMASHES OF WILLIAMS BEAT AMHERST, 26 TO 0

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Williams amply revenged her last year's defeat at the hands of Amherst by a 26 to 0 victory. Outweighed eight pounds to the man today, the Amherst line was unable to withstand constant pounding, especially by Lewis, Williams' 195 pound full back.

Capt. Goodrich, at half back, featured the Amherst play, he and Full Back Melchor making the principal gains for their team. The contest was loosely played, the first touchdown coming after a recovered fumble by Blodgett. The second score came soon after, Williams carrying the ball down the field by straight football. Plunges by Gifford and Lewis enabled the latter to go over for the third score, while Rochester, substituting for the latter, pushed the ball over for the final touchdown just as the game ended.

which was quite as impressive in its disintegration as it was when massed about the field, but the game is the thing.

Le Gore was the first man to cross Princeton's goal line this year. That, in itself, is something, but the Tigers find no consolation tonight in a season which ended in a double defeat by Harvard and Yale.

Dave Tibbott should not be judged too harshly for his failure to kick two goals. He went in cold, with a knee none too sound, and kicked poorly. The manner of handling Dave Tibbott, however, was open to criticism.

Tigers Gain Much More Ground.

Figures of the game do not begin to show the superiority of Yale over Princeton. In truth the figures of the game are distinctly misleading in some respects. Yale gained 103 yards by straight rushing, twenty-one yards by forward passing, and forty-three yards by running back punts and kickoffs for a total of 172 yards. After deducting seventy yards lost by penalties, a grand total is left of 102 yards.

Against this Princeton gained eighty yards by straight rushing, 131 yards by forward passing, and thirty-three yards by running back punts for a total of 244 yards. Deducting twenty-five yards for penalties, a total of 219 yards looms up.

Thus Princeton gained twice as much ground as Yale in the run of the game, and yet was beaten.

It may be suggested in passing that Yale gained on an average of two yards to a rush, and Princeton about the same, which shows how ineffective was the attack of both teams by good old fashioned football.

REO

There Must be a Reason And an Excellent Reason

The supremacy of Reo the Fifth is not, could not be, the result either of accident or of advertising

EITHER OR BOTH these factors could be, and sometimes have been, responsible for a temporary supremacy, a fleeting, seeming success in the automobile business.

BUT WHEN YOU CONSIDER that Reo the Fifth is not only supreme in its class today—the acknowledged "Gold Standard of Values;" that it is "first choice" of discriminating buyers to the extent that always the demand has been greater than the possible output of the big 30-acre Reo factories—

AND WHEN YOU CONSIDER that Reo the Fifth won the title "The Incomparable Four" seven years ago and has maintained its proud position ever since—you will agree that there's only one factor that could have done that—namely, quality in the product itself.

AS A MATTER OF FACT there are many reasons for the supremacy of this great Reo.

"50 PER CENT OVERSIZE" in all vital parts, the Reo standard "factor of safety" is one of them. That "50 per cent more for certainty" is the prime factor in that other Reo attribute—"Low cost of upkeep" which is, after all, the biggest factor in Reo selling.

THE SATISFIED USER is the best salesman—trite, the saying, but true.

AND HIS SATISFACTION and his enthusiastic recommendation of a Reo is the result of his experience—his low operation and upkeep cost, as he has found it in actual practice—not in the ads alone.

ANOTHER FACTOR that has brought about the desired result has been that inflexible Reo policy of expanding slowly, cautiously, of never making any more Reos than the Reo Folk could make and make every Reo good—fully up to the Reo standard in every detail.

DURING THE PAST YEAR there has been a great temptation—and sorry to say, some makers have yielded to it—to make more cars to supply the great demand.

THAT COULD ONLY BE DONE—get this, it's the vital fact—that could only be done by sacrificing quality—accepting materials of inferior quality.

THE STEEL SITUATION was such that it was absolutely impossible to obtain more of the quality Reo puts in—at any price.

THE REO FOLK WOULD NOT lower the standard one iota.

REO IS HERE TO STAY—so no condition of the moment can change that great policy.

THOSE WHO DID yield to that temptation are even now—so soon, too!—paying the penalty in lost prestige, lessened reputation, lessened demand.

EVEN THOUGH YOU ARE NOT in the trade, you know it. You can name the concerns that tried to meet the demand—and lost ground permanently.

THERE ARE MANY REASONS, as we've said. Space forbids naming them all here. The one big reason is the sum of all the others—namely, Reo quality as established in the first Reo the Fifth—as you get it today in your Reo the Fifth.

THE SAME BIG BEAUTIFUL CAR—same quality of materials—same painstaking workmanship—and same "50 percent oversize"—overstrength—in all parts.

THE PRESENT PRICE, $875, will apply to your purchase if your order is in our hands at once. The Reo Company reserves the right to increase it without notice. It may be necessary at any moment on account of the material situation.

SO DON'T DELAY—don't wait till the big January rush sets in. Order now and be sure of your Reo at the present price, $875 f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Michigan.

DE PAUL PREPS BATTER ST. JOHN'S ELEVEN, 21-0

Light Chicagoans Outplay Crack Eastern Team at Every Angle.

BIG CROWD AT BATTLE.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Demonlike football, with a real punch in every attack, brought about the biggest prep football upset in years yesterday, when De Paul academy trounced the St. Johns academy eleven of Danvers, Mass., 21 to 0, at Weeghman park, before a record high school crowd of 8,000 fans. St. Johns came west with a string of seven victories, including triumphs over Tufts college freshmen, Boston High school, and Medford High; also a fifteen pound advantage in weight and the prestige of an 8 to 6 victory over the Chicagoans two years ago.

Contrary to general principles of football, where the handicap in weight is so great, Coach Paupa instructed his youngsters to smash the forward wall, and by means of such assault two touchdowns were hammered across. The third and final score was due to as pretty a forward pass as ever was executed by a high school team, being thirty yards across the gridiron, with the receiver standing under the posts.

Figures Show Why De Paul Won.

Twenty-one times De Paul made first down, while the opposition was able to do only one-third as well. Ground gained from scrimmage advanced the ball 333 yards for the local Catholics, while St. Johns was held to 128 yards, demonstrating conclusively that the De Paul front is equally strong as its attack. In the second quarter the easterners made only twelve yards, while De Paul covered 109 yards, and in only one quarter, the final, was there any evidence of equality in the ground gaining ability of the rivals.

That De Paul didn't score an additional touchdown or two was due to the great kicking of Murphy, St. Johns' left half. His punts averaged close to fifty-five yards, and at the start he caught the locals unawares with a punt over the heads of the De Paul players. Capt. Regan of the visitors was the only easterner who gained ground consistently, and he was well worn out with the extra burden he carried. Every other St. Johns player was stopped.

Schneider and Grundman Star.

For De Paul Schneider and Grundman shone with especial brilliance. Three times Schneider got away with sprints averaging thirty-five yards, and each was largely responsible for placing the ball down the field where Grundman, with his line plunges, carried it over.

Coach Paupa's youngsters got off to a good start. Following an exchange of punts, De Paul got the ball on the thirty yard line. Sweeney hit center for ten yards, Schneider made the same distance off tackle, and Sweeney found center for eight yards. Grundman advanced a yard by a line plunge, then went over for the first marker on a similar play. Collins kicked goal.

Two touchdowns in the third session made the result decisive. Regan was nailed on the eighteen yard line after the De Paul kickoff, and two plays later St. Johns fumbled on the fifteen yard line. Schneider made four yards, Collins three, Schneider two more, and Grundman found left tackle for the second marker. Collins kicked goal.

Pass Nets Final Points.

Later in the period De Paul worked the ball to the ten yard line, but an attempted trick play fizzled and Nielson recovered the ball on the twenty-five yard line. Then Schneider heaved a forward pass to Grundman, who raced behind the goal and caught the oval without opposition near him.

The visitors staged a rally in the final period and worked the ball to De Paul's ten yard line, but the locals held and punted out of danger. Time was called shortly afterward, with the ball in midfield. Lineup:

ANDERSON'S TOE WINS TITLE TILT FOR ENGLEWOOD

BY PREP.

Englewood High, near champion of the Chicago High league, gained greater glory yesterday when it triumphed over Evanston High, suburban league champion, 3 to 2, in one of the most sensational struggles ever witnessed for the Cook county title. A crowd of 3,000 saw the game at Schorling park.

Ralph (Rollie) Anderson, Englewood's right end, was the hero, for it was his right toe that brought victory to the south siders by a drop kick from the twenty yard line.

Makes Score on Bad Pass.

With only four minutes left to play, Anderson dropped back to the twenty yard line and Center Keeley made a miserable pass, the ball striking the ground and bounding to the left of Anderson. Rollie picked the ball out of the air while the Evanston line was rushing at him and made a perfect drop kick between the bars. The Englewood rooters rushed on the field and grabbed Anderson, and it was some minutes before the officials could restore order.

Evanston scored its points in the first five minutes. This team won the toss and defended the west goal. After failing to make first down, Capt. Hellstrom kicked to Englewood's ten yard line, where Englewood encountered the same trouble, having the ball on its own five yard line at the third down. Full Back Leonard, who had made two fumbles in line plunges, dropped back five yards behind his own line to kick out. The ball was passed to him and he fumbled again. Left End Greer of Evanston pounced on him and the suburban champs gained a safety.

McDonald in Long Dash.

Quarter Back McDonald of Evanston made the longest run of the game just at the close of the first half, when he intercepted a pass and ran sixty yards to Englewood's twenty-five yard line. His short legs stopped him from making a touchdown on this run, as he was tackled by Keeley.

Evanston threatened in the last three minutes of play when Hellstrom made a pass of thirty yards to the champs' thirty yard line, where he tried a drop kick, but failed. Englewood downed the ball on its own five yard line and made a gain of four yards from where Bromstedt was thrown for a loss of seven yards to his two yard line. It looked as if another safety would result, but Leonard went through for seven yards, when the whistle blew. Lineup:

ENGLEWOOD High school, heavyweight champions of the southern division, defeated Schurz, title holder of the northern division, 2 to 1, in their match in the final series for the Chicago High school championship at Bricklayers' field yesterday afternoon. Playing with the wind in the first half, they had the better of the tack and after fifteen minutes of play Spira scored on a straight shot after Michaels had fisted the ball out a short distance.

In the second half Jensen of Schurz missed returning a long kick and Wellman dashed by him and scored. Later Wellman again got the ball on the right wing and, getting by the backs, scored with a shot from fifteen yards out.

BREEDERS WAR ON WORMS IN DOGS

Breeders guard against worms in their dogs as against a blight. They know worms to be subtle health destroyers and very difficult to detect. Besides, worms impair the dog's resistance, opening an easy path for all other kinds of disease.

Vermilax Worm Remedy is "rough on worms" without being at all rough on the dog. It ejects, within an hour, all stomach and intestinal worms; and continues to exert a beneficial influence after they are gone by toning up his whole system. Ask any breeder of Blue Ribbon dogs about Vermilax Worm Remedy.

This and other Vermilax Supreme Dog Remedies are sold by Buck & Rayner's six stores; Public Drug Co., and other druggists. Also for sale by Von Lengerke & Antoine, Kaempfer's Bird Store, and Atlantic & Pacific Bird Store. Wholesale Distributors, Fuller-Morrisson Company.

HOOSIERS WIN 14 TO 3 CLASH FROM FLORIDA

Get Scores in Last Half After Field Goal Gives Southern Team Lead.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Indiana won from Florida today, 14 to 3, in a game played on a muddy field before 6,000 people. The Hoosier eleven failed to score in the first half, although it had two or three chances, which were thrown away.

The first half ended 3 to 0 in favor of the boys from Dixie. Capt. Farrier booted a beautiful field goal from the twenty-five yard line. The score was made possible when a forward pass by Hess was intercepted by Wood. The Indiana tackling and interference was ragged in the first half, but was much improved after Stiehm had told his men a few things during the intermission.

Stiehm Saves His Regulars.

Indiana used only three plays during the entire game, Stiehm kept his best stunts under cover because of the presence of three Purdue scouts in the grandstands. The Indiana lineup included many substitutes, most of the regulars being saved for fear of injuries before the Boilermaker contest.

Indiana's first touchdown was made near the close of the third quarter. A. Hess, Keever, and Hiatt worked the ball down to the eight yard line. Capt. McIntosh, who had been on the bench, was sent in on the next play. He carried the ball over, going around Right End Wood for a touchdown.

In the final period Hathaway on a line buck crossed the southerners' goal line, and kicked goal. He was then withdrawn from the lineup.

Florida Captain Breaks Ankle.

With only two minutes to play Capt. Farrier of the Southerners made a tackle and had his left ankle broken. He was carried from the field, and taken to the Bloomington hospital in an ambulance. There the fracture was set by a university physician.

WINTER TENNIS DRAWS 1,500 TO MUNICIPAL PIER

Fourteen Matches Played in Debut of the Sport—Fifty Teams Registered.

Winter tennis made its debut to the national pastimes yesterday at the Municipal pier, fourteen matches being played, seven of which were finished. The others will be completed along with the games scheduled today.

Fifteen hundred people journeyed to the pier to witness the matches. Good playing featured all of the contests. The Beasley-Beasley and Dolan-Bigger match furnished the most interest. The first game went to the latter team, 12 to 10, but the Beasley "twins" copped the next two games, 6—2 and 6—3. The Crandall-Joyce and Dahl-Sikorske match was spectacular, both teams showing good form. The former team won the first game, 6—3, and then battled to moonlight, when they agreed to call it a day. The former team was leading, 4—1.

Other Match Results.

Another interesting match was won by McKiernan and Linenthal, who defeated Young and Strahorn, 7—5 and 10—8. Other matches resulted as follows:

The tournament opened at 2:30 p. m. and was called at 4:30 p. m. on account of darkness. Unfinished matches to be played today will start at 10 a. m.

Fifty Teams Registered.

Fifty teams have registered in the tourney. There are three courts on the north side upper tier parallel to the street car tracks and two courts in the auditorium. There are no heating facilities on the pier at present, but the conditions were favorable to good playing and it was comfortable for the spectators.

The courts are laid out the same as the outdoor courts. Regulation nets, rackets, and balls are used.

FALSE COLORS!

Great Midiron Shots Due to Inability to Use Mashie.

Bob Robertson, assistant general freight agent of the Monon, makes no claim to great golfing ability, at least not near where he might be called upon to demonstrate it.

Playing recently over the French Lick course he succeeded in notching par fours on each of the first two holes, these satisfactory figures being due largely to accurate runups with his midiron.

As they walked to the third tee his caddie remarked: "I knowed you was a regular as soon as you called for your midiron to make them approaches." Bob did not dampen the kid's enthusiasm, but later when telling the story confessed he used the midiron because of his inability to use a mashie.

EVANSTON CLUB SECURES SITE FOR NEW LINKS

Pioneer North Side Golf Organization Will Move to Dempster Street.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Forced by building inroads, the cutting of the drainage canal, and other causes to make material changes in their course, members of the Evanston Golf club adjusted themselves to changing conditions and kept the club intact. Expiration of the present leases is in sight, but the patriots were determined to keep going.

Now comes the announcement of a new Evanston Golf club to succeed the old one, which is the pioneer club of that vicinity. The new grounds committee, consisting of Chairman C. Fred Yegge, J. M. S. Waring, and Gilbert M. Weeks, has been working for some time. They now have under option 209 acres lying just south of Dempster street, about two miles west of the city. It is partly wooded and is in every way adapted for a high class golf course.

New Plans O. K.'d by Club.

At the annual meeting of the club a resolution was adopted approving of the general plan submitted, and the board of directors was instructed to proceed to acquire the property for a reorganized club to consist of 350 members, and follow out the plan which includes an initiation fee of $400 and annual dues of $125.

The financial plan includes an issue of bonds to the amount of $135,000. The cost of the ground and equipment of the course, including a $40,000 clubhouse, was put at $269,000. Motor buses are included in the estimate and members can reach the grounds in ten minutes from Dempster street station.

It is planned to start work as soon as possible and have the new course ready by the time the leases on the present course expire. The issue of bonds for half the total cost and their retirement within ten years will insure the members a good initial equity which will continue to increase.

Officers of Club.

The officers are: Fred C. Yegge, president; J. M. S. Waring, vice president; H. B. Lawrence, secretary and treasurer. The directors are: R. H. Aishton, Gilbert M. Weeks, Rufus C. Dawes, C. H. Bosworth, H. E. Byram, and Fred Arnd.

Brown of Williams was the individual leader over the five and one-half miles course in Franklin park, finishing in 28:38 2-5. The competing colleges, with their standing by points, were: Williams, 53; Maine, 56; Dartmouth, 58; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 103; Worcester Polytechnic institute, 126; Bates and Brown, tied at 148 each; Massachusetts Agricultural college, 193; Bowdoin and Colby entered teams, but they did not start.

INDOOR LEAGUE TO OPEN SEASON TUESDAY NIGHT

Three Games to Start Schedule in K. C. Organization.

Indoor baseball's major league season will be inaugurated Tuesday night with the opening of the Knights of Columbus league. Three games are listed for opening night, one in each division of the league.

Thirteen teams will battle for the city championship. The roster has been reduced considerably from that of last year, but the stars of the league have been gathered on the surviving teams and the brand of ball is expected to be better than ever before.

In the west section, which boasts the championship St. Patrick's club, only three nines will compete in the preliminary round. Besides the champions, Hennepin and Barry will round out the division. Father Perez, Madonna, Loyola, and Leo XIII. councils will furnish a four cornered south division. The north will be represented by the biggest squad of the league, six teams. They are the De Soto, north division champions, Commercial, Daniel O'Connell, Ravenswood, Tonti, and Marquette.

Although the three western teams are conceded to include most of the cream of local talent, the race in the south section also will attract considerable interest. Madonna won the southern title last year with a strong lineup, and the other contenders were not far behind in playing strength. Perez, under the management of Johnny Enders, secretary of the Chicago Junior Baseball league, is expected to make a strong bid for a place in the city finals. Enders has lined up a team of fast youngsters and hopes to duplicate the performance of the O'Connell nine of two years ago, when O'Connell's kid team almost won the Chicago championship.

NEW ORLEANS RACE MEET NOT AFFECTED BY SUIT.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The recent decision of the Louisiana Supreme court in the application of Miss Jean Gordon for a receiver for the Business Men's Racing association will not affect the winter meeting here from Jan. 1 to Feb. 20.

The point passed on by the court was merely whether one stockholder could bring suit for a receiver. The court held affirmatively, but a rehearing has been asked. If it is refused the case will then go back to the lower courts to be tried on its merits, and a final decision cannot be had for several months.

Stables already are arriving and the coming meeting will be the largest ever held here.

PARK NATATORS TAKE MEET.

Independence park swimmers scored their first victory of the season last night, defeating the Chicago Hebrew institute juniors, 62 to 20. The victors won every event except the plunge for distance, in which Jenkins, leading park contestant, was disqualified for using his feet.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—Augusta, Ga., has been selected by Manager Griffith for the training camp of the Washington American team next spring. The team has trained for the last five years at Charlottesville, Va. Battery candidates will go to Augusta early in March, but the remainder of the squad will put in only about three weeks in Augusta.

MRS. BRITTON SUCCEEDS HUBBY AS CARDS' PRESIDENT

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Schuyler Britton, who yesterday filed suit for divorce against her husband, today was elected president of the St. Louis National league club to succeed her husband. The resignation of Schuyler Britton was read this morning. The paper had been in his wife's hand ever since Britton was elected president of the club.

Mrs. Britton sent for Miller Huggins, manager of the team, who now is in Martinsville, Ind., to come to St. Louis to discuss the reorganization of the team. Huggins will continue as manager, she said, but the woman magnate is planning an upheaval of the players.

It was announced that Mrs. Britton would be the permanent head of the ball club. She will attend the meeting of directors of the National league on Dec. 12, as head of the Cardinals.

O. B. TO BATTLE FRATERNITY.

New York, Nov. 18.—The real reason for the decision of Ban Johnson to call the American league magnates together in New York at the same time the National league moguls are holding forth next month became apparent today when it became known that the big leaguers are beginning to lay plans for a bitter fight with the Baseball Players' fraternity. Recent demands and ultimatums issued by Dave Fultz, who heads the ball players, are of such a nature, magnates declare, that it is impossible to meet them.

STECHER-CUTLER BOUT SET.

After nearly a year of dickering a match between Joe Stecher and Charley Cutler seems assured at last. Stecher and his manager have signed up, and the contest, a finish bout, is to be held Thanksgiving night at the Coliseum. Cutler is in training at the Mystic Athletic club, and Stecher will arrive here the latter part of the week to finish his training.

MINORS EXPLAIN NEED OF SECOND NATIONAL BOARD

Would Speed Rulings on Disputes—Many Bosses Here on Way Home.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Between trains yesterday Chicago was full of inmor league club owners on their way east, west, and north from the annual meeting of their national association in New Orleans. Except for the large, overdue grist of business to be ground out by the national board of arbitration, the minor magnates ended their sessions on Thursday.

The chief reason why the minors want a "No. 2" national commission is to quicken action on disputed cases, the majority of which now have to await the annual sessions of the organization because the national board cannot be assembled at any other time.

Ewing to See Johnson.

Few of the minors remained in town, but among the exceptions were Presidents Cal Ewing of the San Francisco club and Johnny Powers of the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast league. Ewing, who is sponsor for the proposed new adjunct to the national commission, made a date with President Johnson of the American league for a conference tomorrow morning to discuss the proposition.

Powers will remain for a week to renew acquaintance with friends in his native city and receive congratulations on winning the Pacific Coast pennant. He heard nothing before leaving California about Frank Chance coming to Chicago to manage the Cubs but was glad to learn there is no truth in it, although he said he would not stand in the way of such a move if it had depended on him.

Indian Boss Optimistic.

Lee Fohl, manager of the Cleveland Indians, remained over a day to confer with President Dunn relative to plans for next season. He found nothing on the market in New Orleans worth purchasing but believes he has enough new material already to make the Indians quite a noisy bunch in the 1917 race.

CLEVELAND WILL SEND PITCHERS SOUTH EARLY.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 18.—Battery men of the Cleveland club will be sent to the spring training camp at New Orleans at least ten days in advance of the other players, according to plans announced by Manager Lee Fohl.

"We got the jump on the other clubs last spring because our pitchers were ready, and, barring accidents, I propose to have them in as good shape next April," Fohl explained.

Eleven pitchers and three catchers will form the advance squad of the club, which is to report about Feb. 20. The men are Morton, Coveleski, Beebe, Boehling, Coumbe, Gould, Lambeth, Smith, Pettit, Klepfer, and Penner, pitchers; O'Neil, Daly, and De Berry, catchers.

Aren't you about ready to stop "cigarette-shopping"?

You've probably tried out more different brands of cigarettes than you can remember. It's discouraging. And expensive.

Naturally, you'd stop this "shopping" around—quick—if you could find a cigarette that never grew tiresome.

Fatima is such a cigarette. Men don't simply get Fatimas—they adopt them. Because they find that Fatimas never grow tiresome.

Fatimas are a SENSIBLE cigarette inasmuch as they are always cool and comfortable to the throat and tongue.

And their Turkish blend of pure tobaccos is so delicately balanced that they leave you feeling fine and "fit" even after an unusually long smoking day.

RING MANAGERS FAIL TO SHINE AS PREDICTORS

Few Worse Pickers than Pilots of Scrappers—Tale of Emil Thiry.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

When it comes to prognosticating on ring battles, the men most closely connected with the sport fail to shine. Perhaps there are no worse pickers than the managers, who do most of the talking and make selections for the benefit of the scribes who report the contests. This was made quite evident only a short time ago when Sam Marburger, manager of Jack Dillon, the Indianapolis light heavyweight, paid the writer a visit just before the date set for Dillon's bout with Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul phantom, at St. Paul.

"Well, it looks like a good bout on which to set the glims," opened up the writer on Marburger. "How does it look to you?"

"Yes, it ought to be a corking battle," returned the manager.

"In making 163 pounds don't you think Dillon will lack some of his strength and endurance?" we inquired.

Predicts K. O. for Dillon.

"O, I know what's on your mind," was Marburger's comeback. "You think that Gibbons will go so fast that he will score a one sided victory on points in ten rounds and that there will be no knockout. Well, you are guessing wrong there, boy. Dillon will be plenty fast for Mr. Gibbons, and I actually believe the contest will be ended before the limit, with Dillon the winner by the knockout route."

How Marburger picked out correctly what was on the mind of the writer is somewhat of a mystery, but it proves that as a mind reader he is a star, as compared to picking winners, for the result of the contest shows that the phantom outstepped the "man killer" by something like eight of the ten rounds, which gave him the popular verdict without much room for a dispute.

Finds Heavies Easier.

There is another interesting feature to this Gibbons-Dillon combat. The Hoosier scrapper, everybody concedes, is a wonder—for any man who can give away thirty to forty pounds to heavyweights, as Dillon has done, and then hand them lacings deserves a lot of credit. But Dillon has discovered that fighting heavyweights is really easier than scrapping middleweights of class. In stacking up against Gibbons he found the speed that heavyweights cannot carry, and while no one looked for such a thing as the phantom's knocking out Jack, it was generally believed that Michael would travel so fast that his opponent couldn't catch him. That's just what he did.

Whether the making of 163 pounds (or 162, for that was the notch he made at weighing in time) served to weaken the Hoosier nobody has been able to learn, for no information on this point has leaked out from the Dillon contest since the bout. If it did Dillon has no one to blame but himself, for he forced Mike to hunch the notch one and a half pounds before he would consent to sign articles for the match.

Low Weight Weakening.

His reason for doing this was that he thought Gibbons was trying to weaken him by demanding the lower figure, just as Packey McFarland did the phantom when they met for that memorable contest at Brighton Beach. For that contest Mike made 147 pounds, which took away his strength and made him an easy victim for the cunning McFarland.

That was why Dillon balked on the original weight demanded by Mike, but Gibbons is a pretty shrewd chap himself (no one ever has been able to figure how McFarland drew him into the trap) and figured it out to a nicety that if he could trim the "man killer" at any weight he could do it at 163 pounds just as easily. It was good judgment.

Emil Thiry Picks Loser.

Another example of a manager going wrong on a bout was that of Emil Thiry, otherwise known as Swaylegs, who used to manage Packey McFarland in the "good old days." Thiry was one of those who attended the bout between World's Champion Lightweight Freddie Welsh and Charley White at Colorado Springs last Labor day. He wasn't there in any official capacity—simply to see the boys hook up. A few days before the meeting the writer asked Swaylegs who he thought was going to be returned the winner.

"Oh, it looks like Welsh to me. I think he has too much class and cleverness for Charley," was Thiry's reply.

Then again, twenty-four hours before the bout, we approached Thiry and propounded the same interrogation.

Switches Guess to White.

"I've switched to White now," replied Thiry. "I think Charley will cop Welsh on the chin with a left hook and knock him out."

Thiry got all tangled up in his dope, and the more he thought about the contest the harder it became for him to decide which man he really thought would win.

RICHIE MITCHELL LEARNS QUICKLY

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 18.—Lightweight Richie Mitchell will agree to fight Benny Leonard in a ten round bout in New York on Dec. 1 if the Gotham promoters will raise their ante $500. The New Yorkers offered the Brewery city mitt wielder $1,500, but Mitchell wants a guarantee of $2,000, with a privilege of the house. In their offer the promoters said it was not the money that Leonard wants so much as to put Mitchell in the discard.

New York, Nov. 18.—Harry Wills of New Orleans knocked out Jack Thompson of Tulsa, Okla., in the ninth round of their ten round boxing match here tonight. They are Negro heavyweights.

I. A. C. AND LA GRANGE HIGH END HARE AND HOUNDS RUNS.

The last of a series of six weekly hare and hounds runs with La Grange High school distance men was run off by Illinois A. C. athletes yesterday. The "hares" were Corrigan and Novotny of La Grange. Starting from the La Grange High school they led the sixteen "hounds" a chase of four miles. The hounds leaders finished in the following order: Cameron, I. A. C., first; Nott, I. A. C., second; Miller, I. A. C., third; Bickler, I. A. C., fourth; Bubolz, I. A. C., fifth; Anderson, La Grange, sixth. Time: Hares, 36:00; hounds, 52:07.

AMES WINS CROSS COUNTRY

Ames, Ia., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—Ames won the Missouri Valley conference cross country race today over the Ames five mile course. Husted of Ames was the first man to finish. His time was 27:44. Kansas was second and Missouri third. Nebraska university and Kansas Aggies failed to arrive for the run.

CHICAGO PIN MEN LEAD IN ST. LOUIS CONTESTS.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 18.—[Special.]—The Mineralites, the first Chicago team to roll in the middle western bowling tournament here, took first place tonight with a score of 2,789. The Townsend-Urbanheims of St. Joseph, Mo., were second with 2,700.

A slump by Jack Reilly and Grof in the final game kept the Chicago team below the 2,800 mark.

Tomorrow the Chicagoans will shoot in doubles and singles, but no teams are scheduled to bowl. Up to a late hour the score of the Mineralites had not been bettered and it seemed assured they would head the list for tonight at least. Score:

WELLING ARRIVES TO MEET HAMMER IN RACINE RING

Hopes to Make Amends for Previous Defeat by Chicago Lightweight.

Joe Welling, lightweight star, who forsook the lights of Clark street for those of New York's Broadway, returned yesterday to imbibe some of the tonic air from Lake Michigan in preparation for his clash with Ever Hammer at Racine, Wis., on Tuesday night.

Yesterday afternoon Welling boxed several rounds at the Ragen's Colts' gymnasium and looked to be in good shape, needing only light workouts to keep him on edge until he steps into the ring. According to Manager Jimmy Johnston, the former Chicago boxer has shown great improvement in the east and has developed a valuable asset in a knockout punch. His performances in the east indicate he is traveling upward in the pugilistic scale, and Johnston is confident he will climb to the top rung of the lightweight ladder.

Welling is anxious to make amends for a previous defeat at the hands of Hammer at Kenosha. Hammer, after defeats by Johnny Dundee and Benny Leonard, believes that another victory will put him once more on the upgrade.

Joe Dory of Racine will meet Dan Gallagher of Chicago in an eight round bout, and Charley Henderson of Chicago will tackle John Graham, a Racine featherweight.

ARMY MARCHES TO VICTORY OVER "Y" COLLEGE, 17 TO 2.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The Army beat the Springfield Y. M. C. A. Training school eleven in the last home game of the season, 17 to 2. The cadets have gone through the season without a defeat. The visitors' attack lacked drive and power and their line yield at critical times. The West Point men also were ragged in their work. Oliphant made some sensational dashes culminating in his touchdown and goal. Vidal's long runs and his pretty field goal from the thirty yard line also were features. Cole was thrown behind his line for a safety in the last period.

West secured nine tricks.

A player should only cover an honor when he knows definitely what cards he expects to make good in his own hand or his partner's.

At trick three west started a crisscross finesse and north fell gently into the trap. At trick seven south covered the jack of hearts with the king, although it would have been impossible to arrange the remaining cards in such manner that going up would gain a trick.

West finally secured a rather easy game when he should have had a hard struggle for the odd trick.

I was the dealer [S], and bid one no trump. West doubled, and the bidding stopped. I was only able to make four tricks and lost 800 points. Was the bidding incorrect or incomplete here? Do you think I could have made more tricks here? What should have been west's first lead? S. B.

Ans.—West probably intended his partner to take him out with his best suit. He would better have gone to hearts. You should have taken six tricks. West should have opened with the 4 of hearts.

Clubs—Ace, queen, 10.
Hearts—Jack, 10, 7, 6.
Spades—Ace, king, 4, 3.
Diamonds—10, 8.

Third hand passes. Fourth hand holds the following: Diamonds, ace, king, queen, and 3 small ones; hearts, ace, queen, and 3 small ones; spade, one; club, one.

Is this a takeoff for hearts or diamonds, or should fourth hand let the no trump stand? H. B. N.

Ans.—With the deal you give I think the dummy should switch to hearts, as a two suit hand would better be played with a trump.

KANSAS BEATS NEBRASKA FIRST TIME IN SEVEN YEARS.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 18.—For the first time in seven years Kansas today triumphed over Nebraska on the football field, winning by a score of 7 to 3.

The Jayhawk victory, while cleancut and merited, scarcely showed the strength of the two teams, Kansas being outplayed, with the ball in her territory in three of the four periods. In straight, old time football Nebraska excelled, but Kansas was admirable in defense at critical periods, and proved superior in forward passing.

Shinni, Lindsay, and Woodward were the Kansas stars. For Nebraska Corey, Cook, Gardiner, and Otoupalik were the chief ground gainers.

CARPENTER AND PECK WIN.

The feature event at the Lincoln park traps yesterday called for a two man team race, 100 targets per man. Six teams entered, and they proved to be evenly matched, as it took the last event to decide the winners. Judge Carpenter, with 78, and G. W. Peck, with 89, won with 167.

The Chicago Rifle club has opened the indoor season at the club range, Randolph street and Michigan avenue, with a monthly members' handicap match. The match is fired in four strings of one string each week. The scores for the first three weeks are averaged for the handicap applicable to the fourth string and from the outcome of this string is determined the winner of the match for that month.

LEWIS FORCED LIMIT TO BEAT JOHN FREIBURG

Strangler Finally Wins Feature of C. A. A. Mat Show In 31:35.

Strangler Ed Lewis, who last July held Joe Stecher to a draw after five hours of grappling, came near catching a tartar last night in John Freiburg, who gave the husky Kentuckian a hard task in the feature bout of the wrestling show at the Chicago Athletic association. The heavyweights met in a single fall match which rounded out one of the best bills ever seen in the Cherry Circle gymnasium.

Lewis repeatedly clamped some of his famous holds on Freiburg, but each time had them broken through the great defensive ability of the Nonpareil. Finally, after the match had gone 31:35, Lewis secured a standing crotch lock and forced Freiburg's shoulders to the canvas.

Another good match brought together Yussiff Hussane and Jack Savage, who substituted for Jack Thomas of San Francisco. Savage put up a stiff defense but was outclassed by the Turk, who took the first fall in 17:37 with a grapevine and wristlock and the second in 16:16 with a head scissors and armlock.

Pete Katansky won on straight falls from Charles Peterson, who took the place of Joe Hollick on the program. The first fall went to Katansky in 15:47 with a scissors and wristlock, while Peterson succumbed in the second to a scissors on the head in 10:37. Herman Koch took on Joe Wallace in the roughhouse bout and defeated him in straight falls.

Indoor League Meets Tomorrow.

The Chicago Indoor Baseball league will meet at the Windsor Clifton hotel tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. There are two open berths in the circuit and teams desiring to enter should file applications tomorrow. The league schedule will start Nov. 26, with games every Sunday afternoon until spring.

FURTHER SHARP WHEAT DECLINE; LONGS LIQUIDATE

Corn Prices Also Suffer Severe Recessions Under Heavy Selling—Oats Mart Affected.

Liquidation of long wheat was severe yesterday and prices suffered further sharp losses. Closing figures were not far from the bottom and showed net declines of 3@4⅝c. December was relatively weaker than distant deliveries, and at one time was at a discount of 6c under the May, the widest so far on the crop. Difficulty in getting insurance threw an additional burden on the December, and best buying was against bids. The market in general was affected by the absence of big export demand, by peace talk, and growing feeling that prices have advanced too rapidly. May at the low point yesterday was 12c under the high price established earlier in the week.

Longs have become discouraged by the absence of the seaboard buying on the dips that proved such a conspicuous feature recently, and the additional decline yesterday carried the market into many stop-loss orders. Weakness in the Argentine markets was also a factor in influencing sellers.

Export Business Moderate.

Export sales of only 250,000 bu wheat were reported yesterday, and there seems to be truth in the statements made recently that the biggest foreign buyers were out of the market. Apparently Europe intends to turn her attention to the large wheat surpluses in Australia and India for a time, at least until prices have had opportunity to break sharply. Liverpool spot wheat was 1d lower to ½d higher. India shipped 712,000 bu wheat this week, against nothing a year ago. Partial rains were reported in Argentina, with showers in northern sections delaying cutting.

Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour yesterday were 795,000 bu. Primary receipts were 1,260,000 bu, against 2,808,000 bu a year ago. Winnipeg receipts for the week totaled 5,049 cars, against 8,759 cars a year ago. Northwest receipts for the week were 3,419 cars, against 8,113 a year ago.

Corn Market Also Breaks.

Corn also suffered from liquidation and closed 1⅝@1⅞c lower. The further setback in wheat prices was largely responsible for the selling, although longs were also much impressed by the continued liberal offerings of corn by the country and by the weakness in the cash corn market. Latter was 2@3c lower. A break in the Argentine weather conditions was also influential in weakening the market. There was also some pressure in way of hedging against purchases of corn in the country.

There was evidence of more export demand for corn at the seaboard, but no figures were given out. Local shipping sales were 50,000 bu. Liverpool spot corn was 1d higher. Primary receipts yesterday were 854,000 bu, against 832,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts of corn for the week were 1,405,000 bu, while 567,000 bu were shipped.

Oats at Lower Level.

Oats closed with losses of ½@⅝c, affected by the weakness in other pits. There was heavy buying of oats by export interests, and also fair commission house demand on the dips. The fact that foreign buyers are actively interested in oats is making friends for the market. Local shipping sales were 210,000 bu and included 50,000 bu for export. Cash oats were ½@1c lower. Primary receipts totaled 802,000 bu, against 966,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts of oats for the week were 2,458,000 bu, with shipments 2,290,000 bu.

Hog product worked to a materially lower level. There was much liquidation in the early trading and selling on stop-loss orders, while buying at all times was moderate. Packing interests supported December lard on the soft spots. Hog prices at the yards were firmer. Receipts at western markets for the week totaled 849,800 head, against 615,000 a year ago. Local meat shipments this week were 18,364,000 lbs, against 15,892,000 lbs a year ago, and lard shipments 5,342,000 lbs, against 7,462,000 lbs last year. Liverpool spot lard 3d lower, hams 6d higher, and bacon unchanged to 1s higher.

Rye Easy, Barley Unchanged.

Rye was easy, with No. 2 selling at $1.48½@1.50, and No. 3, $1.45@1.47. Receipts were 6 cars.

Barley ruled unchanged to 1c lower. Malting was quoted $1.05@1.28, and sold $1.05@1.27; feed and mixing quotable 90c@$1.04, with sales at $1.00@1.03; screenings were quoted 50@90c and skimmings 60@70c, former selling at 77@82c. Receipts, 23 cars.

Duluth flax closed 3⅜@6½c lower; cash on track, $2.73¼; December, $2.67, and May, $2.73; receipts, 134 cars. Minneapolis was 3⅝c lower, with cash on track, $2.69¼@2.73¼; receipts were 43 cars. Winnipeg closed 5¼@5½c lower; December, $2.46, and May, $2.54½; receipts, 35 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Slaughter & Co. had the following letter from a prominent Argentine grain grower: "The situation is extremely critical in our country owing to serious drought and immense swarms of locusts. In the province of Santa Fe, South Cordoba, parts of Entre Rios and northern province of Buenos Aires the drought is terrible, threatening everything. The little that withstood the drought is destroyed by locusts. Even with early ample rains we can count only on half a crop, and should dry weather continue the linseed will be lost. We are not likely to raise more than sufficient for seed and home consumption. In the Pampas the outlook for wheat is still good, also in the south and parts of the west and around Buenos Aires, but we had frosts during the last ten days over the whole country, which is injurious and will have a bad effect later. Cattle raising is seriously menaced and in many cases farmers have to sell their cattle for lack of feed."

Cash wheat premiums were a little firmer for red and hard winter wheat here. No. 2 red was quoted on track at 1c under December to 2c over. No. 2 hard was 3½@5c premium over the December. No. 1 northern was 5@8c premium. The demand here was moderate, and, according to export brokers, the demand on the decline from abroad was disappointing. Local sales were 35,000 bu. Baltimore reported 250,000 bu for export. Cash corn was 2@3c lower and oats were ½@1c off. The demand for corn was fair, with sales 50,000, and 210,000 bu oats were reported taken, including 50,000 bu to exporters. Country sales of corn were quite liberal, especially from Iowa. Generally the country appears willing to sell where cars can be obtained.

In replying to a criticism of his recent report on wheat supplies John Inglis said: "In making an analysis of our report showing 167,000,000 bu for export and carry over in all positions at this date no reference is made to the amount carried over in interior elevators and mill stocks on June 30. As a reporter on crop conditions I make it a point to observe as closely as possible the interior movement, other than that to primary markets. I have no hesitation in saying that interior elevators carried over the largest surplus in the history of the trade. The movement of old wheat in the southwest, and more especially in the northwest and Canada, continued in large volume up to and after the movement of the new crop had commenced."

Argentine news generally was more bearish. Not only were sharp reductions reported at Buenos Aires and Rosario, but the crop news was regarded as more favorable, rains being reported in several sections. The bearish character of the news from Argentina, however, did not have much effect on prices at Liverpool, and news from Europe was not indicative of any great amount of confidence on the part of buyers. Even with the greatest economy, it is admittedly a great problem how to supply the needs of Europe up to the time another crop is raised.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 33 cars; corn, 129 cars; oats, 122 cars; rye, 6 cars; barley, 61 cars; hogs estimated for Monday, 61,000 head, and for all next week, 255,000 head.

Argentine markets were lower for all grains yesterday, corn being especially heavy, selling being due to rains in some sections.

Snow estimates there is available for export the next eight months only about 40,000,000 bu of wheat.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 70,000 bu for one day.

COPPERS RUN WILD.

New York, Nov. 18.—Dealings in stocks during today's brief period of trading were again characterized by a veritable riot of speculation in coppers, the principal issues of that group gaining two to six points and in several instances considerably more. The advance was attended by circumstantial rumors of impending mergers or consolidations, none of which received confirmation in authoritative quarters.

New high levels were reached by Anaconda, Utah, Kennecott, Inspiration, Chino, Greene Cananea, Miami, and Nevada Coppers, as well as Chile, which rose more than six points, with almost eleven for the 7 per cent bonds. Granby Mining rose 12¼ points and the 6 per cent bonds six points.

The session was noteworthy also for new maximums registered by Bethlehem Steel at 700 and United States Steel at 126⅝. Among the less important specialties, American Writing Paper preferred achieved similar distinction, with substantial improvement in the shares of other paper companies, as well as the better known independent steel and equipment concerns.

Investment Issues Dull.

Rails and similar stocks of a more representative or investment class were obscured by the inquiry for speculative issues, a considerable portion of which came from interior sources. Overnight developments, such as the latest turn to events across the southern border, were reflected in the comparative heaviness of Mexican securities, notably the Petroleums. It was the most active short session, except one, since the resumption of operations in December, 1914.

A moderate contraction of loans was shown in the actual condition of clearing house banks and reserves decreased by almost $19,000,000, reducing excess reserves to about $80,000,000, a contraction of more than $44,000,000 in the last fortnight.

Bonds were strong in keeping with stocks, but much of the trading in that division was confined to convertible issues. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Transcontinental Freight Case.

The interstate commerce commission will start its hearing on the transcontinental freight rates at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow morning. Examiner Attorney Thurtell, who has taken the cases in previous hearings, will preside.

The hearings throw open for discussion the entire situation under dispute for the last twelve years, in which the eastern shippers, aided by the railroads, have attempted to hold their markets on the western coast by a system of lower long haul rates. The intermediate territory has furnished the opposition. The railroads have already withdrawn the proposed increases which the commisison ordered submitted when water competition via the Panama canal was cut off. They now propose to add 10 cents per hundred pounds on carload and 25 cents per hundred pounds on less than carload tariffs of the commodities included in what is known as section 3 of the order. It is also proposed to add 10 cents per hundred pounds on eastbound rates on California products.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

It is announced that shareholders in the Union Bag and Paper corporation will be entitled to a dividend of 1½ per cent, payable Dec. 15. The Union Bag and Paper company, the old concern, pays no dividend and the stock must be exchanged on or before Dec. 5 for shares in the new company.

As a result of the Russian loan, just negotiated, the Allis-Chalmers company is understood to have closed a $2,000,000 contract for tractors for the Russian government with a contingent clause providing for other business should the initial business prove satisfactory.

Developments are reported from well informed quarters in connection wtih the Ontario and Western railroad, which may result in considerable activity in the stock. The suggestion is that the road may be sold by the New Haven, which now controls it.

According to New York advices it is a foregone conclusion that the Submarine Boat corporation will get 75 per cent of the United States government's order. The company has closed a $30,000,000 contract with the British government for 200 trawlers, to cost $150,000 each.

It is announced that there is under construction in American shipyards 1,479,000 tons of vessels for coastwise and foreign trade. There are also 314 ships under contract to be launched by the end of June, 1917.

The Smith Motor Truck corporation will be incorporated in Virginia shortly for the purpose of taking over the Smith Form-a-Truck company. The underwriting will be handled by Michaelis & Co. The preferred stock will be redeemable at 120.

Southern Railway common stock is being recommended for purchase by responsible New York interests. It is considered the best of the low priced rails for a long pull.

Important buying is reported in the equipment shares, more especially American Car and Foundry. Interests bullish on this issue are talking of it as crossing par when the facts concerning the position of the company are known.

In Wall street sentiment as to railroad issues is apparently becoming more optimistic on the theory that the railroad situation is being given so much national attention that favorable results will follow.

The Lamborn company makes announcement that the total stocks at Atlantic ports were slightly increased last week. The receipts were 43,173 tons, against meltings of 41,000 tons.

The American Rolling Mill company is expected to show for its fiscal year ended June 30, net income of $3,141,687, an increase of $2,388,316.

The United Zinc corporation reports bids of $95 a ton for its zinc concentrates. For the company this means an increase of about $300 a day in earnings.

There has been a material reduction in the short interest market, coincident with the fact that stock has been transferred from large institutions.

Buying of Union and Southern Pacific, New York Central, St. Paul, and Norfolk and Western is reported to be good.

MIGHTIEST OF METALS
Steel & Copper

Steel and copper are indeed the mightiest of metals, not only in war, but also in peace-time. Their use throughout the world right now is on an ever-increasing scale—in fact, the demand is becoming so great that a steel and copper famine is shortly expected.

And, as a result of the phenomenal earnings of companies in these industries, they have placed themselves in an Aladdin-like financial position, and stockholders are bountifully participating in their prosperity through increased and extra dividends, as well as handsome market profits.

A comprehensive treatise on the steel and copper situation, along with an analysis of the best purchases in each class of these securities, is contained in the current issue of our fortnightly publication

"Investment Opportunities"

Anyone who is interested in increasing the earning power of his surplus funds should not fail to regularly receive this valuable publication. It will be sent free of charge, beginning with the present issue. Ask for 34-OT at once, including booklet explaining

The Invisible Machinery of the Stock Market

It is all very simple when you know how it is done—despite the popular impression that "behind stage" all is a maze of intricacies. The detail of service between broker and customer is extensive, but the processes are as simple as "two-plus-two." And if you are investing or trading for profit, you owe it to yourself to become fully informed on the machinery of buying and selling stocks.

A Booklet Library

of valuable and interesting information on this unusual subject is part of the Complete Service of Jones & Baker, Stock Brokers.

A novice in the market can gain from these five little books—which require but a few minutes to read—knowledge that even the experienced investor has not absorbed in a lifetime of trading. These booklets have been much in demand by banks and libraries, and they are offered to the investing public without cost.

Any or all of these booklets described briefly at the left, are yours for the asking. To assure getting the information of greatest interest to you—

NOBLEMAN ONCE OUTCAST NOW HERO OF WAR

Col. Elkington, Cashiered and Disgraced, Thanked by His King.

BY GEORGE B. ATHERTON.

[Copyright, 1916, by Curtis Brown.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—From the London Gazette, Oct. 31, 1914:

Royal Warwickshire regiment—Lieut. Col. John F. Elkington is cashiered by general court martial. Dated Sept. 14, 1914.

From the London Gazette, Sept. 7, 1916:

The king has approved the reinstatement of John Ford Elkington in the rank of lieutenant colonel, with his previous seniority, in consequence of his gallant conduct while serving in the ranks of the foreign legion of the French army. He is accordingly reappointed lieutenant colonel in the R. War. R., dated Aug. 22, 1916, with seniority from April 6, 1910.

From the Court Circular, Buckingham palace:

Lieut. Col. J. F. Elkington (Royal Warwickshire regiment) had the honor of being received by the king this morning.

Totters into Palace.

A man once quite tall, now bent over two heavy canes, spare and with marks of suffering on his face, in the uniform of a British officer, and with decorations on his breast, climbed the other day from a motor car and limped into Buckingham palace, there to meet his sovereign.

In these days of strife many a man has entered the same portals on the same mission—to receive from his king words of commendation and possibly some token—a decoration—from his majesty for some deed well done.

Victim of a Mistake.

He is the "man who made a mistake," the "man who told the truth," and also the "man who made good." He suffered the severest degradation that falls to the lot of the professional soldier, which he was, as his father before him. He later attained triumph and glory, and is a happy man. Only a war such as this could have afforded any man such opportunities.

"Cashiered" was the vile word that followed his name on the army list for two years. "Hero" is his cognomen now in the minds of the British people. His name is restored with full honor to the list of officers of the Royal Warwickshire regiment, where it had been for thirty years, from subaltern to lieutenant colonel, and where his father's name has appeared as commander of the famous regiment.

Cashiered from Army.

Back in those dim days when the war was a month old the British army, such as it was in numbers, and what was left of it then, was fighting a desperate fight against an oncoming foe. The Warwicks were in the thick of it from the beginning.

Lieut. Col. John Ford Elkington was in command at an important point. A mistake was made—perhaps it was a withdrawal in the face of the enemy—at any rate, a mistake. A general court martial in the field followed.

Col. Elkington told the whole truth, simply and soldierlike. He returned to England. Then the decision was announced. He, with another of the same rank, was cashiered. The reason was never told.

It was a simple push to oblivion for a military wrong with all honor, career, and even the right to serve king and country in this greatest of all storms torn away, for, once cashiered, a man is considered no longer useful.

Future Appears Black.

Six weeks of effort and all was over. Professional soldier that he was, Col. Elkington had faced the soldier's greatest opportunity in history—and he made a mistake. He was now nearly 60 years of age, the future seemed to hold nothing.

In France there was that strange and wonderful organization—the foreign legion. A fighting force in which no questions are asked, where the only requisite of enlistment is the necessary physique. The doctors ask questions—no one else.

Foreign Legion a Man's Place.

There the discipline is more severe than anywhere in the world's armies, where hard work is the only reward for aliens joining, for aliens cannot win promotions, the foreign legion being always officered by Frenchmen.

At any time the legion is a hard man's place, during a great war it is even more so. On one side there is a soldier of many attainments, an intellectual, perhaps, with a past, something to bury and forget and live down. On the other the roughest of the world, scum o' the earth, likely enough, but a fighter.

With this romantic organization Col. Elkington threw his lot and fought for the allied cause with a distinction and gallantry that won him high honors and also brought back to him his place in the British army.

There are gaps in this story. Just why Col. Elkington was so decorated, except that it was for great gallantry, for "valeur et discipline," is not clear. He talks frankly of all else, but nothing of this.

Within two weeks of the announcement of his being cashiered Col. Elkington was a legionaire. His training helped him make good. In the Boer war he had earned the queen's medal with four clasps, and, aside from his work with the Warwicks in this war, he knew much about fighting and he knew how to be a soldier.

Wins Honors from France.

September, 1915, found them in Champagne. It was here that Col. Elkington, who had already attracted the attention of his officers by his excellent work and gallant bearing, most distinguished himself and won high honors.

On the first day of a great battle the foreign legion sacrificed themselves with reckless bravery. The ex-Warwickshire officer "distinguished himself on a field where valor was common." He was one of a handful of men who attacked, took, and held a point of great importance. They hung on desperately for four days.

On Sept. 28 the legion again advanced. They took a German front line trench and then another. The Germans turned on the machine guns and swept the field. Elkington, ahead of them all, was shot just below the right knee.

Before he could be taken to the hospital his wound became septic. He was laid in a bed at Grenoble and there he remained for ten long months while French nurses and doctors fought for the life of this gallant Englishman. Finally he came out, with one leg an inch and a half shorter than the other.

Returns to English Home.

When he went into the hospital Col. Elkington carried only his wound and the satisfaction of having done his bit. When he came out he wore the French military medal and the Croix de Guerre, conferred upon him by a staff officer sent direct from Gen. Joffre, to whose attention the gallant work of Col. Elkington had been called.

Col. Elkington then returned to his beautiful English home. One morning he picked up his newspaper and was astonished to read that he, John Ford Elkington, cashiered, had been restored to his rank with full honors. There was probably no happier man in the world that day.

Later came the summons to Buckingham palace, the final honor, the thanks of his sovereign.

56 DOWNSTATE COUNTIES FAVOR TAX AMENDMENT.

Three Democratic Sections in Egypt Against It—Proposal in Lead in 43 Other Districts.

Complete returns from fifty-nine of the 101 counties downstate on the proposed tax amendment show the proposal was approved by a vote of more than 2 to 1 of the total vote on it in these counties. It also has a big lead over the majority of all votes cast at the election in these districts.

If the remaining forty-three counties maintain the lead already recorded the amendment is safe.

Of the fifty-nine counties heard from on the proposition only three show a plurality against it. They are three Democratic counties in "Egypt"—Clinton, Jefferson, and Richland.

Three Policemen Face Charges.

Charges against three patrolmen were filed with the civil service commission by Chief of Police Charles C. Healey yesterday. The accused are: Frederick Wilke Jr., Fiftieth street, absent; James J. Toomy, Fiftieth street, absent; T. F. Murtha, Lawndale, careless driving.

Blemished skins

How to clear them

In trying to rid your skin of blemishes and unsightly spots, have you reckoned with the most frequent cause of these troubles?

Skin specialists are tracing fewer and fewer troubles to the blood—more to bacteria and parasites that are carried into the pores of the skin with dust, soot and grime. The following local treatment will clear your skin of any blemishes caused by this most powerful and persistent enemy.

Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water. Then, dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on a cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy "soap cream." Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this. Let it dry and remain on over night. In the morning wash again in your usual way with Woodbury's.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. Repeat this cleansing, antiseptic treatment with it every night until the blemishes disappear.

Use Woodbury's regularly thereafter in your daily toilet. This will make your skin so strong and active that it will resist the frequent cause of blemishes and keep your complexion free from them.

A 25c cake of Woodbury's is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment and daily use. Get a cake today and begin at once to bring to your skin that greater clearness, freshness and charm you have longed for.

Write today for sample. For 4c we will send a "week's size" cake. For 10c, samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Cream and Powder. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., 2181 Spring Grove Av., Cincinnati, O.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Ltd., 1229 Sherbrooke St., Perth, Ontario.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by The Andrew Jergens Co., New York and Cincinnati.

What Lux is Not

Lux is not a cake of soap, not a chipped soap, not a soap powder, but pure essence of soap in thin, transparent flakes.

Even in looks it is not like anything you have ever seen.

Why soap for fine laundering should be in flakes

Soap should never be rubbed directly on fine fabrics, for the rubbing weakens and will eventually destroy the fabric.

In flake form, Lux melts the moment you throw it into hot water, and makes an instant lather which dissolves dirt without rubbing. Lux is so completely soluble that not the slightest trace of soap is left in the garment to yellow it. Lux can't injure anything that water alone won't injure.

In flake form, Lux can be kept pure, concentrated soap. In this form there is no need for any air, any moisture, or any kind of "filler" which has no cleansing value. Lux needs only to be used in small quantities owing to its absolute purity and wonderful richness in lather.

Nothing like it ever before been made

The process by which Lux is made is used only for Lux—the very machinery which "flakes" the soap is patented and controlled by the manufacturers of Lux.

Get a ten-cent package from your grocer or department store today and try it yourself.

THE LADY OF SHALOTT

Reproduction of a Painting by J. W. WATERHOUSE

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

She left the web, she left the loom,
She made three paces through the room,
She saw the water lily bloom,
She saw the helmet and the plume,
  She looked down to Camelot.
Out flew the web and floated wide,
The mirror cracked from side to side.
"The curse is come upon me!" cried
  The Lady of Shalott.

AND so was sealed the doom of the enchanting but ill fated prisoner of many towered Camelot. Consigned to stay forever within the four gray walls of the island tower she had known life as she had glimpsed its vague reflections in the magic mirror which hung in her room. Far below her the young and the old, the sorrowful and the gay, passed their hours in divers and changing fashion. But her days were spent in watching the shifting shadows that flitted across her glass and in weaving those same shadows into a fairy web for her own delectation.

But in time she grew weary of watching emotions, not experiencing them, and in dreaming of life, not living it. It was then that Sir Launcelot rode by. A silver bugle hung from his blazoned baldric, shining jewels lit up his saddle, coal black curls fell from a helmet so glittering that it seemed fairly to burn flames in the sunlight.

The Lady of Shalott saw him in her mirror and, seeing him, forgot the thing that was forbidden her. For she had been warned that should she ever yield to the impulse to look from her window upon the world below her life would be the forfeit. She sprang to the window and with the movement her death knell struck. After that she knew that nothing she could do would matter.

At the day's close she left the tower, went down to the river's edge, found a boat that was left afloat beneath a willow, and loosing the chain lay down in the boat and let the broad stream bear her away. And as she drifted along she sang her last song and died.

When the knights and ladies came down to the wharf at Camelot and saw her name on the boat and the beauty of her face they crossed themselves fearfully. But Sir Launcelot, standing apart from the others, mused a little and said:

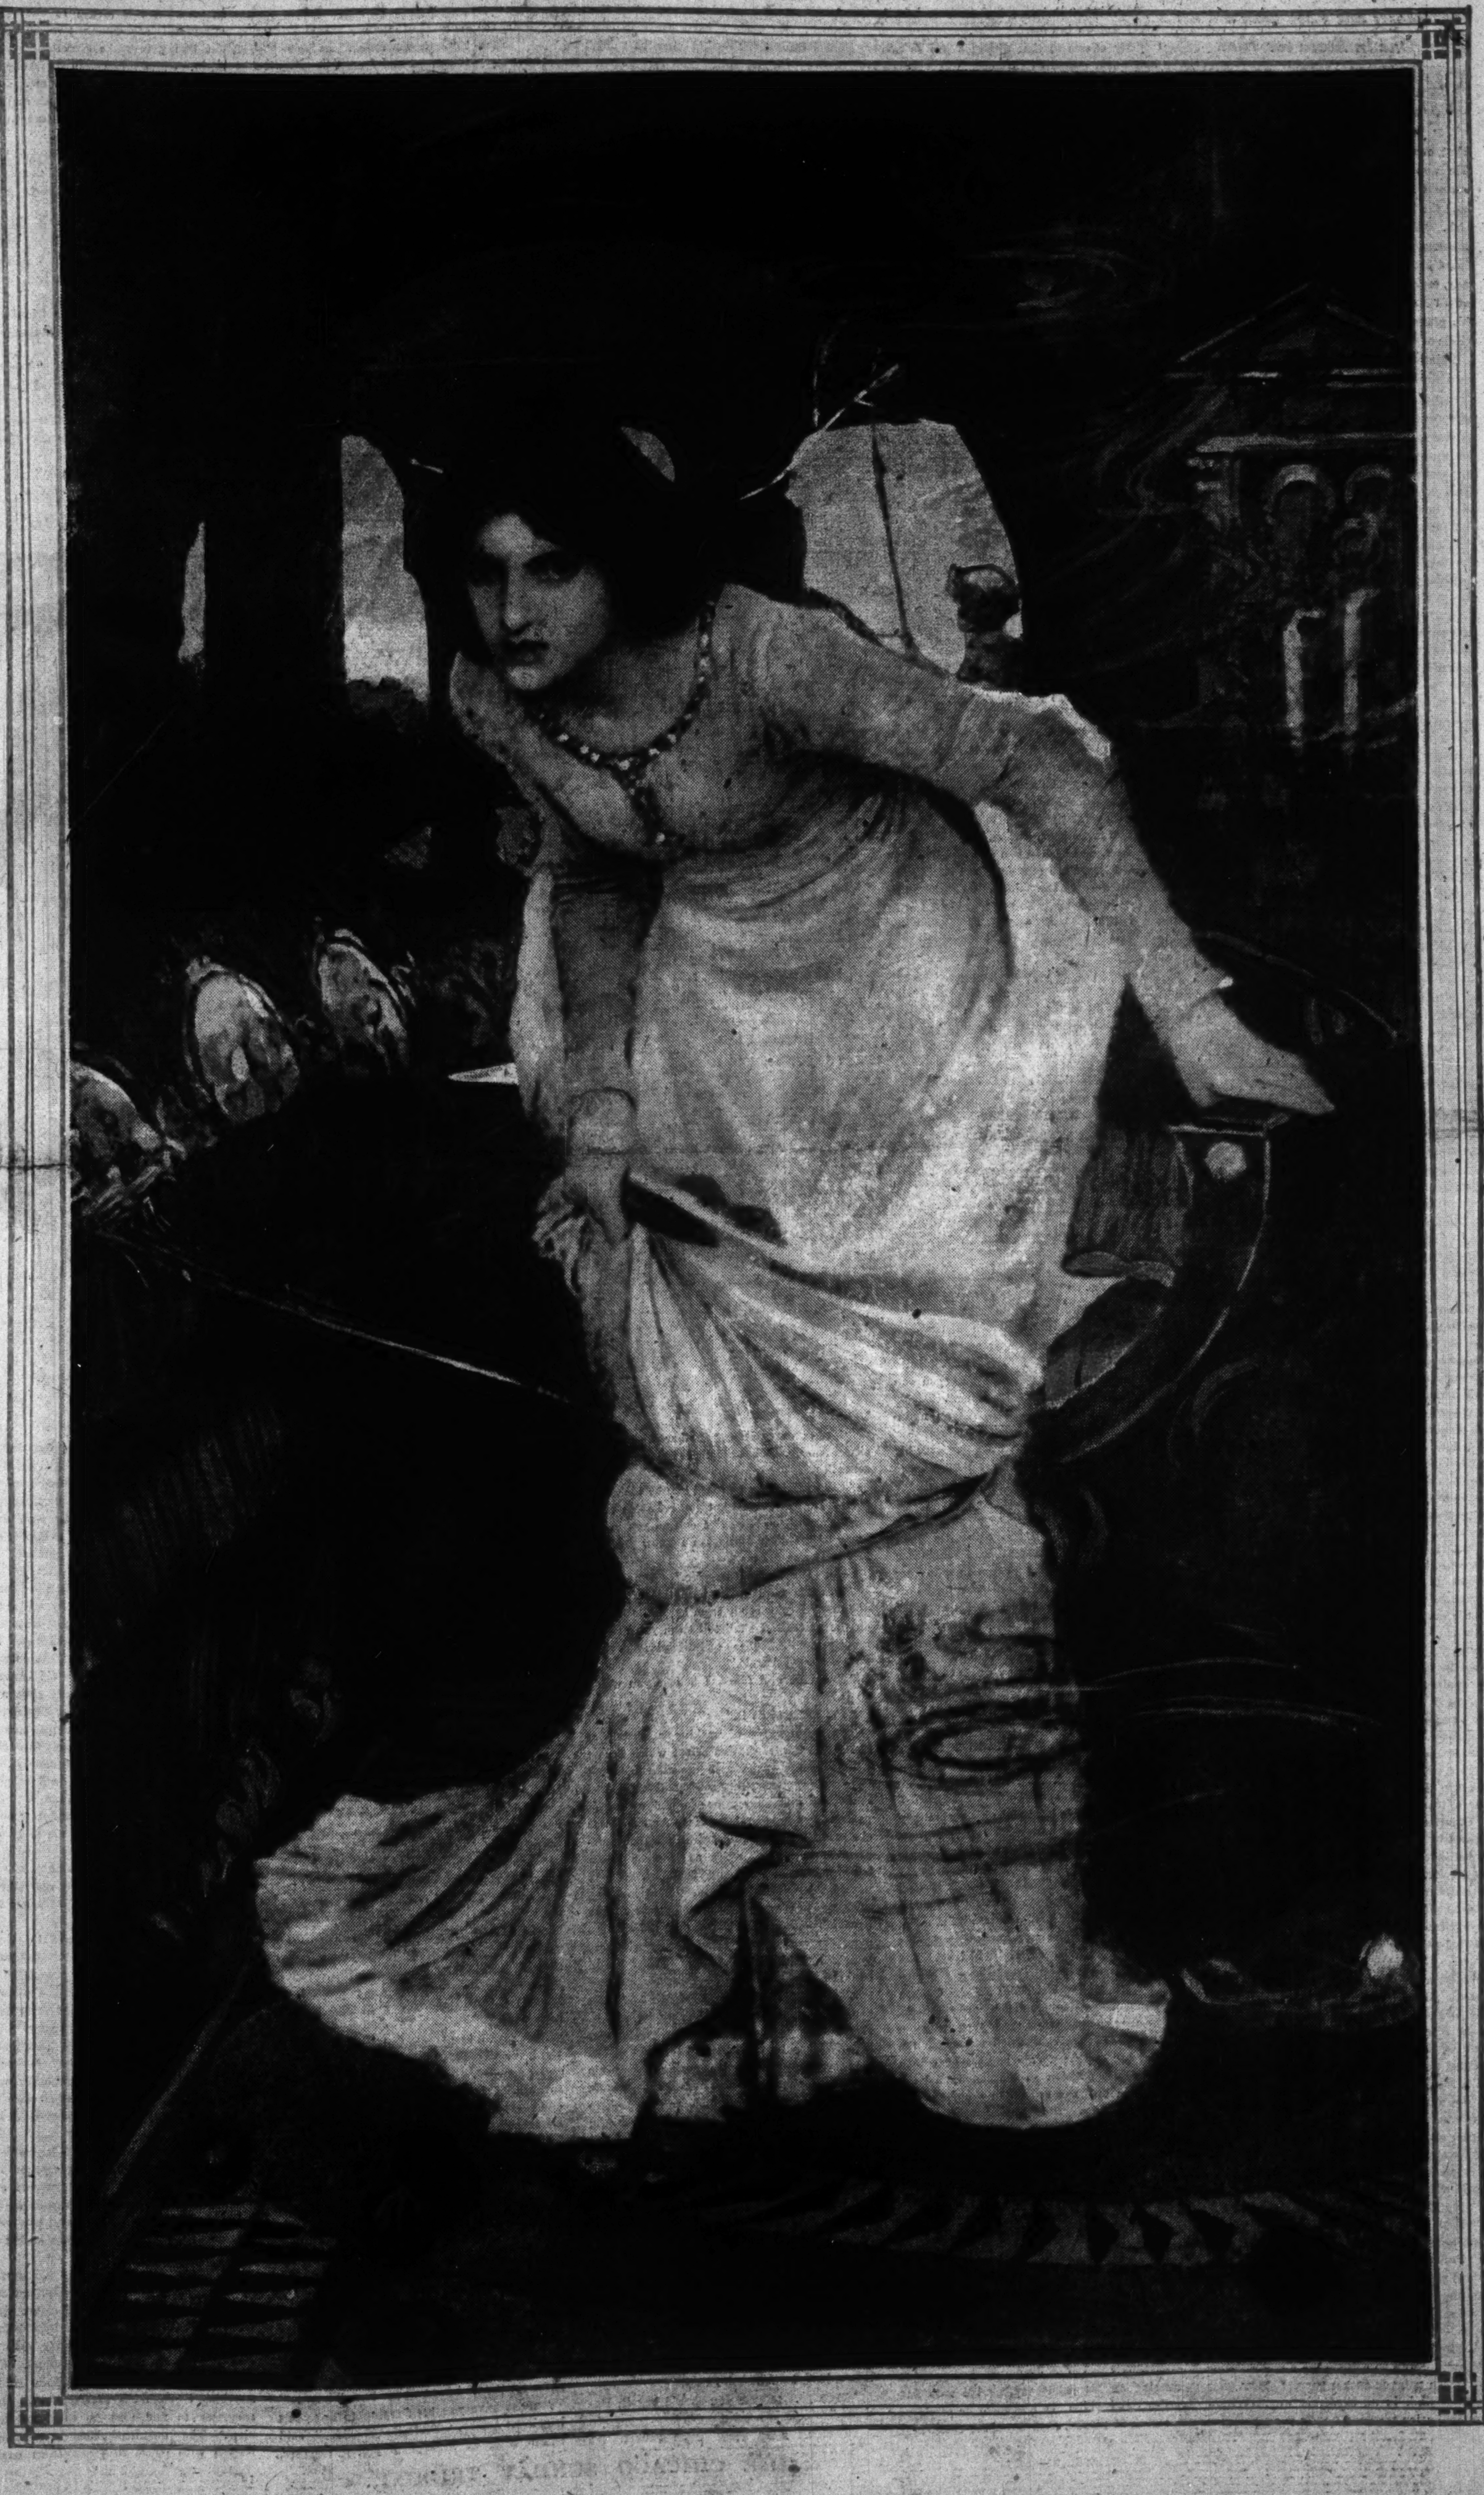
"She has a lovely face,
God in his mercy lend her grace,
The Lady of Shalott."

About this painting there hovers an eerie spirit. The details of the room are blurred ever so slightly, hinting in their shadowy vagueness at a mystical unreality. About the clinging folds of the lady's gown are the magic threads she was weaving, but which are now broken forever. In her eyes there is quick terror, but there is expectancy, too. She knows what she has done and realizes her fate, but before the end she will have a long look at the man for whom she has thrown everything away.

It is an exquisitely done canvas in its fineness of handling and its haunting color scheme. It is the kind of picture Waterhouse was particularly fond of doing, and the type of painting which, never overwhelmingly popular, is still an immense favorite with those who admire the fanciful and the poetic in art.

Waterhouse was born in Rome in 1849 and was brought to England when he was only 5. At 20 he determined to make art his life work and proceeded to study absorbedly at the academy schools. He exhibited his first picture in 1874 and was elected A. R. A. in 1885 and R. A. ten years later. He is still living in London.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



COLLABORATION by A. DeFord Pitney

It Was His Fate to Stand By and Watch Another Triumph—Almost; but Fate Had a Real One in Store for Him.

VALENTINE AMORY was a fashionable painter. His studio afternoons were brilliant affairs. Amory himself was one of the best talkers on art that ever thrilled a rapt feminine gathering. He was tall and plump. He had a fleshy, sensual face, eloquent eyes, a mobile mouth, and the beginnings of a double chin. He was rich. His huge and magnificent studio was a museum of rare and precious objects. Amory loved bronzes, porcelains, precious old mahogany, tapestries, antique rugs, and armor. Most of all Amory loved to pose and gesture with his plump, tapering hands and talk art to a circle of worshiping ladies.

Painters spoke with little respect of Amory's own works. Real artists rarely put in an appearance at his studio. Amory showed a few pictures on his own walls and sometimes had exclusive little exhibitions in hired galleries. He never sent anything to the annual shows, but scornfully referred to them as commercial. Real painters said that Amory was wise not to send to the shows. It was insinuated that a few pictures with fairly workmanlike passages that Amory had in his studio had been painted by other hands than his own.

These innuendoes never reached the ears of Amory's female admirers.

In the thirty-eighth year of his pampered bachelorhood Amory allowed himself to fall in love with Miss Patience Arsdale, the most beautiful and altogether desirable damsel who came to his studio functions. Miss Arsdale was in society. At the studio she was always chaperoned by her aunt, Mrs. Victoria Craven, a lady of the great world.

Amory's serious intentions concerning Miss Arsdale promised to give sorrow to Murdo Stuart, a young painter who was assiduous at Amory's studio entertainments. Stuart was one of the few genuine artists who had ever attended them. He came solely to feast his eyes on Miss Arsdale. He knew Amory well, but avoided him in a singular manner.

Miss Arsdale had never been able to make up her mind about Amory. Stuart she knew to be an interesting and genuine young man, and his pictures, she knew, were highly praised by people whose praise meant something. Miss Arsdale was an unaffected worshiper of the art of painting and was trying to learn something of it.

Stuart was at Amory's late one winter day and chanced to be the recipient of a few patronizing remarks from Mrs. Craven. Stuart the while was uneasily watching Amory, who had Miss Arsdale in a corner by the Italian marble fireplace.

"Really, I think Mr. Amory's studio is quite wonderful," said Mrs. Craven.

"It ought to be a grand place to paint in," assented Stuart.

"So interesting—the way you artists look at things. Have you known Mr. Amory long?" asked Mrs. Craven, freezing Stuart with a glance through her lorgnon.

"We were in Paris at the same time," said Stuart with reserve.

"It must have been a great privilege for you to know Mr. Amory, with his position in the art world and in society. But, then, I suppose the social lines are very lax in the artists' colony abroad," suggested Mrs. Craven kindly.

When Stuart went back to the studio to get his greatcoat and stick Amory tried to detain him.

"I've got something I must talk to you about," whispered Amory. But Stuart insisted that he was in a hurry. Amory's other guests claimed his attention and Stuart made his escape.

Stuart had not evaded Amory, however. As dusk was descending a remarkable sight might have been observed in the dingy side street in which Stuart had his studio. The remarkable sight was Amory, the fashionable painter and studio entertainer, sneaking along by the shabby walls and hiding his face in his fur collar to keep from being recognized.

Amory glanced stealthily around him as he strode along, reading the numbers on the transoms. Iron mail boxes were screwed to the wainscot in the dim entries and long flights of steep stairs led to the studios on the top floors. Amory dodged hastily into the entrance he was seeking.

Stuart's studio was a square loft. It was heated by a big stove on which was simmering a kettle of water. The walls were painted lead color. A pair of curtains slung over a screen were the only draperies in sight. Many canvases leaned face to the walls. A few empty frames stood about. Stuart, in a much daubed painting gown, was seated at a table littered with tubes of paint, cans of medium, brushes, a big arm palette, pieces of charcoal, canvas pliers, palette knives, and paint rags. He had shoved the stuff out of the way to make room for a sheet of paper on which he had set out a bottle of milk and some rolls. Behind the artist was a canvas eight feet tall, of a noble old man, half nude, the leathery brown skin and white beard seen against yellow sand with a flash of turquoise sea in a corner and blazing blue sky overhead. Bathed in the powdery half light, the canvas was like a window into another and more brilliant world of atmosphere and color.

"My Elijah," introduced Stuart.

"H-m, quite nice," said Amory. "Some good bits in it."

"Praise from Sir Hubert Stanley," Stuart smiled sourly. "What brings the noble Amory into the haunts of poverty? Have a roll?"

Amory passed a hand over his alabaster brow. "How the deuce can you stick in a rubbishy place like this, Stuart?" he demanded irritably. "It's no better than a stable. How can a man paint in such a garret? Now, your work is good, in an academic way. Within that limitation it's good. Why don't you give yourself a chance of being known?"

"I do what I can. I come to your afternoons."

"You ought to take a big studio and flatter every woman you meet."

"My efforts in that direction are so tame and weak, compared to yours, that I haven't the heart to try. But you didn't come up here just to give me good advice."

"No." Amory dropped into a chair, first fingering it wistfully to see if it were clean. "No. The fact is I've got myself into a bit of a fix. I've promised to paint a portrait."

Stuart got up and began to rub out the brushes he had been using during the day. He poured some hot water into a paint incrusted old tin basin and began to wash the brushes with a piece of yellow soap, working the paint out in the palm of his left hand. "No, Amory. Don't tell me about it. Nothing doing."

"O, piffle." Amory waved his white, graceful, well manicured fingers impatiently. "Every time I want to engage you to assist me I have to go through the process of combating your crazy scruples. Didn't all the old masters have assistants? Haven't you worked for me a lot of times and haven't I paid you well?"

"Yes, I've taken the wage of shame, I admit it. It seems as if I've got the criminal characteristics. I'll do almost anything when I'm hungry."

"Listen, Stuart. This is serious. I've got to have your help. It's a matter of life and death to me."

"Great Scott, why did you let yourself in for such a thing?"

"O, deuce take it, I always ask women to let me paint them. They expect it. Now I've simply got to come across with a portrait. Confound it, old chap, I've made appointments with Miss Arsdale for the sittings. You see the fix I'm in."

"Miss Arsdale. Patty Arsdale." Stuart dropped a brush on the floor and stooped to recover it. "I'm afraid I can't do anything for you, Amory," he said coldly when he was upright again. Amory had brought out the name with some timidity. He stole a cautious look at Stuart's back.

"Stuart, when I lent you that five thousand francs in Paris you told me I had saved your life. You were on the point of throwing yourself into the Seine. You said that if I ever were with my back to the wall you'd lay down your life for me. I'm in that situation now."

"Amory, this is beyond the limit. I can't do it."

"Yes, you can."

"You don't know what you are asking."

"I'm asking you to redeem your promise to me, Stuart."

Stuart looked haggard in the fading square of day under the skylight. "When you put it up to me like that I've got to help you," he said. "But I tell you frankly I don't see how I can make the picture much of a success. This isn't like those landscapes and fancy figures, you know. If it's going to be a portrait it's got to be painted from the subject. I can make the flesh look like flesh and put the head in atmosphere, but that's 'bout all I could do without direct sittings."

"You will do what will be necessary." The relief that came over Amory's statuesque features was pathetic. "You know what I want. It has got to be an unmistakable likeness and it has got to be as pretty as sin and as sweet."

"Well, I'll do what I can. Don't plaster any more paint on the canvas than you can avoid and don't let her see the thing."

"Nobody ever is allowed to see an unfinished painting of mine," declared Amory.

When Amory was gone Stuart sat with his head in his hands. There was little chance that he could ever win Patty for himself, he reflected miserably. Amory was not a bad sort. He had excellent taste and an interesting personality. He and Patty liked the same things. It might be a far better match for her than being married to a man who was absorbed in his painting and was forced to give the better part of himself to his work.

Miss Arsdale was much pleased when Amory told her at the first sitting that he had invited Stuart to drop in. Patty came with Mrs. Craven and Stuart arrived soon after. Mrs. Craven settled herself on a distant divan with a novel and a box of candy. Stuart hung about uneasily and watched Amory get ready. The biggest easel was in position. Amory handed Patty to a seat in a gilt Louis chair on the model stand. Her maid had put her into a white evening gown.

Stuart shoved his hands into his pockets and frowned as Amory arranged Patty's pose. When he had her settled to his liking he retired to his easel and stood before the empty canvas rapt in solemn contemplation. He held out his arms and his man appeared and reverently enveloped his employer in a yellow silk painting smock. The man handed Amory his long arm palette, bowed, and withdrew. Not a sound broke the religious silence. Amory slowly took a slim, wet brush and set down a timid, tentative line for the top of the head. He considered a while and then made a stroke for Patty's chin and another for the line of her eyebrows. He had the head in a commonplace position on the canvas and the arrangement of the arms and shoulders was deadly ordinary. Stuart clinced his fist in his pocket and had all he could do not to yell at Amory.

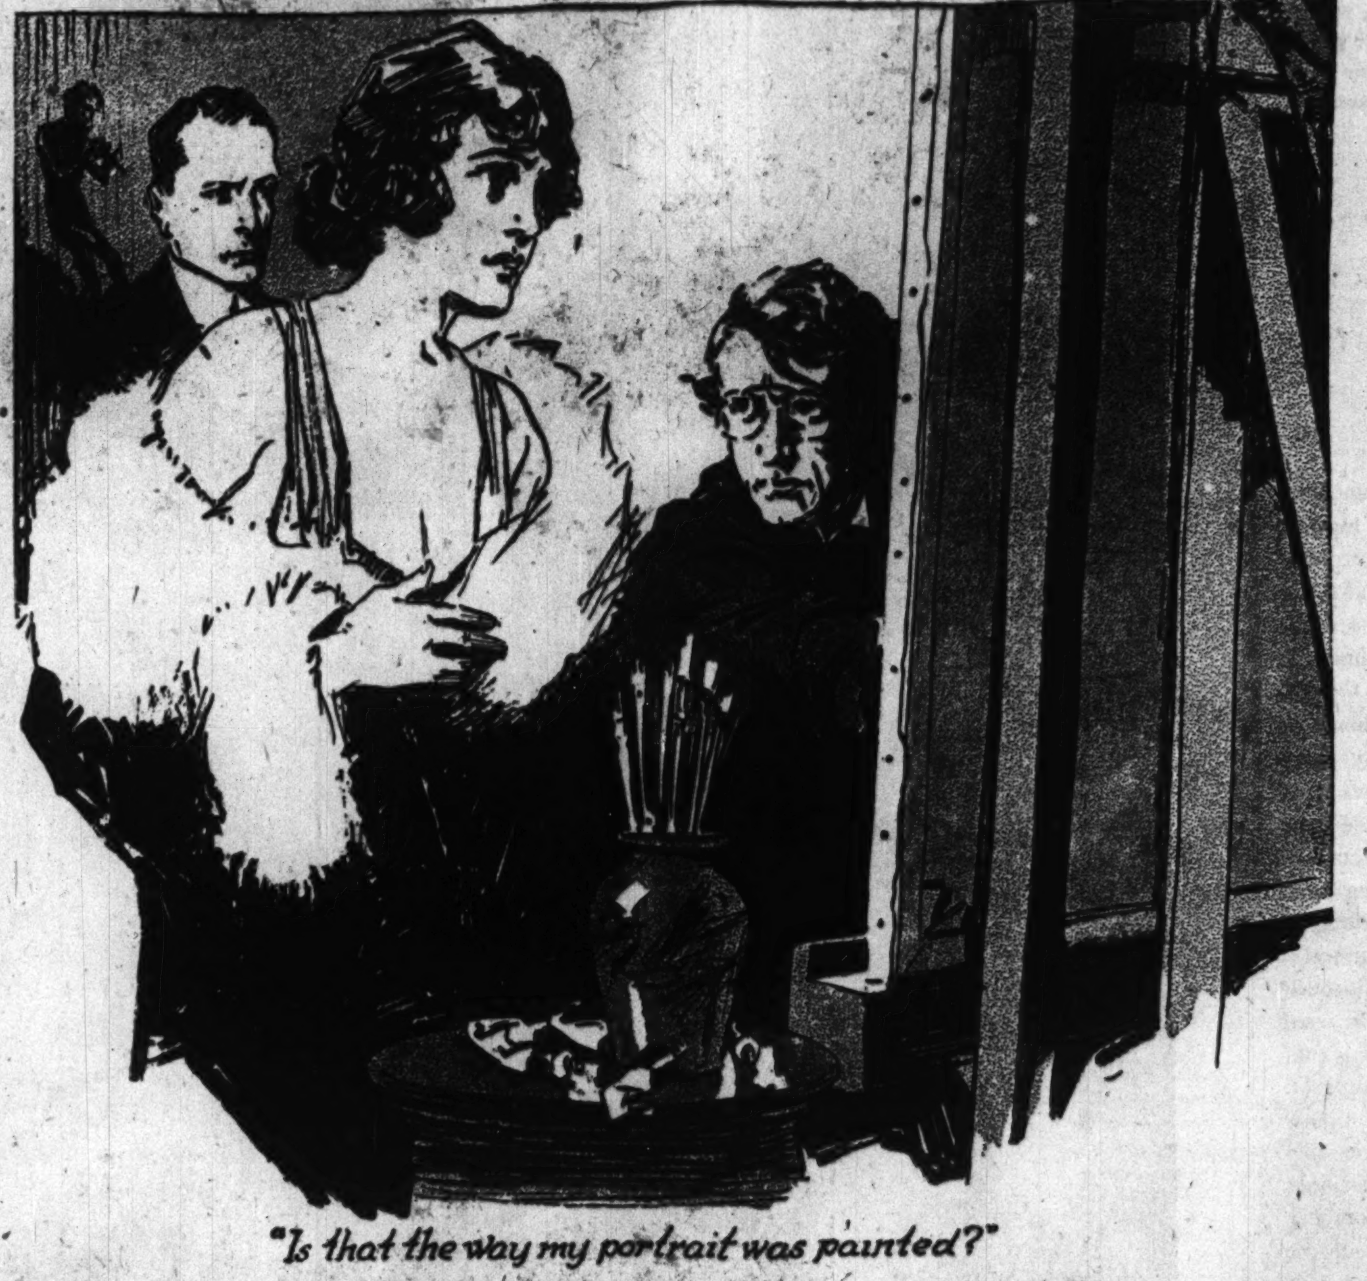
"That's the kind of junk I've got to try to make look like something," he muttered. Amory streaked up the canvas with a series of futile lines and smudges that indicated more or less where the eyes, hands, and chief shadows were to be. He now took a big brush and stirred up a puddle of French blue and burnt sienna. With this he made a broad swipe down the line of the cheek. He kept on filling up that corner until he had painted on a dark patch of background. Patty kept a polite silence during the progress of the mysteries of art. Stuart looked on dismally. Amory began messing on his palette among his reds and yellows and white. In a moment he plastered a streak of pinkish drab down the cheek next to the dark patch. The smear was intended to indicate the color and value of the curve of the cheek as seen against the shadow.

"I'll never be able to stand this," thought Stuart. He made a hasty move for his hat and greatcoat. "Well, I must be going," he cried. "I'll not bother you any longer. So much obliged for the opportunity of seeing you work, Amory."

"Don't hurry away, Stuart. You're not bothering me at all," said Amory. "I'm glad to have you get a glimpse of my methods. You are welcome to study them." Stuart, however, could not be persuaded to stay. He got a desperate note from Amory by a messenger in the morning. He went to Amory's studio and found him walking the floor. The portrait was on the easel. Amory drew the curtain from it without a word.

"What a crime!" said Stuart viciously. "It's a crime. Ouch! I don't wonder you can't look at it." He reached for the palette and began to glaze over the hair. "Gee whiz, it gives me the jim jams." Stuart worked with the face, touched up the eyes, and got rid of some of the mud in the shadows. "That's all I can do without the sitter," he said at length. "Great Scott, but you have made a mess of it."

"O, go, on. Go on," begged Amory, who had been watching helplessly. "Go on. It's beginning to look human already. Make that face look like a face. You can do it."



"Is that the way my portrait was painted?"

"I can't carry it any further without the sitter, Amory. What the deuce! Have a little sense!"

"Stuart," Amory clutched him by the shoulder. "Do you know what you are going to do for me? Do you know? I call on you in the name of the deep friendship I know you feel in your heart for me."

"No. Don't pinch so. No."

"You are going to be here this afternoon and make a color study from her while I work on the portrait. I shall tell them you are my favorite pupil. Rubens had disciples like that. So did Michel Angelo."

"You immortal faker, I believe you would do it."

"I'm going to do it."

The opportunity of making a sketch of Patty was the temptation before which Stuart fell. He was on hand in the afternoon, not only willing but eager. A small easel was ready for him near Amory's and a box of pastels was laid out. Miss Arsdale was charmed. Amory made several benignant suggestions to Stuart, much as Raphael might have directed a promising beginner. Stuart with difficulty refrained from kicking him.

Patty's eyes were bright with interest when Stuart commenced. Under his quick, sure hand her face speedily began to look out at him from the sheet of paper. Pastel suited Stuart's direct, brilliant style. He did not fumble or experiment. Every touch was right and every touch remained where he put it. For a time he lost himself in what he was doing. Then he chanced to look over at the other easel. Amory was posing before his canvas, putting on strokes at full arm stretch, like a fencer with a foil, and drawing back to examine his work with the high and worshipful air of a master. Stuart crumbled the crayon in his fingers and pitched the fragments into the tray.

"May I look?" asked Mrs. Craven in the accents of patronage.

"Certainly." Stuart drew back lifelessly. Amory dropped the curtain over his easel.

"Why, that's quite stunning, really," encouraged Mrs. Craven. "I'm sure some day you'll be a great painter like Mr. Amory. What were you going to do with this, Mr. Stuart?"

"Why, I—I—if Miss Arsdale will accept it——" Patty, who had fluttered down to take a look, clapped her hands.

"Quite so. I think you should buy it, Patience."

"I didn't mean that," cried Stuart. "I don't want to sell it."

"Patty—Miss Arsdale—would have to pay for it, of course," said Mrs. Craven promptly. Stuart tore the piece of board across and thrust the pieces in a Japanese basket.

"It's not worth discussing," he said. "I have an appointment and I must be going if I may be excused." He bowed to Mrs. Craven and Patty and left the room.

"I think Mr. Stuart is sometimes almost the very rudest man I've ever seen," exclaimed Patty. She bit her lip and acted as if she were going to stamp her foot. The sitting was at an end. Half an hour after Mrs. Craven and Patty were gone there was a sharp rap at the studio door and Amory's man admitted Stuart. He was pale and his lips were compressed.

"What did you do with that pastel sketch?" he demanded roughly of Amory. "That's mine."

Amory gestured to where the rescued pieces had been carefully fastened to a drawing board. The damage was considerable where the pastel had been shaken off, but less than might have been expected. Stuart ran to the sketch like a father to his lost child. Amory had the board on a chair by the easel and had been trying to improve the portrait by its aid. Stuart tossed off his hat and coat and snatched the palette from Amory.

"Here," he said. "Don't you see what this head needs? Look at this and this. Does her flesh look to you the way you've painted it? How in blazes could you expect to do anything with a palette like this? It's like a sea of mud." Stuart picked up some clean brushes. "Of course I can't sharpen this up," he said as he worked. "I can make it look like her, but I'll have to give it a sort of misty, mysterious effect. I'll glaze a lot and that will conceal your bum brush work. You might call it a soul portrait or some such slobber that will readily occur to you."

"Capital," cried Amory. "That's just the thought. That's a splendid idea. I shall use it." Stuart put down the palette.

"There's one thing about you, Amory," he said. "You certainly do bring a man down to earth and make him realize where he is. Here I am, like a poor ass, making a good thing of this so you can win Patty with it." Stuart threw his brush on the floor and pulled the pastel sketch off the board and tore it to pieces. A frightened look was on Amory's fleshy, sensuous face as he followed Stuart to the door.

"You're not going back on me at this late hour, old chap?" he pleaded. "Think of our friendship. Think of the dear old Latin Quarter."

"You've got the thing almost in shape. Just carry it a little further in the way I was showing you. You've got her. She's yours. Take her." Stuart shook Amory's hand off his arm and jerked the door open without looking around.

Stuart was in his studio late in a day toward the end of the week when a nervous knock sounded. It was Amory. His face was ravaged. His heavy jowls sagged. Bags were under his Byronic eyes and lines were around his mouth.

"I see you won the Stillwater prize," he congratulated feebly.

"Nothing in comparison with your luck," responded Stuart clammily. "How goes the portrait."

"I've got it with me. Will you come down and help me up with it?" Amory dropped his hands tragically. "I've brought it to your studio since you won't come to mine." His shoulders drooped and he slunk, rather than walked, down the stairs. Amory had a hired closed car below. The picture in its frame was jammed into the rear seats.

"Look at it," said Amory, when they had it under the light. "Look at it. I can't bear to."

"What have you been trying to do? It's hopeless, Amory. Perfectly hopeless," said Stuart after an attempt to pull it together.

"I can't do a thing with it this way." Amory struck himself with his fists.

"Stuart, Stuart," he cried. "You don't know what this means to me. I exhausted myself this afternoon. I've worked my heart out trying to make something of that. I'm all in. Curse it! Damn it! Why did I ever try to do it? Stuart, help me. I love her." He collapsed on Stuart's couch and sobbed.

"Brace up, man," cried Stuart disgustedly. "Get a grip on yourself."

"I'll promise never to paint another picture. I'll give up my art," sniveled Amory. "But I must have this picture, Stuart. I can't fail with this. I love her."

"Well, what if you do?" demanded Stuart savagely. "Do you suppose you are the only man that loves her? Shall I make a cheap faker out of myself just to turn her over to you?"

"Remember our precious friendship. You said when I gave you that five thousand francs in Paris——"

"Shut up!" yelled Stuart. "Don't say that to me again. I'm your slave. I'll do anything you say. Name your crime."

"Come to my studio tomorrow afternoon. Come early. Come to lunch. Have lunch with me."

"To blazes with your lunch."

"You must come early anyhow. Be there at 2."

Amory had at the end of his studio a superb Japanese screen, seven feet tall, many leaved, with a wonderful, deep carved border in lacquer and an open design of flowers carved across the top. When Stuart walked in, scowling and morose, he saw that the screen had been placed back of Amory's easel. He went over to look at the canvas. To his surprise it was blank.

"What? Going to start a new one?" he asked. Amory took Stuart by the arms.

"Stuart," he said, "I know what our sacred, holy friendship means to you. I have come to its final test. Look." Amory pulled him behind the screen. The old canvas was there on a low easel. Amory gave a moan at sight of it. "There it is. Stuart, I beg of you to stand behind this screen and fix up that picture. You can see through the carved work without any trouble. No one will know you are there. I will be pretending to work on that new canvas. I have thought of everything. Do it. Say you will do it. Stuart, do you want me to go on my knees to you?"

"Would you really perpetrate a swindle like that? Could you stand out there and look her in the face and do it?" asked Stuart wonderingly.

"That isn't a circumstance to what I'd do. There's no felony but I'd stick at if it would make this portrait a success."

"Well, speaking for myself, I'm not prepared to go the length of such petty knavery as this. I refuse to do it, Amory." Stuart took a palette knife and pared off a few slabs of paint from the shoulder of the portrait. "You'll have to think of some other way."

"Mrs. Craven and Miss Arsdale," announced Amory's man. Amory seized Stuart's sleeve.

"I am in your hands," he whispered. "You may step out and betray me if you wish to. Remember Paris." Stuart started to follow Amory and then turned back and dropped in a chair. The screen was so large that the space it fenced off was as big as an ordinary room.

"I won't touch the picture," Stuart muttered. "I won't give him away, but neither will I aid and abet him. I'll just sit here until they go." It was not long before he heard Patty come down from the gallery and take her place on the model stand. Curiosity inspired Stuart to look if he could see anything through the carved work. He was surprised to find that he could get a good view. The openings had been cunningly backed with gauze so that Stuart could see without being seen. Amory was before the new canvas going through the motions of painting. Stuart sneered. He looked at the old portrait by his elbow and found himself taking up a brush. He stopped.

With noiseless haste Stuart took down the canvas and set a blank one on the easel. Using a little neutral color with varnish he rapidly laid out a drawing of Patty as she sat. The varnish dried as he worked and he was ready to begin painting as soon as the composition was complete. He set down the opposing values of skin and background to give him his key, and the thing began to grow. Stuart worked so swiftly and with so much certainty that the sketch could not fail of being spontaneous and full of life. The eyes glowed. The lips, painted with five strokes of the full brush, parted gaily. The cheeks were brilliant, and the suave, firm modeling of the neck and shoulders flowed in broad, long, juicy strokes of pure color. Stuart felt that he was doing his best work. He had a great start, and if he could keep up that clip until he was finished he would have a masterpiece.

Amory's pretense of working was carried off well by his hollow, anxious eyes and his pallor. Mrs. Craven was taking a quiet siesta on her divan. The pose had been a long one and Patty was tired. Sitting for her portrait had lost its novelty and zest.

"Poor Mr. Amory," she said. "You have worked too hard. I am going to give you a rest. I'm going up to the dressing room to relax a few minutes. Please excuse the model." Amory stepped forward to hand her down from the stand. As soon as she was out of sight he darted around the screen. Stuart was in a chair, resting, his eyes bright and happy as he studied his picture. Amory could not restrain a subdued cry of joy.

"Beautiful! Glorious! Marvelous!"

"I believe you, my boy. That's painting." Stuart's face shone.

"By Jove," gurgled Amory, "I've got to show it to her as it is. I can't wait another minute before she sees it."

"Do it. I'd be tickled to have her look at it. I want to hear what she will say."

Amory peeped through the carving, saw the coast was clear, and stole out to his own easel with Stuart's canvas. Mrs. Craven had accompanied Patty to the dressing room. Amory was in ecstacies before the painting when Patty appeared on the gallery.

"You may have a look if you like," he cried. Stuart was behind the screen, looking through with his soul in his eyes when Patty came to see his work, done for her. She clasped her hands.

"O, Mr. Amory, it is wonderful. It is wonderful. You are a genius." Patty stood before the painting, worshiping. Amory posed beside her and Stuart swayed on his feet behind the screen, drunk with pure happiness.

"O, I love this picture, I love it," exulted Patty. "Mr. Amory, just finish that hand and don't do another thing to it. Isn't it finished? I couldn't bear to have a thing about it changed."

"It needs but a few more touches. Will you retire again while I prepare for them?"

Amory assumed his most sacerdotal manner. "I will call you." Patty retired, somewhat puzzled to the dressing room. Amory backed over to the screen.

"Why can't I paint in the hand?" he whispered. "The drawing is all indicated. It only needs a few strokes."

"If you put a brush on that I'll kill you," replied Stuart. "Don't dare to touch it. Bring it here instantly." Amory obeyed hurriedly. He stopped a second to rub his hands.

"You've turned the trick for me, old chap," he vibrated. "I'm the happiest of men. She adores me. O joy!" He capered and hugged himself. Stuart looked after Amory like a man aroused from a trance. His eye lightened and he jammed his hand in his pocket and pulled out his pocketknife and opened it to slash the picture to ribbons. As he raised the blade something caught his attention. He laid the knife down and picked up a brush to qualify a slightly jumpy light on the dress. He worked busily for a few minutes, glancing occasionally through the carving at Patty, who was back in pose.

Patty was thinking intently as she sat. She had not understood why she should leave the studio while Amory went through mysterious preparations to paint a hand. She peeped over the gallery rail and saw him tiptoe behind the screen with the canvas. She was quite sure she saw the top of a second man's head. Patty was of an enterprising and fearless nature. She posed and watched Amory dubiously and then suddenly jumped to the floor and walked determinedly toward the end of the screen. Amory uttered a cry of fright. He was too late to get in front of her and he didn't dare seize her. Stuart heard the cry and came back to earth with a jolt. He whirled around from happy contemplation of his finished work and stared straight into Patty's face. They looked at each other wonderingly, and then Patty crimsoned with indignation.

"Is that the way my portrait was painted?" she demanded furiously. Stuart hung his head.

"I didn't mean to do it," he said. "I didn't come here to do it. Amory saved my life in Paris. In his way he's a good sort, really. I didn't realize what I was doing when I let him show it to you. I didn't mean to paint it all. I never intended to take a brush in my hand, but I was carried away by the chance to paint you."

Patty turned to the easel.

"O-oh, that lovely picture!" she cried.

"I'm not saying anything about my holy art or any of that truck," said Stuart triumphantly, "but isn't that some painting, Patty? Isn't that painting?" He put his arm around her and she laid her head happily on his shoulder.

JEFFERSON 229

By Louise E. Dutton

The Mystery of the Psychic Phone Message.

STURGESS sat up in bed. It was black dark in the studio. The heavy curtains shut out the street light and he could not see the windows. The familiar bits of furniture loomed bulky and formless around him. Sturgess stared into the dark and wondered what had waked him.

He heard a creaking of hinges, a drizzle of rain against the panes, and presently, cutting the silence sharp and long, the telephone bell rang three times. With the third peal still loud in his ears, Sturgess sprang out of bed and, pushing an overturned chair out of his way, kicking aside a piece of Russian brass that had fallen clattering to his feet, stumbled across the big room to his desk.

"Halloo?" he called, hoarsely, and a voice answered him, a woman's voice, low and curiously clear.

"Is it you?" she said. "Oh, if it's you, I want you. Come!"

"What is it?" said Sturgess. "What's the matter?"

"Come!" he heard the woman say. "It's Madeline. Come at once. I want——".

Straining his ears for the next words, Strugess heard her frightened voice die away. He fumbled for his clothes, getting into them blindly in the dark, telling himself that he must not waste time in getting a cab; he must hurry, hurry out of the room and down the stairs. For two minutes the street door held him till he mastered its tricky little Yale lock and let himself out into the cold. He knew that he must not stop to wonder what Madeline wanted. He must hurry.

Down the street, lurching dizzily through a misty fall of rain, Sturgess saw the lights of a belated hansom. He hailed it thankfully and ran to meet it at the curb.

"You must hurry," he warned the driver.

The man nodded sleepily and opened the doors of the cab.

"Where to, sir?" he said.

Sturgess hesitated, blinking in the sudden glare of the street light and staring up stupidly at the red face and curious eyes of the driver.

"Where to?" repeated the man, sharply.

"She said——" muttered Sturgess, "she said——"

The driver laughed as he slammed the door of the cab and drove away into the rain. His profane and not unjustified remarks on the subject of inebriates in general and Sturgess in particular Sturgess did not hear, because his mind, clearing with the chill feel of the rain on his face, was occupied with a sudden staggering realization—the knowledge that on the list of women who valued his acquaintance rather more than he valued theirs, there was not one who answered to the name of Madeline. As he climbed the dark stairs to his room again, he directed against the cabman an unreasoning rage like nothing he had felt since the days when his nurse's voice had waked him, protesting, from the dreams of his boyhood.

A new thought arrested him half way up the last flight, a thought that set him swearing softly to himself as he finished his groping ascent and flung his own door wide. In his room, flooded by a turn of the switch with crude, revealing light, he stood staring helplessly down at the desk where, ten minutes before, he had heard the telephone ring. It was a heavy desk of carved wood. On the dull top lay his writing things, pushed one side to make room for a pile of magazines; there was a letter or two, and a crumpled evening paper flecked with scattered ashes from his pipe; but, as was perfectly natural, since Sturgess hated telephones and had never had one there, he saw no telephone on the desk.

"Sano," said Sturgess the next morning, over his breakfast coffee, "do you believe in dreams?"

The little Jap turned from the breakfast tray to draw back the curtains, letting into the studio a dazzle of sunlight, out of which he squinted uncomprehendingly at Sturgess.

"Not necessarily a dream, you think?" interpreted Sturgess. "You're quite right to question it. Three flights down and three flights up, which makes six. Six flights of stairs, and the lift not working. That's no dream, Sano."

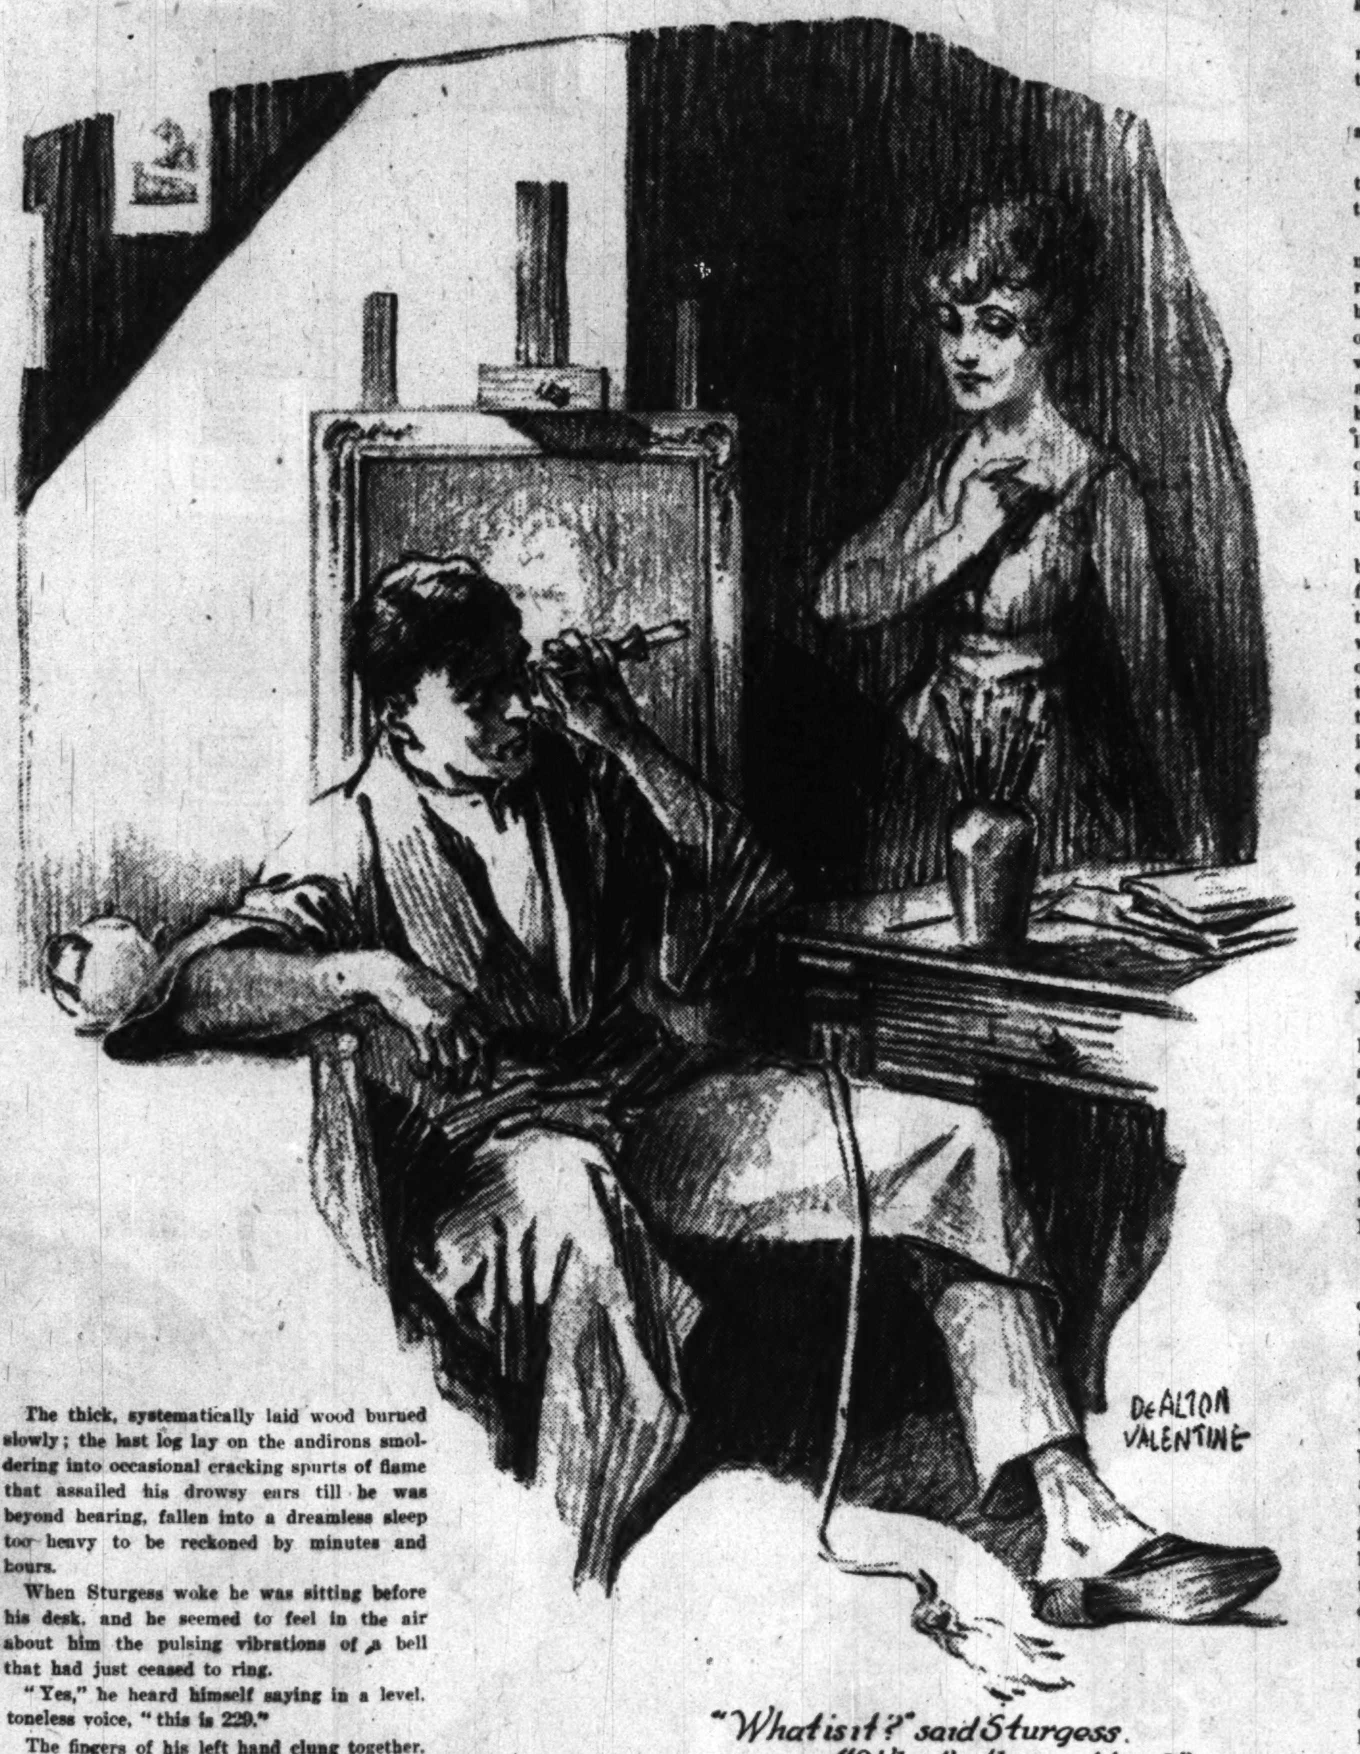
Though it was like no other voice he remembered, Sturgess recalled, he found, with absolute clearness the voice which he had heard in his dream. He had heard it broken by little gasps of terror; he had heard it to the accompaniment of jangling telephone wires. He had bent down, as he spoke, toward the mouthpiece of a telephone; he had groped in the dark for the receiver, and found it smooth to his touch, and cold. The dream had been vivid and accurate of detail. For Sturgess, who had never in waking hours permitted his privacy to be encroached upon by a telephone, it had been a singularly inappropriate dream. But it had piqued his interest, like a serial story with a crisis at the close of the first installment. Dreams, in his opinion, were connected with indigestion more closely than with psychic phenomena. Dreams were not worthy of serious thought. But all day at intervals he found himself wondering to what encounter the unknown lady had summoned him and of what danger she had been afraid.

To clinch the sale of one of his pictures, Sturgess was dining that night with John Lake. He was inclined to regard the sale as inadequate compensation for two hours of Lake's society. Even without the excuse of the vague and unsavory rumors of his discredit, Sturgess would have disliked the man from the sheer physical antagonism which a healthy animal feels for an unhealthy one. At the dinner table Sturgess repressed with difficulty a desire to tell his host that his chin was out of drawing and his lips were too thin.

After dinner he evaded the proposed visit to Lake's house.

"I can't advise you about the hanging of the picture," he objected. "Any arrangement you make without her help is likely to be changed when Mrs. Lake takes charge."

Sturgess, after a vain mental search for the name of Lake's fiancée, having compromised by a premature use of a title for the possession of which he was prepared to commiserate her, presently forgot her completely, together with all other disturbing subjects, in the comfort of his own open fire.



"What is it?" said Sturgess. "What's the matter?"

The thick, systematically laid wood burned slowly; the last log lay on the andirons smoldering into occasional cracking spurts of flame that assailed his drowsy ears till he was beyond hearing, fallen into a dreamless sleep too heavy to be reckoned by minutes and hours.

When Sturgess woke he was sitting before his desk, and he seemed to feel in the air about him the pulsing vibrations of a bell that had just ceased to ring.

"Yes," he heard himself saying in a level, toneless voice, "this is 229."

The fingers of his left hand clung together, stiffly curved and bent to fit the receiver of a telephone, but the hand was empty. He groped along the surface of the desk, making feverish havoc of its contents, till his hand closed over something, and gripped it, and held it. It was round and cold. He began to draw it slowly toward him.

A tongue of flame, shooting up with vivid suddenness from the half burned log on the hearth, sent a flicker of light across the desk, illuminating for a dizzy second the scattered papers, the overturned inkwell, and the polished shaft of the brass candlestick in Sturgess' hand.

For the following week, a somewhat ambitious picture possessed his days and nights to the exclusion of dreams. After it was finished, boxed, and sent, Sturgess, over a late supper at his favorite restaurant, withdrew himself slowly from his craftsman's concentration to discover how tired he was. As he studied the faces of the men with him for a sign that they noticed the fits of abstraction alternating with his bursts of talk, he enumerated to himself with amused detachment the ways in which his surroundings were designed to upset the nerves of a tired man, if the tired man allowed himself the luxury of nerves.

The room was noisy, overdecorated, crowded, and light; all the tables were taken except one, a small one, beside a window. At one of its disordered places Sturgess saw a fading rose. He beckoned the waiter.

"Do you know who sat there?" he asked in an undertone.

"No, sir." The man's surprise at hearing the question appeared to equal Sturgess' own surprise at having asked it.

"Then find out for me," said Sturgess; "go and find out."

After a brief conference with the head waiter, the man discreetly conveyed to Sturgess the information that the occupants of the table had been a woman and a man.

"Never mind the man," said Sturgess. "Was the girl wearing a white gown?"

The waiter nodded. A minute later Sturgess pushed back his chair.

"I'm going," he told his friends.

"Going? Why? Where? Who is she? What's her address?"

Sturgess did not answer these questions. He could not answer them. He wanted to go home, he did not know why; he wanted to go at once. He swore at the inoffensive but persistent newsboy who blocked his progress to the subway. In the car he consulted his watch at intervals. He ran up his stairs, struggled with his refractory door key, and burst into his rooms out of breath and angry, like a man who is late for an appointment or a man who has missed a telephone call.

"And this time I was awake," said Sturgess.

In the morning he went to see his friend Dr. Warner.

The doctor's methods of examination were effective chiefly by their apparent casualness. He found the light firmness of Sturgess' handclasp more significant than the record of a clinical thermometer.

"You're no sick man," he said.

"I hope you're right,'" said Sturgess, "but there's something wrong somewhere." And with his clear eyes a little troubled under the veiled testing of Warner's gaze, he plunged into a detailed history of the telephone.

"If I'm not sick," he concluded, "who is?"

"Madeline," suggested the doctor.

Sturgess chuckled unwillingly.

"You are working——" began Warner.

"Don't, man!" cut in Sturgess. "Don't tell me I'm working too hard. Of course I'm working too hard. So are you. So is everybody I know. "We're thriving on it. Only we don't all hear telephones that aren't there."

"You don't hear them," said the doctor.

"How do you know I don't," said Sturgess, with instant heat.

The doctor launched into a fluent dissertation on the natural explanation of psychic phenomena, making gradual transition to the virtues of country life.

"Get out into the open," he finished impressively. "Get three good meals a day and ten hours' sleep every night."

"Most of that," said Sturgess, "I've discussed with you before. I agree with you perfectly, and I think you say it better than I do, but it's not what I came here to listen to. The thing I'd like to have you tell me is what is happening to me when I think I hear a telephone?"

Warner lapsed cheerfully into nonprofessional habits of speech.

"You don't want a doctor," he said. "It's a clergyman you want, or a spiritualist medium in the agent of a telephone company."

The mention of a telephone seemed to have lost its usual power to goad Sturgess to indignant defense of his right to solitude and his aversion to the instrument in question.

"You know," he said, "that isn't a bad idea."

"Ward," said Warner, "a thing we allow to seem real to us comes near being real. Do you believe in Madeline?"

"Do you believe in fairies?" quoted Sturgess, with forced lightness. His laugh was strained and high. Warner did not echo it.

"There's nothing like a concrete visual image," he said, "for superseding a hallucination."

This conclusion he supplemented by a bit of advice, unchanged after more prolonged investigation of Sturgess' symptoms.

"You get a telephone, and get it quick."

This prescription Sturgess followed with a literal obedience rarely accorded to medical advice. On the evening he came home to find it installed on his desk, new and shining, flanked invitingly by a fat directory, he was rewarded by a distinct sense of pleasure.

He felt proud of his new possession as the reward of his successful conflict with the innate slowness of the telephone company, and impressed with its possibilities by the comprehensive list of names in the book before him.

"You nickel plated, disinfected, smug little product of science," he said, "you're placing me at the mercy of all the bores in the world. You're intimately connected with them, and you look it, and now I shall never be out of their reach."

The telephone received his remarks with an ostentatious humility that exasperated him into a desire for a less passive object for abuse.

"I'll call up Warner," he decided.

Close at his elbow, his desk clock struck once. "Half past 12," said Sturgess. It had been near midnight, he remembered, that the dream telephone had made its first appearance; the dream recurred to him now with the homesick remoteness of memories that are old.

"If I use a real 'phone," said Sturgess, "they'll have to cut out the spirit calls. Good-by, Madeline."

One of central's attacks of temporary aberration had left the line in a jangling confusion of crossed wires which Sturgess, listening impotently, punctuated with unregarded jerks of the receiver hook.

"The spirit 'phone worked better," said Sturgess, half regretfully. "I wish——" His words died away into amazed silence, for coming to his ears clear and sudden out of the jangling sounds he had heard a voice speaking, a woman's voice, low, and curiously clear.

"Yes, it's Madeline," said the voice, vibrating with fear that sent an answering tremor through Sturgess as he listened.

"Come," it said, "I want you to come at once!"

"Madeline," he answered, "it's I, Ward Sturgess; it's I, you know."

Over the wire he heard a little moan of terror.

"What is it?" he demanded. "Where are you? Where shall I come to you?"

"I don't know you." The voice was desperately hurried. "They've given me the wrong number. I don't know who you are."

"It's the right number," said Sturgess.

"I'm not the person you want. This is Jefferson, Jefferson 2——"

In the midst of the number the voice was lost, merged in the meaningless whirr of sound that, in turn, softened into a faint vibration of the wires. It had begun to rain outside. Sturgess heard a drizzle of rain against the panes.

"You've cut me off," he said. "I want Jefferson," and with a flash of inspiration fantastic, but exquisitely sure, "Jefferson 229."

The girl's voice was in his ears, breathless with terror, setting his nerves tingling with unused strength.

"They don't answer," said central.

"Give me information, then," said Sturgess.

When he came down the stairs it was still raining. The cab he had called came clattering over wet pavements.

"I don't know whether I'm asleep or awake," he said.

The street number he had extorted from the telephone operator gave him no clew to the nature of his destination.

In the adventure to which he had committed himself, should he, he wondered, be required to climb the steps of a respectable brownstone house, and disturb the slumbers of a staid family butler to inquire if Madeline was within? Or must he invade some ornate apartment house to question a disdainful hall boy among plush and palms? He had no preference for either course of action, and no objection to any. Other details sank into insignificance between the unbelievable but undoubted fact that Madeline was real.

The cab drew into a cross street, passed a block of darkened houses, and stopped before the number central had given him as the house that held the telephone. In the windows above him, Sturgess saw a flicker of light, and in the entrace hall a faint glow that guided him up the steps. He found the bell and rang it once and again, pausing to listen, sure that the house was not empty, and that he people within were not asleep.

The door swung open suddenly. On the threshold, peering into the dark, a man confronted him, dimly visible against the square of light, but a man, alive and tangible, promising for Sturgess' errand some sane and definite end.

"What do you want?" he said. "Who are you?"

Sturgess laughed. He did not want to laugh. He wanted to apologize for his intrusion; he wanted to get away, with or without apology, and smash his telephone and sue the telephone company for obtaining money under false pretenses; his knight-errantry was to terminate, it seemed, abruptly and ignominiously; the man in the doorway was John Lake.

"Is that you, Sturgess?"

Lake had spoken as usual, in a smooth, overcivil voice, but the face that peered at Sturgess was a livid, unhealthy white, and the slim hand upon the doorknob trembled and twitched. Sturgess watched it curiously.

Behind Lake, through the open door of a vestibule, Sturgess could see a room, dimly lit, and sparsely furnished, a reception hall; at the rear he caught a glimpse of a polished, uncarpeted stairway. He heard no sound from the room; he heard no sound from the house; but he listened, and it seemed to him that Lake, too, was listening. Why, Sturgess did not know. He wanted to know.

"I can't ask you to come in. I am sorry——"

Lake stopped abruptly. From the floor above came a faint, echoing crash; a door had been thrown open. Some one was there, and Sturgess knew who it was. Before Lake could anticipate or prevent it, Sturgess was past him and inside the house.

Seen from within, the hall was a wide, low raftered room, paneled from floor to ceiling with some dark wood. From the fire on the hearth there was a faint, pervading smell of wood smoke. On the walls, a rug, or an occasional bit of tapestry glowed with rich color as it caught the firelight. These details his brain recorded automatically. He was not conscious of them. He was conscious only that a girl was coming toward him down the stairs.

The stairway branched and converged at a little landing a few steps only above the level of the floor. On the landing the girl stood still and looked down at Sturgess. Through its crimson glass an altar lamp that swung from the ceiling above her made flickering stains of red on the warm white of her bare shoulders and the dull, rich white of her gown. The gown was of lace, with no break in its long, straight lines. The girl was not tall, but she stood, as she had moved, like a tall woman. In her dark, soft hair, as she raised her face to the lamplight, the heavy fillet of gold had the effect of a crown. But though they met his eyes directly and bravely, he saw that her eyes were dim and wide with fear.

"I don't know what you want," Lake was saying to him, "I don't know why you came here; I don't know whether you are drunk or crazy. I don't care."

Sturgess glanced questioningly at the girl. Her cheeks flushed in answer, but she did not speak. He wanted to hear her speak.

He heard Lake's voice, rising to shrill falsetto:

"I want you to go. I want you to go at once."

"I will go," Sturgess said to the girl, "when you are ready to go with me."

He felt Lake's hand grip his arm. He struck it off and swung around to face him. Lake stood breathing heavily, his face purple, his eyes narrowed to steel gray slits, then he sprang forward, striking blindly at Sturgess' face.

When the waiting cabman five minutes later closed the door of his hansom upon a conventionally dressed and apparently respectable young gentleman and a young lady who directed him to a house twenty blocks away, in the upper seventies, the man showed no suspicion that he was conniving at an abduction, and that a peaceable and law abiding citizen was lying unconscious upon the floor of the house behind them. Sturgess was not disposed to enlighten him. As Sturgess sat beside her he felt a fold of the long, dark cloak in which the girl had wrapped herself brush lightly against his knee. He caught the faint, soft perfume of violets. He heard her speaking in the voice he knew.

"I can't thank you. I don't know how to thank you. I want to explain. Last week I broke our engagement. Since then he has tried in every way to induce me to see him. He had succeeded tonight. I came in response to a note from his mother, which asked me to a supper party there after the theater. I wanted to make her understand why I could not marry him. But it was he who sent the note. He found it in her desk undated, and he sent it to me. I did not find her. I found myself alone with him. He would not let me go."

"Why did you go to the telephone?" said Sturgess.

"When you heard my voice," she said, "I meant to ask for help from some one. Before I had reached any one he was in the room again."

"I had heard your voice before," said Sturgess.

"What do you mean?"

"I want you to tell me. I think you know."

Looking out at the rainy dark, he felt suddenly that unbelievable things were challenging his sanity, and clamoring for his belief. In a low, breathless voice he heard the girl speaking again.

"I did not love him," she said: "I never pretended to love him. I wanted money enough. I wanted to make a creditable marriage. The first time he kissed me I found out something I had not known before; I found out that a loveless marriage means more than any innocent girl knows before she commits herself to it. But I meant to go through with it; I meant to marry him. Two weeks ago I had a letter which made it impossible.

"A woman has been dancing here in vaudeville this winter a set of Russian dances, original and clever; I have been to see them half a dozen times. I have admired the dances, and I have bought photographs of her in some of her poses. I have them still. Two weeks ago this woman wrote to me—out of spite, perhaps; I do not know why she wrote—a letter about the man I had promised to marry.

"I was alone when I read her letter. My mother was not in the house. And I did not want to talk to my mother; I wanted to talk to some one who understood the strange world into which the letter forced me. I wanted to talk to a man. I thought about the men who had been my friends, and the men who had wanted to marry me, and I found that my confidence in the men I knew was slight, and my claim upon their assistance even slighter. Sitting at my desk with the letter before me, too puzzled and afraid for sleep, I began to think about the men I did not know; all the men, awake or asleep, whom I could reach if I lifted the receiver of my telephone; so many men that there must be one, I thought, who could give me the advice and comfort I needed, and help me to regain my faith in men."

"You did not speak?" said Sturgess. "You did not touch the telephone?"

"I did not speak," said the girl, "but I believe that I called, and that I was answered. I had an instant sense of comfort and safety, as if some one somewhere was sorry for me. Except on one occasion, that feeling has never left me since."

Now they were passing up the avenue. On either side of the cab dim chains of lights went slipping past Sturgess as he listened.

"On one occasion," the girl repeated, "on the evening when I broke my engagement. It was not an easy thing to do. It was not made easier because, in my ignorance of an angry man's propensity for making scenes in public, I had chosen the restaurant where we were having supper as the place for the interview. When it was over, and I was at home alone, I waited for something to comfort me, something that failed to happen. Something for lack of which I cried myself to sleep."

"In the restaurant," said Sturgess, "was your table beside a window? Had you roses to carry or to wear?"

"One rose," she said, "a red rose."

"What was the name of the restaurant?"

Her eyes questioned him, dark and wide.

"You needn't tell me," said Sturgess, "I know."

"You know? You heard me when I called to you? It was because I called you that you came tonight?"

Sturgess reached for her hand. They were warm in his clasp, but they trembled.

"You and I," she said, "why should we have this thing between us; you and I, out of all the people in the world?"

"I have found you," said Sturgess, "with the combined assistance of a mechanical invention of which I disapprove, a man whom I cordially detest, and a tendency to insomnia on my part, aggravated by certain occult agencies whose existence I can neither account for nor admit. It is wonderful, isn't it?"

He felt her hands tighten in his. She swayed toward him. He took her gently into his arms.

"If I had met you," he said, "at dinner, I should have fallen in love with you over the oysters and wondered if it was my duty to society to postpone asking you to marry me until after the soup came in. That also would have been wonderful, as wonderful as this. How or why I have found you is of no importance; you are real, and I have found you. That is the only wonderful thing in the world."

Three TEENIE WEENIES RUN AWAY.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE General never liked to begin a meal until all the Teenie Weenies were in their places, and so one morning when the Dunce, the Clown, and Gogo failed to appear for breakfast he ordered the Policeman to go up to their room and rout them out.

"I'll get 'em out," grinned the Policeman, taking his club from the center table, "I'll give 'em a hot foot," and he bounded up the stairs two steps at a jump.

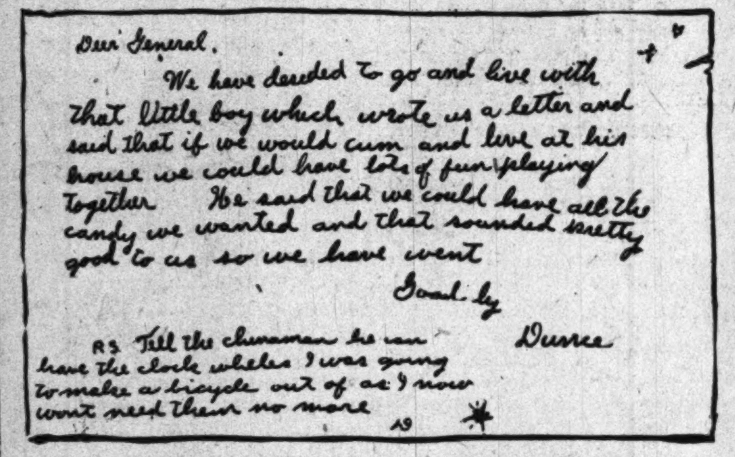
"Bring on the fruit, Cook," said the General, "we won't wait any longer for the lazy fellows. If they won't get up in the morning they can take what is left and it will serve them right."

"General! General!" shouted the Policeman, hurrying down the stairs. "They're gone! Their beds haven't been slept in and I found this paper pinned to the Dunce's pillow."

"Great guns!" exclaimed the General, when he had read the note. "They've run away."

"Run away!" shouted the Teenie Weenies.

"Yes," said the General, "they've run away, "and while the little people listened with very wide eyes the General read the note just as it appears below.



Dear General.
We have deseded to go and live with that little boy which wrote us a letter and said that if we would cum and live at his house we could have lots of fun playing together He said that we could have all the candy we wanted and that sounded pretty good to us so we have went Good by Dunce
P.S. Tell the chinaman he can have the clock wheles I was going to make a bicycle out of as I now wont need them no more

(This note is enlarged seventy-five times.)

The Teenie Weenies were greatly shocked at the news and the Lady of Fashion burst into tears and refused to be comforted until she had had "an enjoyable cry," as the Old Soldier said.

"Well, we've got to go after the runaways," announced the General. "Ring the school bell and when all our friends get together we'll plan a searching party to go after them."

The Teenie Weenies and the squirrels, mice, and birds that lived near the shoe house all knew that when the school bell rang loud and fast it was a signal for everybody to gather as soon as possible in front of the school house. When the Old Soldier had rung the bell and when all the Teenie Weenies and several squirrels, mice, and birds had appeared, the General stepped on to the porch of the school house and addressed the crowd.

"Friends," he began, "you are called together on this occasion to help in the search for three runaway Teenie Weenies who left the shoe house some time last night. They have had several hours' start, but with the help of our friends we feel that we will be able to locate them in short order."

"I'll help," shouted a squirrel.

"So'll I," squeaked a mouse.

"You can count on me, too," chirped a bird, as he hopped on to the roof of the school house porch.

"Thanks, friends," cried the General. "It certainly does my heart good to know we can count on your help."

"We might ask that old cat that lives over across the street to help," suggested the Policeman. "She's familiar with the surrounding country and might be of great help."

"Pardon me," said the mouse stiffly, "I'm afraid I'll have to withdraw my offer to help in the search if this cat goes along."

"Hem—of course—just so, just so," said the General in some confusion. "Of course we will not ask this cat to help under the circumstances."

Soon a party was made up to search for the runaways and in a very short time the little band made their way through the tall grass carefully looking for the trail of the missing Teenie Weenies.

The Newest Hats Are Of Brightly Colored Velvets

Suit of jersey cloth in blue, embroidered in tones of chartreuse and storm cloud gray. Hats shown are of scarlet, of rose, of green, of purple velvet, with trimming used sparingly; shapes possessing novelty and variety always apparent. Beads are placed about some hats necklace fashion, and in the lower central model quaint little figures are embroidered on the suede-like background.

THERE is a marked preference for suits of jersey cloth, for this fabric is found in so many beautiful colors and its durability and non-wrinkling quality are also greatly appreciated. While some women affect styles that are governed by simplicity of line and lack of ornamentation, others revel in the embroidered models enriched with trimmings of fur and velvet.

A charming costume that is typical of the happy mean in such creations is pictured on this page. Originated in a lovely shade of blue, it is attractively embroidered in tones of chartreuse and stormcloud gray. The skirt falls straightly from the waistline while the deep basque hangs in many graceful folds about the figure. Around the shoulders a lovely fur mantelet is lightly draped, for the fur wrap of small dimensions—the cape or the scarf—is an essential part of the well dressed woman's attire this season. The model depicted is developed in moleskin, an exquisite fur, which while lacking the durable qualities of skunk or seal, is much liked and used unstintedly by women whose hours are never vexed by calculating contemplations on the cost of clothes.

Another fur greatly admired for the mantelet of the season is ermine, and white shaved lapin, in gray, brown, or white. is also enjoying an exceptional vogue. Many of these fascinating capes are trimmed with contrasting furs, soft folds of chiffon or velvet, that lend a dainty grace to such creations.

But, while luxurious furs are in evidence everywhere, the new millinery is unusually interesting. Hats of colored velvet are seen in wide variety everywhere, and their novelty of shape is suggested in this picture. Many gay colors are worn. There is scarlet, which lends a vivid note to the autumn landscape; or rose, that seems to diffuse some warmth when winter winds blow bitterly; and orchid, that gives a delicate glow of color to the face. Such hats show many distinctive trimmings. These, however, are still used somewhat sparingly. Paradise and burnt aigrettes, as well as novelty ostrich fancies, are most effective, especially on the hats selected by women of mature years, while wings, set like a zig-zag fence—as if to brace the velvet from which the crown is originated—or laid flat on the brim, appear on some of the cleverest originations.

Smart flower trimmings are now appearing and another interesting tendency reveals the influence of the east, for many of the chapeaux reflect the turban draperies of the dark skinned warriors from India. One attractive creation in dark green velvet is draped quite high, and tiny metal beads are arranged in decorative style about the head band, and this ornamentation is introduced on the soft velvet tassel that, originating in the center of the hat, falls over the left side and is fringed with scintillating metal beads.

Variety is always apparent on the new creations. Beads of enormous sizes are set in necklace style about the hat and knotted in the center front as shown in the hat pictured at the extreme left of the page. Coque feathers, too, are favored by the smart woman, and these are effectively introduced on another model of dark blue that is illustrated. While velvet is the favorite fabric for the grownups' hats, felt is exceptionally good for the young girl, although the former gladly don such models when occasion demands such headgear.

Simplicity in cut seems to be the established rule for afternoon costumes. They are beautiful in material and in treatment, but they are, to a large extent at least, simple in design. The Moyen Age effects are seen, the one-piece idea is conspicuous and there is a great tendency toward everything of the slipover sort, that is to say, the costume that can be drawn on over the head without opening or with a slight opening on the middy style.

MEN AND WOMEN

If her weight and her double chin were not published along with the story of Miss Sharpley's life one might shed a tear of sympathy or two over the first false step of an earlier day. You could at least forgive the lurid plot of "Lights Ahead."

The Case of Miss Sharpley.

And you could forgive the Belasco dreams of the would-be dramatist, for nearly every one has tried to write a play at least once in his lifetime and the remaining few who haven't tried know perfectly well they could if they did try. But it takes a maudlin sentimentalist to see in this Cassie Chadwick type of financier, who would do her benefactress out of nearly $50,000, an object of honorable weeps and sobs.

The First Congresswoman.

"No person shall be a representative * * * who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen."

Will the constitution of the United States have to be changed to accommodate the congresswoman elect from Montana? Miss Jeanette Rankin is the first woman ever elected to congress. It is quite reasonable to hope, now that the ice has been broken, that the time is not far off when one member of the sex will not have to sit alone in congress with more than 400 men.

Miss Rankin will prove, undoubtedly, that woman can serve her country and her state in congress quite as capably as a man. She knows all about the tariff laws, and lobbying, and politics, and stump speeches, having campaigned for suffrage from coast to coast. Small and slight and 35 years of age, a graduate of the University of Montana and the School of Philanthropy of New York City, is the congresswoman elect from Montana. She is much interested in children and social welfare legislation. She can cook, and she makes her hats and clothes; and she is good to look at—and for these last and homey virtues her brothers in congress should give her the glad hand.

Playing the Market.

The fortunes which have been made within the last couple of years out of war orders and war stocks have fired the imagination of the American public to an extent almost epidemical. From the man with a seat on the board or exchange for which he pays thousands of dollars down to the woman who scrubs the office floor and dusts the roll top desks, the speculating bug has got them all.

For the broker with a seat on the exchange no argument against his chance taking is necessary. Though a dangerous business at best, it is his business and he gives his whole time to it. Chance doesn't play as haphazardly in his game. He studies the game as any other business man studies his.

It is probably just as useless to argue against the epidemic to profit by market fluctuations that has struck the stenographer, the lawyer, the shop girl, the school teacher, the office boy with the few hundreds tucked away for the proverbial rainy day airing. For no method of vaccination has been discovered to secure human beings against the infection of the speculative spirit. However, before you capitulate to the stock market lure there are a few angles upon which some little time should be spent in reflection. There are no rules by which absolute safety in speculation may be secured, but there are a few common sense considerations which, if regarded, may keep you out of the lists of financial mortalities

If you are a salaried person don't borrow any money on which to start your operation and don't put all your savings into your first venture in the stock market. Leave a margin for your hour of need which, unless you are the one lucky one out of a thousand, you undoubtedly will experience. When you hear of the success of one or two of your friends remember there are an overbalancing number of losses of which you do not hear. The loss of $950, the entire ten year savings of a Chicago stenographer, occurred last week in an unwise speculation.

Stock speculation is a dangerous sea to navigate and the voyage should not be attempted in ignorance of its hazards.

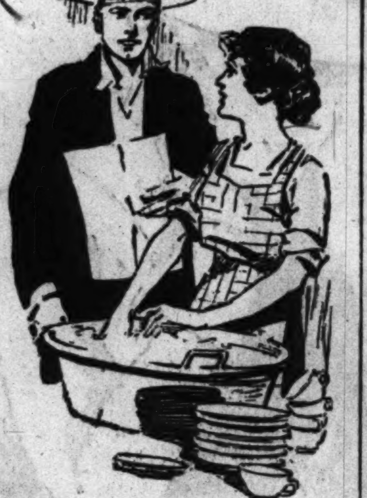
A GOVERNMENT PERMIT.

MARGARET ("Peggy") O'BRIEN awoke the morning of her sixteenth birthday in County Clare, Ireland, to find herself an orphan, her mother having died during the night.

Peggie's nearest relative was a half-brother, who had gone to America fifteen years before. The mother had written him asking that he give little Margaret a home at her death.

Kind neighbors looked after Peggie until the brother could be heard from. A letter came saying he would be glad to give his sister a home. He kept a big hotel, he wrote, and his wife would be glad to have the little Peggie for a companion.



With barely money enough to pay her way and followed by the good wishes of her mother's old friends she started for her new home. Six weeks later (for this was in the days of the old sailing vessels) she arrived at her destination. She found it a settlement of squalid shanties, the hotel a ramshackle boarding house for a gang of men employed in building a railroad.

She found her brother's wife a loud voiced, bad tempered woman, who soon let the orphan girl know that it was not a companion she wanted, but an unpaid drudge for her boarders and children. Then began a hard life for the little Irish girl, kept at work from morning till night by her tyrannical sister-in-law. She found no time to make friends.

The boss over one of the road gangs was a young Irishman, Dan Flanigan. He tried hard to make the acquaintance of little Peggie, and was in a fair way to succeed, when the sister-in-law found it out and informed the simple minded girl that in this country an orphan girl was not allowed to speak to a single man until the government sent her a permit; that this was the law, and any one transgressing it was liable to be sent to jail. This frightened Peggie so that she ran every time the young foreman came around.

Her brother's wife was so tickled at the joke that she could not keep it to herself, and it finally came to Flanigan's ear. He saw a way to turn the joke on the sister-in-law, and at the same time get the little Peggie for himself. Going to the county clerk, he procured a marriage license for Daniel Flanigan and Margaret O'Brien. The document in his possession, he awaited an opportune time to try his plan. It came the next day. The brother's wife and her three children went up on the mountain to pick berries, leaving Peggie to do the family washing, get the dinner, and wash the big table full of dishes.

Flanigan could not have found a better time for his scheme. Peggie would have run at his approach, but the legal looking document awed her. Flanigan gave her the license and told her that it was equivalent to an order from the president himself. Peggie never thought of doubting him. She would do up the work and be ready that evening, she said. Flanigan knew better than to await the sister-in-law's return, and he gravely informed her that an order from the government was to be acted on immediately. Peggy acceded to his wish, and when they returned Peggie was Mrs. Daniel Flanigan. The wild rage of the sister-in-law was, to use Dan's own words, "the foinest sight I ever witnessed."

Relieves Serious Case of Chronic Constipation

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Corrects Condition That Seemed Hopeless.

After suffering from chonic constipation until she was so run down she was unable to do any kind of work, Miss H. A. Frees, 209 Adams St., Dayton, Ohio, obtained a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and used it with such gratifying results that she continued the treatment and has written to Dr. Caldwell that her condition is again normal, and that she wants to recommend Syrup Pepsin to everyone who suffers with constipation.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, gentle in its action and free from griping or other pain or discomfort. It contains no opiate or narcotic drug, and, while acting readily on the most stubborn case of inactive bowels, is absolutely safe for the tiniest babe, so that it is the ideal family laxative and should be kept on hand in every household for use when needed.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin costs only fifty cents a bottle and is sold in drug stores everywhere. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. THEATRE FANS PRESENT COIFFURE SCENES THAT BRING TEARS TO THE EYES

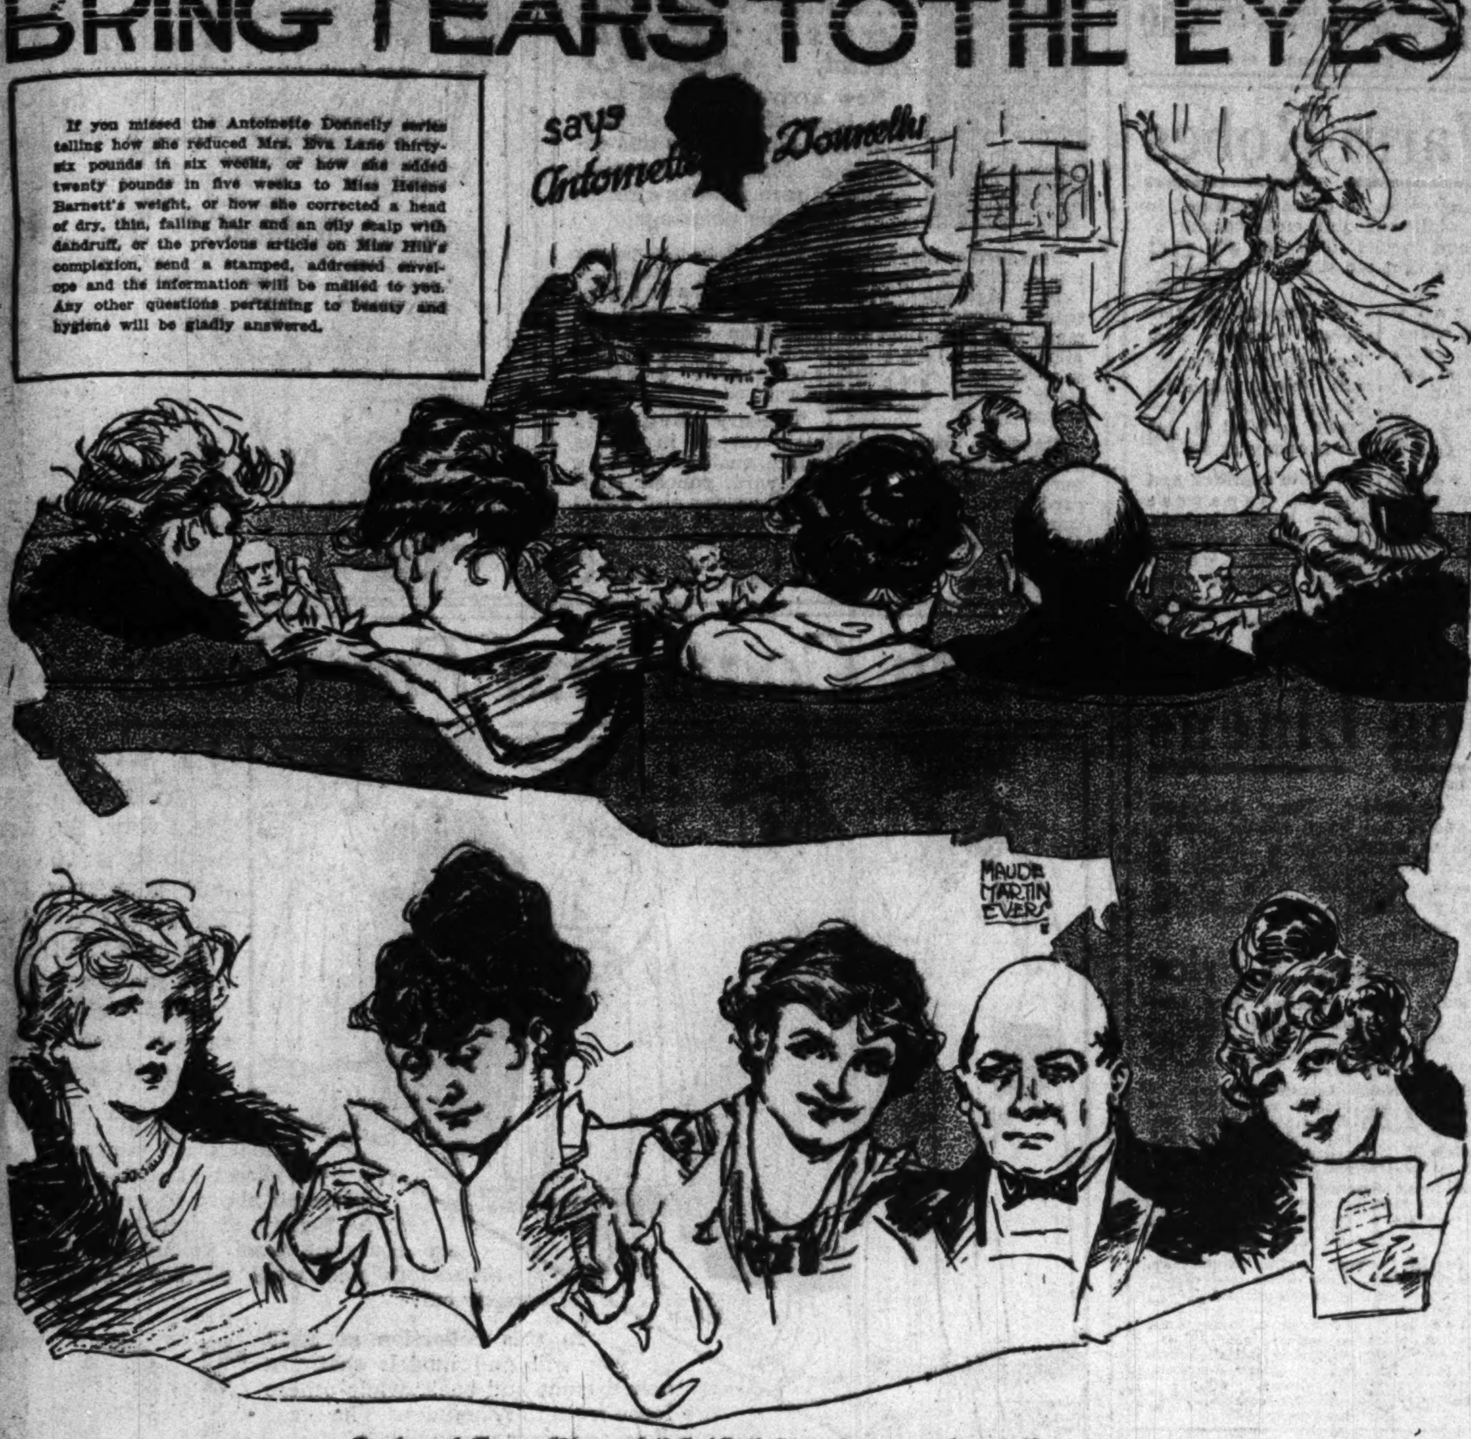
If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks, or how she added twenty pounds in five weeks to Miss Helene Barnett's weight, or how she corrected a head of dry, thin, falling hair and an oily scalp with dandruff, or the previous article on Miss Hill's complexion, send a stamped, addressed envelope and the information will be mailed to you. Any other questions pertaining to beauty and hygiene will be gladly answered.



Back and Front View of "Coiffs" Sketched at a Local Theater.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

RECENTLY at a symphony concert I saw enacted a scene that theater fans and concert fans, and even stay at home fans, have been "putting on" since long before the days when Joseph Jefferson started taking the "wink-les" out of Rip.

But, somehow, at this aforementioned performance the general shabbiness of the scene got on my nerves. And I said: "If that woman with the ermine trimmed evening coat and a costly looking string of pearls could see herself as others see her from the seat behind, maybe she would give the back of her head at least one good look before she comes forth in the direction of the waiting limousine." One good look was all she'd need!

Haven't you, too, sat back of a row of theater fans and wondered why American women will expend so much time and energy and money putting up a fine front with nary a thought to the back coiffure?

I counted in a row, at the particular performance I speak of, sixteen women and four men. Out of that number of women only three back coiffures were thoroughly tidy looking even. Out of these three only two presented really smart lines of coiffure. The endless line of stray wisps and straggling locks, inartistic, hard looking knobs of hair, back combs stuck in regardless of anything but that they stuck, were a bit disturbing to a soul tuned to things harmonious by the enchanting orchestral interpretation of some symphonic poem.

And the point is that they were obviously women who didn't have to rush madly home from work and dress hurriedly to catch the train back downtown. Their dress and jewels, their good looking opera coats, conveyed the impression of a certain amount of leisure.

How different the American woman in this respect from the French woman. The latter dresses so that every detail presented to the person behind is as elegant and faultless as the front view. A smart hairdresser of my acquaintance told me that women will invariably say to her impatiently: "O, let the back go. I doesn't matter whether it is curled or not." Or, "I don't care so long as it is becoming in front."

The result is that when a row of such unthinking heads presents itself the picture is not pleasing. Often I have been amazed, at the turning of a head, to find a back coiffure of old and unsmart lines to have for ownership a young, pretty, bright eyed girl.

It is funny that women are as careless as this about their back coiffure, because the average one of us will do a good deal of mirror gazing, and hemming and hawing, before we decide as to whether the new hat is good looking enough from the back. Much more important it is that the line of hair at the back should not only be free from wayward wisps and locks, but it should be studied to bring out the prettiest contour of the entire back of the head and neck. Squatty, heavy, pudgy, are adjectives you may apply freely to the heads that look stageward.

The malicious result of this thoughtlessness isn't confined to the back of the heads, either. The face suffers if loose strands of hair hang slopping from the back. Nothing will spoil an attractive face more surely than this. If a thick, heavy, lineless mop of hair is allowed to just stay pinned together back there in order that it may be out of the way, you can make up your mind that the front is going to give you away, too.

I know a girl—not especially good looking—whose pride has been that of studying the hairdress that looks well both from a back and front view. Her hair is of that nondescript color which some folk call brown and others mouse. In spite of this, her hair is the first thing you think of when sizing up her assets. Her neck is rather slender and her arms small and the most charming effect has resulted from her careful and artistic coiffure.

Not at theaters alone is an ugly back coiffure an offensive thing. Dances and dinners offer the same opportunity for the onlooker to study the back of a woman's head. So there is not the excuse of lack of admiration for a well groomed head that vanity demands before she puts forth much effort.

My best argument I am saving for the last. It is that you can make yourself look years younger or years older by the way you dress your hair. You want to remember that good profile impressions depend upon the way the hair is arranged on the sides, and the sides do not end at the ears either. The entire back and sides must be studied to earn admiration from the side viewer as well as the folk behind.

Answers to Beauty Seekers.

EDNA: There is nothing you can use to darken you hair except dyes, and I do not approve of bleaches or dyes of any sort, as they are almost certain to ruin the hair. If you take good care of your hair, I am sure you will never regret not having dyed it.

CAROLINE: A long continued deficiency of food or improper kinds of food leads eventually to general malnutrition and anæmia.

MIRA: Any irregularities of food, drink, or sleep may cause a feverish breath, or it may be caused from catarrh, decayed teeth, or a clogging of the bowels. If it is caused from catarrh or decayed teeth advice of a physician or dentist should be sought. Otherwise a good cathartic would possibly remedy the condition. Guard against constipation by eating bran bread, vegetables, and fruit and drinking an abundance of water. Exercise in the open air and eat less.

* *

HATTIE: I am sorry, but I have no patterns or directions for making gloves to be worn at night. You can wear a pair of old kid gloves a size or two larger than what you ordinarily wear, or you can get a pair of white cotton gloves.

Machine for Making Beads.

"WHEN you obtain the address of the correspondent offering the machine for rolling wall paper beads, will you send it to me? I am very anxious to obtain it for a dear old lady over 80 years old who tries to help her old husband by doing anything within her strength. I have just seen her and given her the pattern of these beads, but with this machine she could make more. Will you keep her in mind? She is so sweet and happy and never complains of her lot. R. J. McC."

I regret to say that the machine referred to has already been given away. Is it possible that there is another one like it in the possession of some Cornerite who would care to bestow it on this old lady?

To Amuse Invalid Boy.

"I have a little boy, an invalid, who takes great pleasure in collecting stamps, and if any of the Cornerites have some United States or foreign stamps that are not wanted, my boy would much appreciate them. I am not able to buy him anything to amuse him and the stamps are all he has to while away many a lonely hour. M. L."

This is the sort of appeal that touches us all closely, and I hope it may reach the heart of some one with stamps to give away. We have many stamp fanciers on our list, I know.

Tatting in Exchange.

"I would like to correspond with any one who will do tatting in exchange for sheet music, slips of plants, quilt pieces, or silk scraps. I also have post cards and magazines for any one who will pay postage on them. C. A. L."

We have a number of Cornerites who do tatting and also those who would like to exchange music, plants, and pieces. I shall be happy to put them into communication with C. A. L.

Earning a Living.

"I want to do something that I can depend on for a living and send for my 18 year old boy to come to me. Can any one advise me? C. D."

It is not easy to suggest anything a woman can do situated as you are that does not involve a great deal of hard work and sometimes tasks that are distasteful. I trust you may have some replies from this which may prove more helpful to you.

Removing Paint from Glass.

"I see that some one would like to know how to take paint from window glass. Please tell her to use the old blade of a safety razor and go over all the spots with it. They will be removed without injuring the glass. In ironing smocking place the article on several thicknesses of a bath towel. I am sorry I cannot help more, but I have a sick baby who takes my time. "M. B."

These suggestions will be welcomed because of their practical use and we appreciate the kindliness that even in the midst of the care of a sick baby could snatch a few moments to write down the hints and send them off to help others.

Received Some Magazines.

"Some time ago I wrote to the Corner asking for magazines and for a home for a Great Dane and mastiff dog. I received five requests for the dog and appreciated them so much, and it was with deep regret that I sent each one a card stating that the poor dog had gone to his happy hunting grounds. Some one had poisoned him. I have two letters yet to answer, regarding magazines. I think the Corner is doing a splendid work. "C. H. M."

I regret the sade fate that befell the dog and the disappointment of the would-be possessors, but I am glad to know of the prompt replies sent by the dog's owner.

Pieces to Donate.

"I have a few pieces of silk, cotton, and wool which I will send to any one wishing them. I am going to thank you for the address of the correspondent. I received a beautiful box of scraps from her and a fine letter. She is one of the good kind who helps the Corner along. V. S."

I am pleased to have such a gratifying account of the Cornerite and am glad to offer the pieces mentioned.

Silk Scraps and a Camera.

"I am a little girl 12 years old and would like to have a camera and some silk scraps. Will some one in the Corner be so good as to grant my request? If so I will be much obliged, but I cannot pay postage on them. D. G."

I think there is little question that the little girl will get the silk scraps she asks for, but I am not so sure about the camera. Cameras are much in demand, but it may be that some one possesses one she will be glad to bestow on this 12 year old.

Has Use for a Gun.

"I am out in the desert trying to recover my health. I have much use for a shotgun or an old rifle to get game, as the doctor advises me to do. If any one has a gun that is not needed I would appreciate it much, as I am unable to buy one, but will gladly pay postage on it. B. A. C."

I hope some one may be able to send the gun requested. It is bad enough to be exiled in search of health and any aid we can give the invalid is a benefit to us as well as to him.

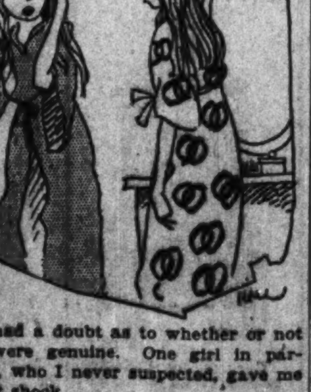
The Worst Slam I Ever Got.

Sometime, somewhere, somebody gave you a "slam" that nearly bowled you over. Tell the worst one you ever received. The stories must be original, written on one side of the paper, and confined to 300 words. Address them to Slam Editor, "The Sunday Tribune." For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. No letters can be returned.

This Ought to Hold Her.

I am blessed with a set of teeth which are as near perfect as any one could want them to be. I have received many compliments on their account.

Some of my acquaintances who allowed the green eyed monster to get hold of them had a doubt as to whether or not they were genuine. One girl in particular, who I never suspected, gave me a great shock.



I had an occasion to spend the night at her home and when we were retiring she asked me in an earnest and confidential way if I would like some water to "soak my teeth in over night."

That ought to have held me if a rope wouldn't. U. N. H.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE education of parents is becoming a popular pastime. That is what parent-teacher associations are doing. That is what Dr. Ernest Hamlin Abbott's charming book aims to do.

There was an entertaining article in a periodical the other day on "How My Boy Brought Me Up." Even I am in the business, since so large a part of right conduct of life is right eating or dependent upon right eating. It is groups of mothers who want to feed their children and husbands right who want me to talk to them.

The poor child who is given castor oil is having his eliminatory troubles from an improper diet, or perhaps some wrong fact connected with a right diet, such as nagging while he is eating. The alternate griping, and then the laxative flux, have disastrous effects on his nervous system, since fragile nerve ends line much of the digestive tract. Nervous systems constantly disturbed in childhood become the despair of parents and doctors and the everlasting plague of their "touchy" owners.

Diabetes, Bright's disease, gall bladder troubles, appendicitis, uremia, are all eliminatory troubles due to faulty diet. And think of the punishments people take because of them—monstrous punishments often!

While there are a great number of almost axiomatic eating principles, every individual has his or her idiosyncrasies. One form of protein may cause you, say, discomfort, but this does not mean that you must suffer protein starvation, although it may mean that you should let veal alone, or eggs, or even cheese or beans. That the protein in some one combination of five foodstuffs hurts you is all the more reason why you should learn to get this food element in the form most favorable for your particular chemistry.

Remember that the five foodstuffs are protein, carbohydrate, fat, water, and mineral matter. All food materials are made from these, and in only a few materials do we have any one of them in anywhere near pure form. Sugar is almost pure carbohydrate, but starch generally has mixed with it a trace of protein, some fat, minerals, and water. If a man was protein hungry his wonderful body would try to adjust itself to the condition, one cell giving its life for another. Cell stuff is mainly protein, with water and mineral.

The starchy content of some kinds of dried beans does not seem to agree with some people, but it may be the total composition of the bean that causes trouble, or often it is the indigestible skin. This is cellulose, the most concentrated of carbohydrates. It is the skeleton of plant life, and the one best bulk for a digestive muscle to grip. But nobody depends upon the carbohydrate of the bean for starchy food. Rice, wheat, and corn furnish the major part of the world with this most splendid of food fuels, the best fuel for the heart muscle, and a food which spares protein.

One of the greatest mistakes, and a more or less universal one, is the use of proteins for fuel. There are such generous traces in foodstuffs not of protein character that one could almost do without those yielding mainly protein. Sugar is a carbohydrate which is one of the quickest to yield heat and energy to the body; that is, burns most quickly. It goes in a straight line, in furnishing fuel for muscular activity. A protein goes in a wide curve to such work, since it must be made over and the part which will not burn sent off to the kidneys for elimination. An overload of meat may make all sorts of trouble in the digestive tract, but it makes more trouble in a body in which the chemical equilibrium has been disturbed by fatigue, nervous conditions, illness, drugs.

Mothers worry because a child will not eat egg or beef or this or that. It would not be much for them to learn from bulletin 28 of the department of agriculture, obtainable from the superintendent of documents, Washington, D. C., for 10 cents, how to get for their children a large number of calories of the best fuel, a little protein and more fat than they generally get. The grown child requires 2,600 calories per day, as do most women. The small baby is supposed to get forty-five calories for each pound of weight, and a less portion per pound as he gets more bulk in proportion to surface.

Colcannon.

Mix any quantity of hot boiled and chopped cabbage with an equal quantity of mashed and well seasoned potatoes. The green cabbages are most attractive for this. A great many mothers complain that their children will not eat vegetables, but most children will eat mashed potatoes, and if nothing is said about cabbage with it, which they may think they dislike, they will eat colcannon if deliciously prepared. Remember that mashed potatoes can be made to carry a great deal of fuel in the shape of good butter or cream. If cabbage or turnip is mixed with it there is also wholesome bulk.

Cabbage and Peas.

Though green canned peas are so largely water they contain some protein, and when mixed with cabbage the dish has desirable cellular bulk, fresher flavor, and, with butter added, we add fuel value. Take half of a small cabbage, about three-fourths of a pound, and cut it up fine. Put on to cook in barely enough water to cook, if new cabbage is used, in a covered pan or kettle. When tender add a can of drained peas and cook the two together until the latter are well heated through. Dress the whole generously with butter.

Anise Cabbage.

Sometimes a strange or new flavor will interest a child. Many children have loved the anise cakes of Christmas time. Anise flavor may be put into boiled cabbage, and if it is then used cold as a salad, with French dressing, it will be generally appreciated. Allow one teaspoon of anise seed to each pound of cabbage. Tie the seed in a cloth, add to cabbage covered with cold water, brought slowly to boil, and boiled till tender.

Graham Rolls.

Sometimes when children do not grow it is because they are protein hungry. If they will not eat regular protein food, among which the egg is most commonly forced upon them, that same egg may be put into a wholesome bread, such as Graham, and they will eat that. The following roll is laxative, the graham furnishes fuel, and the egg in it furnishes building material:

One beaten egg, one cup of sour milk, one tablespoon of sugar or molasses, one scanty level teaspoon of soda or less, if milk is not much sour, one tablespoon of white flour, and graham enough to make a batter of muffin type. Heat old fashioned iron roll pan and fill each place two-thirds full.

Sweet Graham Wafers.

Most cookies are hardly more than indigestible sweetened pie crust. Scotch short bread may be good nourishment for a race of northern fishermen, but hard on their office working descendants. The following wafer may be a dainty thing and is a sort of compromise of the cookie type:

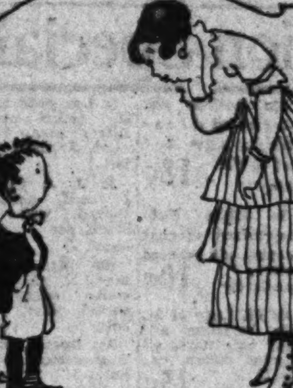
One-half cup of granulated sugar, one-half cup of sour cream, one-half teaspoon of soda, one-half teaspoon of salt, one heaping cup of sifted Graham flour, white flour to handle; that is, to use on board and rolling pin. Add soda to sour cream in mixing bowl, stir, add sugar and stir the salt and flour, and stir. It should be a stiff and well blended dough. It should be compact before poured out on to flour covered board, then make up into ball (flour covered), and roll it out thin.

Cut out wafers with round or oblong cutter or both. A nice size and one giving pretty effects in the hands of a good workwoman are wafers cut domino size with a knife. Cut first into narrow strips and then divide. If a knife is used for cutting sprinkle sugar over rolled out dough, otherwise on each wafer. Prick with fork before baking. Bake in a rather slow oven until crisp and brown. Pretty for afternoon tea or parties where some light refreshment is acceptable.

BRIGHT·SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."



The children were all ready to go home from a party, but little Joseph lingered. "Shall I help you get ready?" asked one of the women present. "O, no, I'm in no hurry because mother won't let me eat any supper when I get home anyway," answered the child. I. G. F.

My neighbor, hearing terrifying shrieks, rushed out to find her small grandson kicking at his little playmate's shins.

"Why, Dickie! Aren't you ashamed of yourself? Now, you must tell Stanley you are sorry you hurt him."

"I'm sorry, Stanley," sobbed Dickie, obediently. "But, Stanley, if you do that again, I'll kick you again." A. R.

I took my young nephew to the Lincoln park zoo and he was delighted with the animals. On returning home he told his aunt of all the wonders he had seen and then enthusiastically declared: "And I saw and spoke to Cy De Vry."

"Who is Cy De Vry?" she asked.

"He's the most important of all the anlamels." W. E. B.

Constance was minus several teeth. One of them had come in and another was just peeping through. She displayed them with pride to her brother, who said, "O, mother look, sister has one tooth that's all grown and the other's just a bud." M. S. D.

Anna, becoming angry, bit her smaller sister. Her mother, hearing the little child crying, went to see what the trouble was. When she found out she reproached Anna for it and asked her over what she had become angry. Anna replied: "I wasn't angry; that was just righteous 'dignation.'" V. M. K.

BABY'S CHEEKS MASS OF SCALES

Her Face Was Terrible to Look At. Would Scratch and Cry. Had to Tie Her Hands Up.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"When baby was four months old her face became very red and rough and the skin cracked and bled. Water oozed out and wherever the water came it would form big scales, and each cheek was a mass of thick scales. Her face was terrible to look at. She would scratch and cry and we had to tie her hands up.

"A friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and we got them. Now she is healed after using three boxes of Ointment and three cakes of Soap." (Signed) Mrs. Amanda W. James, 36 Moore St., St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 25, '16.

Says hair stays curly and wavy for a long time and appears natural too.

Girls! Try this!! A few ounces of atalpa water will cost very little at any drug store and there is nothing better to help retain the curls and waves or to soften, gloss or fluff the hair and to make it look thick and abundant.—Advertisement

MORAL COURAGE TESTED.

A PET argument of the anti-feminists is that women have little, if any, sense of honor, especially in regard to monetary matters. They will tell you, for instance, that the source of her income is never given a thought and that whether the comforts and luxuries which come to her in the course of her life are gained through dishonest and doubtful business dealings or whether they come to her through honorable and ethical channels is the least of her considerations.

But in refutation of this argument you all have known, as I have, men who built up comfortable fortunes for themselves and their families through investments and enterprises that are, to say the least, questionable, and who take great pains to hide the sources of their incomes from the feminine members of their households.

To prove that women are not wholly without honor, I will give you, in her own words, the story of a young girl who has just passed through a trying experience. This experience, while serving to disillusion her, has, it seems, in no way affected her fine sense of the honorable.

"It is not long since I finished a business training and started to work, equipped, as I thought, with sufficient knowledge of the ways of the world to enable me to carve my way in business even against odds. But my first position, which I held only for three months, has served to enlighten and educate me more than all the years of schooling I have received.

"I was the only employé of the two men who were partners in the business, and I took care of all the office routine work. I was unusually well paid, for although I started to work at a reasonable salary, I had been working hardly a month when my salary was increased out of all proportion to the work I did. This did not trouble me at first, as I knew that money was pouring into the small but richly furnished office. Both the men were charming to me, treated me not only with respect but with kindness. My hours were short and, as I have said, my salary unusually large. For the first two months that I worked I never stopped congratulating myself, and I was the envy of all the girls who had attended business school when I did.

"One evening I brought home a few of the circulars which it was one of my duties to send out regularly, addressed from a list which we kept on file. I proudly displayed them to my father as literary gems, but after he had read them carefully he told me that he suspected my generous and gentlemanly employers were operating nothing more than a swindle. I was indignant with father for intimating such a thing, but the next day and every day thereafter I found myself mentally questioning everything either of the men said or did. I read carefully every bit of printed matter in the place, and against my will found myself listening to and checking up on the conversations that took place in the office. To my horror it was not long before I knew that my father's suspicions were well founded and that my bosses were nothing more than a well mannered pair of crooks.

"I must confess that even after I knew the men I worked for were making money dishonestly I had quite a struggle with myself to give up the position. It was no easy matter for me, after the short hours and long salary I had been luxuriating in, to contemplate having to work under such conditions as most of my school fellows were working under.

"I finally summoned up enough courage to resign, as I couldn't go on taking money which I knew was dishonestly gained. My courage and morals went no further, however. I was genuinely sorry for my employers' victims, but I could not bring myself to the point of having the swindlers prosecuted.

"I am working in my second position now. Of course the work is harder and the compensation is small, but I am not entirely discouraged, as several important and well paying positions in the firm are held by women."

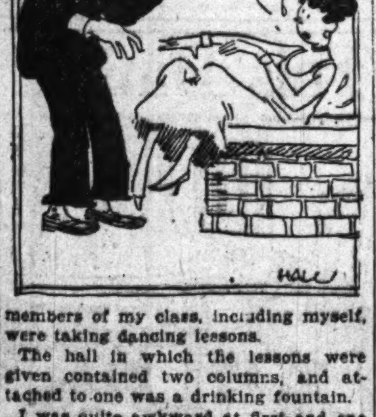
Backed Into Fountain.

During my senior year in high school in a small western town several of the members of my class, including myself, were taking dancing lessons.



The hall in which the lessons were given contained two columns, and attached to one was a drinking fountain.

I was quite awkward at first and one evening I happened to have a partner equally as awkward as I was. We had a hard time trying to avoid stepping on each other's feet, but we managed to refrain from colliding with the other dancers.

Suddenly my partner whirled me out of the way of some dancers and seated me full into the drinking fountain, wetting the entire back of my dress. I managed to find myself a seat and stayed there until the lesson was over. G. A.

Could Not Linger.

I won my mate by attending strictly to my duty as nurse girl when the policeman whom I afterwards married attempted to detain me for a friendly chat. I was wheeling a baby in the park and met an officer with whom I was slightly acquainted. But in spite of all his persuasions I could not linger and talk with him because, I told him, I must keep on wheeling the child, who needed the outing. He has informed me since we were married that I was the first nurse girl he ever ran across who refused to neglect her charge to flirt with him or his brother officers and that he thought such a girl would make a good wife and take first class care of her own children.

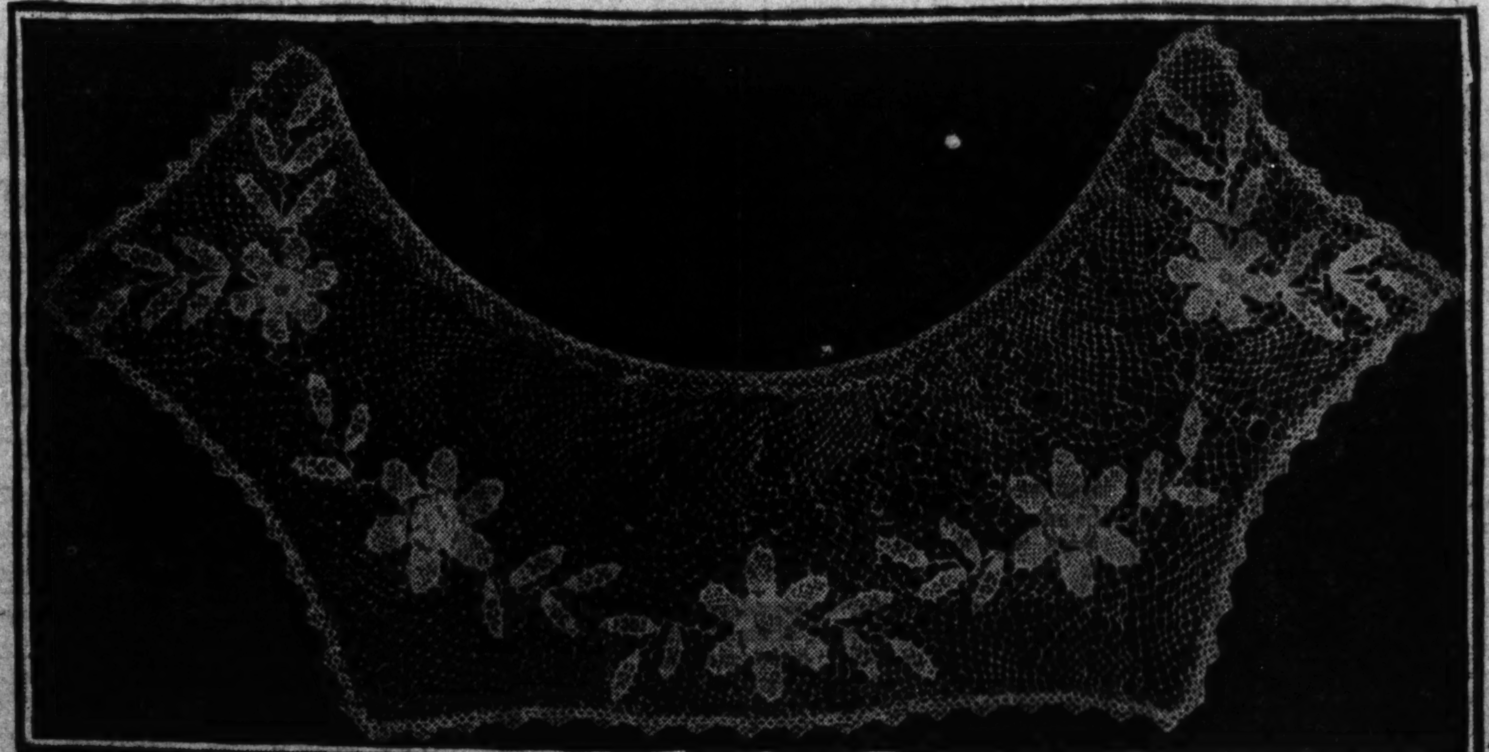
Embroidery Design for Armenian Lace Collar.



On a heavy piece of cotton or linen cloth draw with a pencil the outlines of the collar, then draw the flowers and leaves.

For the outline beading for the collar, make a chain of 5 and join—* turn—ch. 3, d. c. into loop, repeat from * to a length sufficient to outline the collar all around.

Thread needle with as long a thread as will be easy to work with, take another length of thread, and with the threaded needle fasten down at short distances the latter thread, following the outline of the flowers, leaves, and stems, then go back over the same outline thread and button hole stitch all outlines, but do not sew into the cloth.

Now start at the right hand side of a flower petal, bring the thread across to the left side of petal and catch to the side, then button hole stitch twice over the thread, leaving thread but a trifle loose between each 2 button hole stitches, * bring thread across to left side of petal and catch to side, button hole twice over the 2 threads, leaving thread but a trifle loose between each two button hole stitches, repeat back and forth from * till petal is filled; fill in all petals of flowers and leaves in this manner, also the centers of the flowers, then between the centers and petals of the flowers make a cross stitch to join the parts of the flowers to the centers.

After finishing the flowers and leaves, fill in the remainder of the collar with a button hole stitch, leaving loops between the button hole stitches irregular.

For the edging around the collar fasten thread to the outer edge of collar beading, making * 2 button hole stitches in beading, leave a short loop, repeat from * 3 times, working back, make 2 button hole stitches in each loop but one, leaving a short loop between each 2 button hole stitches; work forth and back, dropping 1 loop each time across until there is but one loop left, then run thread up the right side of point to the beading and repeat around the collar.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are Suspicious.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THOSE of you whose birthdays fall during the week begining today are on the cusp between Scorpio and Sagittarious, partaking, therefore, of the qualities of each sign. Until the 23d you are more under the influence of Scorpio, whose leading characteristics are obedience to authority and a demand for your obedience from those under you. Your professions are surgery, medicine, and the ministry; in the latter your unusual gift for public speaking is almost sure to make you successful. Your chief characteristics are love of labor, justice, silence, and skill.

If you come more under Sagittarius' influence, you will be positive, fearless, and masterful, apparently born to command, and impatient of dictation or interference. Any one who gets in your way will hear from you in no gentle terms. Fear has no restraint for you; policy alone will cause you to change your mind.

Suposing your well laid plans go awry and supposing your efforts do not meet with the appreciation you think is due them, do you keep on in the cheerful tenor of your way? No, indeed; you become the gloomiest, most unhappy person imaginable. Although you may still go about the performance of your duties with regularity, it is done in the spirit of an automatom. For with all your external assumption of indifference, you are deeply sensitive. Most of the trouble lies with you, for you do not attract people to you in a confidential way, and besides you are naturaly too suspicious.

Because you are more often right than wrong, you get the reputation of being infallible. Yet being human, you make mistakes, but you just won't admit them or ever own up to any one that you might have been wrong. True, you do bend all your energies oward doing things that are brought to your attention, but you insist upon the same energetic disposition on the part of those associated with you; and this isn't always desirable.

Even though you are apt to be especially successful along these lines—surgeon, lawyer, teacher, singer, and actor—you may also achieve satisfactory results in commercial enterprises in fact, in anything that necessitates penetrating foresight.

Your tribe is Levi, meaning "those who are jointed or bound," which is characteristic of the faithfulness of all Sagittarius people to the marriage vow. Your ruling planets are Mars and Jupiter, and as Mars is the planet of patriotism and Jupitre of art, you se what a rare rombination you are; and, too, where Jupiter reigns, it brings a love of the sublime and the beautiful.

On the whole, Sagittarius is considered a most fortunate sign in which to be born. You may be independent and somewhat suspicious, but you are a more even combination of faults and virtues than most of the other signs. Because you are naturally endowed with such gifts, you should make all the greater effort to shake off the bad habits that you possess.

If still in Ccorpio, a union with Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, will be a sympathetic one, or, possibly, an equally satisfactory partner might be found in Cancer, June 23-July 22. You Scorpio women will also find a congenial life companion in Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, and in pour own sign.

Your two most fortunate weks are those beginning Feb. 19 and July 3, and you should be careful during hte week beginning April 13. Your colors are scarlet, golden brown, and black; birthstone, the topaz.

You of Sagittarius will find your most harmonious union will be with your opposite. Aries, March 22-April 22, or with Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23.

You will be most fortunate in your own sign, but may have some misfortune during the week beginning June 27. Your colors are red, green, and gold; birthstone—

"If Sagittarius sign to earth brought you,
Your ring should bear the turquoise lue."

Crazy About Boys.

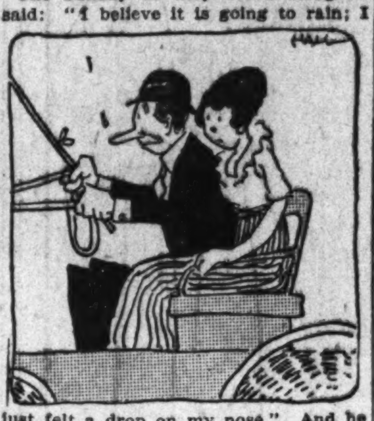
Not Three Miles Long.

She had a fine young farmer take a shine to her. He had property and she was in great hopes. He was good looking, but his nose was rather long, of which fact he was extremely sensitive.

One Sunday as they drove along he said: "I believe it is going to rain; I just felt a drop on my nose." And he touched up the horses to hurry home, but she, not wishing to end her pleasant ride, said: "O, don't hurry. That rain you felt on your nose may be two or three miles off."



He abruptly set her down in the road and as he drove off called to the bewildered girl: "My nose may be a trifle long, but not as long as some fools try to make out." F. J. S.

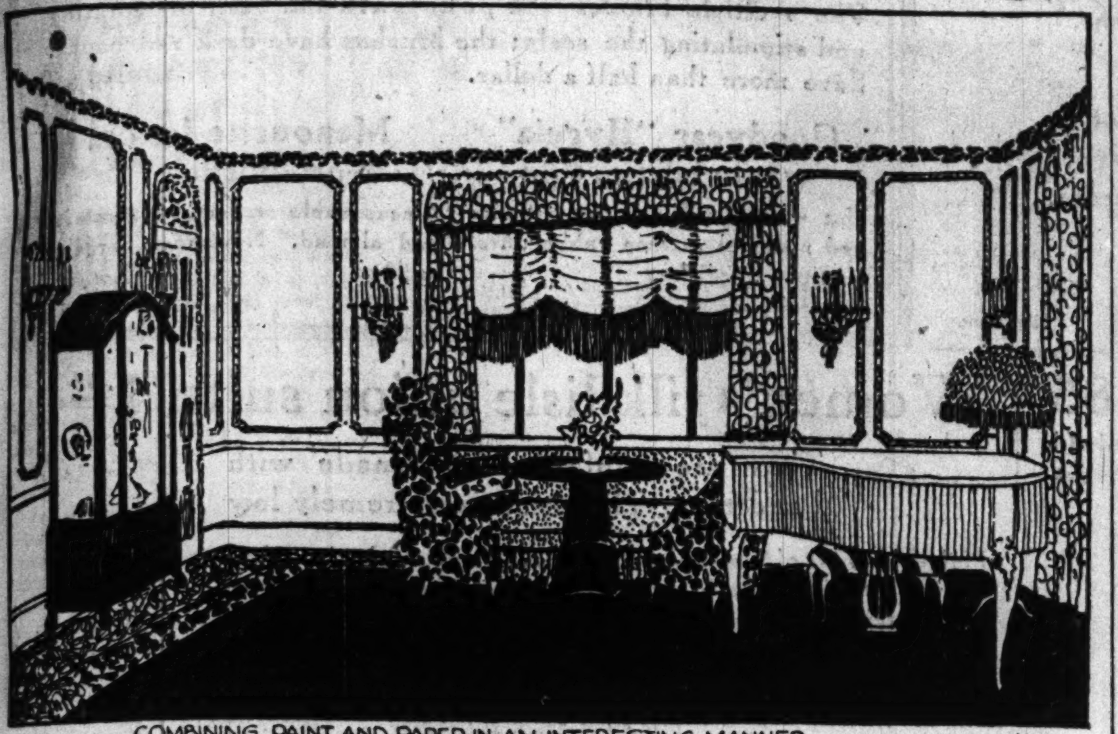
PANELED WALLS

Anita de Campi



COMBINING PAINT AND PAPER IN AN INTERESTING MANNER

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

THIS year walls that are paneled, whether in paper or paint, easily take the lead in popularity over all other modes of wall decoration.

The wall covering that is highly lauded by the most exclusive decorators is a finely woven artists' canvas that comes already sized and painted in light neutral tints. This is being emulated by stretching walls with light weight canvas and painting them any desired tone with paint thin enough to allow the grain of the textile to show through. An excellent copy of this covering is shown in papers pressed in imitation of heavy linen. In these the printing and pressing is so perfectly done that it is only by actually handling that the buyer can tell which is paper and which is cloth.

Extremely light colors take precedence over deep tones, in paint as well as paper. People have begun to realize that white can be had in all colors. That sounds paradoxical, doesn't it? But we have cream white, ivory white, pearl white, lead white, milk white, flake white, etc. Various neutral tints, just a tone deeper than these, shade into buff putty, oyster green, lichen gray, ashes of roses, elephant's breath, golden taupe, dove blue, sand, etc.

It is the rage of the moment to key a room to any one color. That is, to have everything in the room tinged yellowish, grayish, rosy, greenish or bluish. The effect is much as though it were all seen through delicately colored glass.

Wall paper manufacturers and paint manufacturers, filled with trade rivalry, use every argument against each other. Yet it is amusing to watch the frantic efforts of each to imitate the products of the other. The paint man will apply a coat of color and then introduce an all over stencil, assuring you, triumphantly that "It looks exactly like wall paper, but so much more sanitary," and the wall paper man will offer a finely grained neutral toned paper with the selling argument, "It can't be told from a flat paint side wall, but it has the advantage of covering all wall defects —no ugly cracks, etc."

In spite of the antagonism between them, paint and paper dealers have been brought together this season by a general demand on the part of the householders for the combined products of both. It is the height of fashion in colonial rooms to resort to the beautiful old style of enameled wainscotings, with landscape papers paneled into the upper walls.

Among the most novel combinations of the season is a painted side wall divided off into panels that are outlined with narrow strips of wall paper. This paper is made expressly for the purpose. It comes in rolls like ordinary wall paper, but it is printed in wide or narrow bands. These are cut into ribbons and placed according to the taste of the decorator, whether as margins to all wall spaces or simply in one horizontal line below the molding.

A certain flat tone paint has a surface much like calcimine in appearance, but it has this advantage over calcimine—it can be washed. Most frequently when paint is used, narrow wood moldings are tacked to the walls in panel outline, and the paint used inside of the panels so formed is usually a little lighter than the balance of the space. Strips of wall paper or even picture paper panels are often introduced into these framed in panels, and light tinted paint used in the balance of the room.

The most effective of these inserted papers are the Japanese effects. Flowers and birds are introduced. Designs are sensationally extreme, and this is allowable because they are not repeated ad nauseam. One of the most unique patterns is a large panel picturing gorgeous Japanese fish, cavorting in the depths of a French gray sea that is amusingly interspersed with sprays, bits of seaweed, and water lilies. The surface and the depths are impartially mixed together, after the naive manner of the people of the orient.

In children's rooms the picture borders are in paper; the best are those in consecutive panels lithographed in oil colors, so that the addition of a coat of varnish makes them washable. The remainder of the room is done either in paint or in glazed or other washable paper.

Exhibiters in the big cities have grown lavish in the generosity of these displays.. Great strides have been made in the right direction in this matter. Formerly decorative departments were conducted in a manner so narrow that it was prejudicial to public improvement. Decorative ideas were scarce and undeveloped, and a general fear prevailed that the ideas, scarce as they were, would be stolen. Now the decorator who nourishes any such fear proclaims himself by that fact to be unprolific. The best studios and departments invite inspection, and it is an invitation distinctly to the advantage of the buyer.

The majority of intelligent women have only to see the best in the furnishings and the decorations of the home to recognize it as such forevermore. It cannot be doubted that exhibitions of the proper furnishings of a complete apartment that have been undertaken lately by leading merchants and open to the public have done much toward cultivating the taste of the people.

Some exhibiters even supply teachers. In a decorator's sample bungalow that I have seen lately an attractive girl was actually teaching visitors how to paint their sidewalls. In many departments the making of lamp shades, sofa pillows, and other home articles is taught free of charge.

A peep into the portfolios of a good decorative artist showed some designs combining paint and paper in an interesting manner.

The plan that was chosen for the accompanying illustration is of a blue paneled music room. It has white doors, white ceiling, white glass curtains, and a white enameled piano. The inside draperies are white dotted with blue. The floor is covered with a seal brown rug having a tan and deep red and olive border. Two of the chairs are of olive velvet and several more are upholstered in tan, deep red, and olive chintz.

In this room is an ebony cabinet and an ebony table. A large standard white enameled lamp near the piano has a rounded shade covered with straw colored silk. There is no center light, but many side lights, all alike, of five branch candle sconces fitted with electricity. The panel outlines are of wall paper binders in color and a wider binder edges the top of the wall clear around the room.

MISS MILDRED G.: I cannot think of anything different. I should advise a simple frame matching the exact shade of the middle tone in the picture. An attractive piece of furniture is a fender bench, but if you do not care to buy such a piece and already have a long, narrow bench I can see no objection to your using it in front of the fireplace instead.

MISS EDNA M. A.: You are so decided in the things you want, and they seem to be so entirely suitable to the character I find in your letter, I hesitate to advise you to change your plans. They quite meet with my approval for you, because they seem so much a part of yourself. If you, as you say, are at work every day, and your mother also works, I suppose, of course, in your new home you will have some sort of collaborative housekeeping. You seem to be so young I cannot imagine your planning without the assistance of your mother. Why not be guided by her advice in your choice of things, as she will probably have more practical ideas than you yourself have?

MRS. A. B.: In calling on a married couple with two grown sons the caller should leave cards simply on the married couple, not on the sons. When a married woman uses cards engraved "Mr. and Mrs. John Brown" and is calling on a married woman and her daughter, she should leave two of these cards as well as one of her husband's. When invitations to bridge teas are written on calling cards the answers should be formal notes written in the third person.

H. F.: A young woman should always rise when her hostess is presenting other guests to her. If a woman is to be married in her traveling suit a corsage bouquet would be more appropriate than one to carry, particularly if she is having no attendant to whom she might hand the bouquet during the ceremony. The wedding announcements should be sent out by the first mail after the ceremony.

Mother! Look at Your Child's Tongue

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They Love It

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—Advertisement.

Fifty-One Years

NOW we are coming to the start of the Christmas season. With Christmas a little more than a month or so away, all of us are planning to make this Christmas a big one. To those who have money the problem is simple. To those of us who have not so much money the problem should be equally simple. For it is not so much the amount of money that we have but rather the handling of what we have, shrewdly and wisely.

To those who have always found Christmas a hardship rather than a joy, the day means a littered floor, an empty pocketboook and a drawer full of unpaid bills. To those who have purchased wisely and well, Christmas means adding articles of genuine usefulness and stability to those which they already possess.

YOU who wish to celebrate the Christmas season fittingly and happily, at the same time observing care and economy in your purchasing, the Spiegel Buying Power is ready to help. It will give you more for your money, wider selection, and more lasting stability. It will enable you to buy generously, yet wisely. The Spiegel Personal Service and the Spiegel Selling Courtesy are ready to do their share.

This page of bargains does not represent one-tenth of the beautiful things with which our stores are crammed. Ornaments for your person, music for your amusement, furnishings for the beautification and comfort of your home, all are here. Come and see for yourself. A dollar or so in Cash is all you need.

Goods purchased now will be held until Christmas if you wish.

Like Patience on a Monument, She Smiles at Grief

By Percy Hammond.

WITH admirable determination Miss Elsie Ferguson pursues ambition's way, though beset by many mishaps. Bad plays pester her; she has had in all her career a single good one, meaning "Outcast." While Miss Barrymore sullenly withdraws to the movies, declining further humiliation at the hands of the playwrights, Miss Ferguson persists. One can see how "Shirley Kaye," her present outlet, may have deceived her. Entitled originally "A New York Girl," it must have appealed to her player's sense of the theater's prime essential, which is things happening to the people of New York. It contained the alluring prospect of a regal and beauteous young woman of Manhattan, employed at first in imperial disdain of rich yokels from the West. It would be nice, she may have reflected, to treat these persons with patrician forbearance, kindly though aloof, and after they had, in their rough way, ruined her gentle father, to discomfit them with ease and urbanity. As a soothing sop to the tourists it would be effective for her to fall in love with a sturdy lad from the uplands, and at the finish unbend enough to marry him.

This, perhaps, is a false hypothesis of the play's temptation for Miss Ferguson, but it is a plausible one with reference to her managers. I suspect that they erred in telling her how to play the leading rôle. For, despite Miss Ferguson's indubitable charm, her unusual beauty, and her familiarity with the habits and demeanor of a pleasant woman of fashion, her impersonation assumes a fatal hint of self-satisfaction. Shirley Kaye seems to me to be so sure of herself and her powers that, while not precisely offensive, she limits the sympathy of the audience.

Miss Ferguson herself is not at all like that. If she were she would, in contemplating a simple rôle like Shirley Kaye, reason that there is no one so lovely and irresistible as Elsie Ferguson. Hence she would act as Elsie Ferguson would act were she engaged in the adventures of Shirley Kaye. But Miss Ferguson, with explicable though misplaced modesty, assumes that her own charms are not enough for the portrayal of such a superwoman, and so she decorates her own sufficient personality with rococo affectations of speech and manner. It should be explained that this investigation of Miss Ferguson's performance may be the captious one of a playgoer who many years ago committed himself to a prediction that she would, some day, become a fine actress. You are, of course, unaware of that prophetic utterance. So was I until I read it last evening in the files of THE TRIBUNE.

I think sometimes that, if in case the minor weak links of an unsatisfactory play were strengthened, it might develop into a prosperous enterprise. Since every playgoer is a critic you undoubtedly, as you sit in your chair at "Shirley Kaye," rewrite for yourself those things which seem to you to be not good. Especially is this futile pastime popular in the case of a nearly successful piece like that at the Blackstone. You marvel, I am sure, at the sheer incredibility of the preposterous Edgerton Kaye, New York railroad president and father of Shirley. You observe, with gloomy impatience, the loud and impossible proceedings of that scene wherein the western magnate's socially aspiring daughter persuades her father, by her tearful ululations, to retain the vacuous Kaye in the presidency of the Union Central. And you remold these items nearer to your mind's desire. You fix Kaye so that he talks less like a drama critic and more like a human being, readjusting that flabby void into a semblance of something within the reach of your imagination. Such railway presidents may exist in real life, but they are too strange for the fiction of the theater. I know that if you and I had had a chance to tinker a bit with "Shirley Kaye" we should not now be deploring it as a handicap to our happiness, if not that of Miss Ferguson. That lovely young woman has been for many years dropping her buckets into empty wells. May she not grow old in drawing nothing up!

A Ruskin of Dancers.

Miss Maude Allan is, or was in the days when I talked to her about it, a passionate advocate of spontaneity as against technique in dancing. The Greeks, said she—all such remarks begin "The Greeks"—the Greeks danced in the open air and their movements were an unconscious interpretation of their surroundings, reflecting the harmonious movements of nature, the laughing dance of fallen rose petals in an eddy of the wind. They danced to invisible gods, not to an audience. I put it all down. According to Miss Allan, the moment that even Greek dances were transferred to the confining limits and polluted atmosphere of the theater they became deformed and profaned. Ballet at its highest, stamped with its pathetic wickedness the decadence of nations.

I recall that Miss Allan asked me (it was seven years ago in London) if I knew of any reason why the ballet should not be consciously spontaneous like Keats' sweet peas which were "on tiptoe for a flight"; and I said that I did not. Thus reassured, Miss Allan remarked that in dancing the body flies to meet the thoughts of the soul, seeking to give them interpretation in the insistent eloquence of unconsidered gesture. She acknowledged with reluctance the necessity for technique, but said that it must not be excessive or predominant if the dance is not to be artificial. Miss Allan's exposition of her theory is announced for the Grand this week or next.

Mr. Arthur Byron, whose acting in "The Boomerang" is the best of a number of reasons for atendance at Powers', is catalogued with the many who have "come up" from melodrama. He had his start in the services of his father, Oliver Doud Byron, a prosperous celebrity in his day. The young man's acting in a piece called "The Plunger" was so much better than anything else in plays of the kind that the newspaper took him up. That kindness would not, perhaps, have carried him far had it not been for his kinship to the late Ada Rehan, an aunt, who aroused John Drew's interest. Mr. Byron found his first two-dollar audience in support of Mr. Drew in "The Butterflies."

Robert Edeson pauses in his tour in "His Brother's Keeper" until a theater becomes available in either Chicago or New York City. He says the play is too good for the other communities. Having written it, he may be presumed to know.

Dimples and Tears Profitable in New York

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Broadway has a new phrase. George Tyler, writing a column for the Sunday press, with "Sentiment in the Drama" as a theme and "Pollyanna" as an inspiration, resurrected it from some press agent's yarn of years ago—a wordy hireling, who described a popular success as one "that made dimples to catch the tears."

Broadway, having had quite a bit to do with sentimental comedies the last season or two, since "Peg o' My Heart" has been followed by "The Cinderella Man," "Pollyanna," and "Old Lady 31," has taken kindly to the "dimples and tears" idea, and has quoted it generously. Sounds like the dear, sophisticated boobies of Forty-second street, doesn't it?

"Old Lady 31," the newest heart wrencher, is the sort of domestic comedy David Belasco would have loved to produce, though probably he could not have lived through its rehearsals. His tears would have drowned him. It is a sentimental comedy of the deepest dye, and yet one of the truest. It has quite as many laughs as it has tears, despite the fact that both those bugbears of the stage, poverty and old age, are its twin themes. Audiences so love it that so far they have remained in the theater to applaud it long after the curtain has descended.

The simplest sort of play, too. In the prologue, with which it is opened, two dear old people, Capt. Abe Rose and Angie, his wife, are leaving the cottage they have sold at auction and starting for the institutions in which they expect to end their days. Angie is to go to an old ladies' home in the same institution, but Capt. Abe will not have the neighbors say that he failed at the very last as he had failed all his life. No, sir. Angie shall take the $100 the auction brought and buy her a berth with the old ladies and he will continue on down the road a piece to a place where it costs a little less than nothing to end one's days quietly, if not luxuriously.

It is an eloquent prologue. A man once told us that when Annie Russell used to play Esmeralda her very sunbonneted appearance was so suggestively pathetic that it started the audience sniffling, and particularly the men. It is so with Emma Dunn's entrance in "Old Lady 31." She backs her way out of the front door of a little cottage, her lower jaw atremble as she says a final good-by to the living room. She is plainly determined to keep her grief to herself, however, that she may not further depress the weakening Abe.

You may have seen strong men weep in the theater, but I warrant you never have seen any melt into tears so quickly or so unashamedly as they do at this scene. Not because there has been time to attack their sentimental emotions, but because the art of Miss Dunn is so perfect in the projection of such a scene that the very sight of her is eloquent with pathos.

After that the laughter begins. There are thirty old ladies at the home. Most of them have lived as neighbors to Angie and Abe all their lives. They are of all types—waspish and gentle, dignified and kittenish, cynical and content. Hearing of Angie's coming, they are divided both as to their interest and their curiosity. And when one of them proposes giving up her big room that they may take Abe and Angie, and thus save the parting of the old couple, she starts a perfect storm of protest. A man in the home! The very idea of such a suggestion! That is the first thought. Then: A man in the house! Why not? So it is finally agreed that Abe may come if he will. They will call him "Old Lady 31."

By Frederick Donaghey.

MISS RAISA and the Messrs. Crimi and Rimini are, doubtless, worth more consideration than midnight reporting of the first week's Opera made easily possible. Worrying about Italian opera-singers [the clarifying uses of the hyphen are, perhaps, apparent when I explain that I do not mean Italian-opera singers] is, as a rule, the nadir of space-filling: their numbers and their pretensions are in glaring inconsonance with their importance and their allure.

Experience has taught the entrepreneurs that the best singers of the Italian repertoire are American, English, Australian, French, Spanish, Greek, and sometimes w and y. The necessary reply in refutation is, of course, to ask what about Caruso, or Tetrazzini, or—or—well, Ruffo, with, as they occur, references to fugitive others who have, from-time-to-time, sparkled in the older items of the repertoire.

As a brand, Italian singers are not a marketable commodity at the best prices: the box-office definitely reacts to them only when they are Caruso, Tetrazzini, and, perhaps, Ruffo. This is written, it may be added, previously to the debut of Miss Galli-Curci, who, if she live up to what has been said by her precursorial advocates, will, doubtless, take that place in our affection for coloratura held for so long by Mr. Campanini's expansive kinswoman.

The opera-goer's attitude in the mater of singers has less to do with their nationality than, perhaps, any of their other attributes or markings. The explanation lies in the record that the performances most to the liking of Americans have been for a generation, at least, given by singers of other origin.

Part of the record has been written in Chicago since, six years ago, opera was put into the Auditorium for our especial entertainment. The Italian participants are not those whose names are rubricated in the catalogue of the venture. Multitudes sought seats when Caruso was borrowed for a night. A line of persons, money in hand, formed in the outer lobby when Tetrazzini's name was put up. The boys who sell the seats refer lovingly to the flourishing times when Ruffo was on the schedule for Rigoletto or Tonio. The check-up is quickly made.

Meanwhile, the most successful of the operas have been the Italian works, success being measured by the frequency of profitable repetition. "Tosca," "Butterfly," "La Boheme"—these draw as often, perhaps, as the cast is even adequate. The French works, most of them new in Chicago in the period covered by the Dippel-Campanini activities, have had their vogue through their special singers. "Louise," "Thais," "Pélleas," "The Juggler," without Mary Garden are, while not unthinkable, not lucrative. "Carmen" exacts a star. Even "Faust" has ceased to mean much at five dollars the ticket unless the singers be notables.

A schedule such as Mr. Campanini achieved last season and contemplates this—at least seventy performances in ten weeks—is out of the question unless the Italian repertoire be heavily drawn upon. It is not within reason that he should be able to compete on anything even remotely resembling equal terms with the Metropolitan management for the services of the admitted somebodies of Italian opera. The season in New York City, itself, is from twenty to twenty-four weeks, with added employment for the tour and extra performances in Philadelphia and Brooklyn, communities contributory to Manhattan. The Chicago venture offers ten resident weeks, and neither tour nor extras. This is putting the mercantile problem into the terms of merchandise. So put, it must be clear to anybody that Mr. Campanini's problem is not casual.

For these reasons, the three new singers of Monday's "Aïda" are, as performers who then seemed to be above the average, important in the scheme of the Opera for this season. This is so whether it is to be the last season or Mr. McCormick and his associates continue their beneficent interest in Mr. Campanini's aspirations.

The newcomers were better in Wednesday night's "Andréa Chénier" than in their opening. Where the three were chiefly deficient was in the matter of stage-deportment. None of them seemed lacking in sense of the theater: none of them seemed possessed of a sense of direction. Mr. Rimini, perhaps, has had some training as an actor, and seems to have an instinct for drama. But the three, on both nights, were eloquent exemplars of a way in opera that is not in keeping with the taste of the day.

Sapient persons who know all about the voice, how to save it, how to wreck it, how to use and abuse it, tell me that Mr. Crimi's will not last beyond twenty-five or thirty years unless he change his method; that Miss Raisa will arrive at her sixtieth year to find herself no longer in possession of her clarion-like top-notes; that Mr. Rimini's vibrato is not an "effect," consciously consummated, but the manifestation of a disordered diaphragm. With none of such matters, I fear, is the opera-goer with five dollars to spend at all concerned. What is important with respect to these three singers is that, first, they have both youth and an equipment, and, next, that they appear to be plastic, malleable, absorbent.

Miss Raisa has gone so far in her three years' absence that she can easily lengthen the trip toward something more than mere competence in the repertoire. She seems to be the best of the young dramatic sopranos for the Italian works.

A competent stage-director could quickly show definite results with these three singers. The same functionary might, incidentally, be of a great value to Mr. Campanini's season. It is not entirely fair, perhaps, to regard the performances of the crowded first week as proof that a first-class director is not in charge back-stage. Nine operas in seven days is a job running at least sixteen ounces to the pound. The question of stage-management is one which has, in my belief, a great deal to do with what was written in the beginning of this article about the market-value of Italian singers: they have, as a class, paid small attention to progress in the matter.

Displayed Herewith

Miss Mooney, the uncelebrity in the picture, is among Mr. Campanini's debutantes in the Auditorium, where, as yet, her assignments have not been of a kind to arouse excessive envy in the bosoms of her seasoned associates.

A casual page and an unconsidered countess, bracketed, involved the employment of her name in yesterday's cast of "Rigoletto." Miss Mooney confesses to what Woodrow Wilson would, doubtless, call a passion for self-denial: she is the Lucy Page Gaston of the Opera, hating the cigarette as Dean Talbot hates the snare-drum of the jaz band; loathing the cocktail as James Hamilton Lewis loathes Gillette; resenting the café life as Mr. Judge Landis resents the first page. She comes from Memphis, Tenn., where her father is Col. C. P. J. Mooney, editor of the Commercial-Appeal.

One reason for printing the picture of Mme. Cavalieri is that it is new. She is in her third season as an onlooking member of the Campanini company. She may sing Tosca and Nedda, she says; and she may not sing Tosca and Nedda, she says.

One Opera Less

Among the minor catastrophes that come to light as affecting the Opera is the loss of the score, prompt book, etc., of "Venise," the opera by Gounsburg in which Mme. Kousnezoff has been scheduled to make her reappearance next month. These items were in the care of Mr. Maguenat, the baritone, and were burned with his personal impedimenta in the Chicago, in which he and Mme. Berat undertook to return to the United States. It has been Mme. Kousnezoff's plan not only to sing and act in "Venise," but to dance, as well, dancing being a pastime for which she possesses so much affection that she is given to undertaking it in public whenever opportunity offers or can be made.

The Orchestra.

MR. STOCK'S program for Friday afternoon and Saturday night—the seventh of the season—has been prepared as a memorial to Bryan Lathrop, for seventeen years the president of the Orchestral Association. There will be no guest-soloist.

The Orchestra will give the program in this order: Prelude, choral, and fugue by Bach-Abert; the dance of the happy spirits from Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice"; two movements, the allegro and the funeral-march, from Beethoven's second symphony, the "Eroica"; the entrance of the gods into Walhalla from "The Rhinegold"; the vorspiel to "Lohengrin"; Wagner's Träume: "A study to 'Tristan and Isolde,'" as orchestrated by Theodore Thomas; and Strauss' tone-poem of "Death and Transfiguration."

Strauss' "Alpine" symphony will be the feature of the eighth Orchestra program, Dec. 1 and 2. The soloist will be Alexander Raab, with two numbers—Weber's Concerstück and Liszt's Hungarian rhapsody.

The third of the Orchestra's Pops will be on Thanksgiving-night.

Dimples and Tears Profitable in N. Y.

course, becomes the spoiled darling of the house. They coddle him and pet him; knit their poor old fingers stiff that he may be supplied with whole socks, mufflers, and wristlets; dig up a funny old smoking jacket for him, with red tassels on it; insist on his taking the easiest chair before the fire, and let him smoke like a chimney all over the house, if he wants to. Some of them, in fact—and here the feminine psychology of the little play is particularly true—some of them are not above flirting with him, or of accusing others of doing it.

It happens that Blossy, whom some one has aptly described as "Billie Burke at 60," decides to make Abe her confidant. She is having a series of belated proposals of marriage from another sea captain, and she wants to consult a man about it. But the other dears think Blossy is conducting an affair of her own with Abe, and finally accuse her of it. Then there is scandal and unhappiness in the home, and they vote to put Old Lady 31 out. Which makes Abe so tarnation mad that he practically runs away and gets caught in a rainstorm, is threatened with pneumonia, and frightens Angie almost to death.

The end, of course, is happy, as it should be in simple plays. Some old mining stock Abe bought years before turns up and is worth $8,000. "It's God's work," agrees Angie, gratefully. "Wal, I don't know," replies Abe. "I think I used pretty good judgment myself in buying that stock." They do not go back to the cottage, however. Blossy, having married her old beau, and explained her secret dealin's with Abe, the captain is again in favor at the home, and he and Angie decide to stay on there, "givin' insted o' jest receivin'."

Miss Dunn, promptly selected for the rôle of Angie, rehearsed with nearly 100 different players before the company to play "Old Lady 31" was finally agreed upon. As a result it presents a really remarkable selection of types—types that so impress themselves upon the mind that half the pleasure of seeing the play comes days afterwards in the lingering remembrance of them. Reginald Barlow plays Abe wonderfully, and Angie is decidedly the best thing Miss Dunn has done. Rachel Crothers fashioned the play from a story by Louise Forsslund.

Playwrights grow subtle these days. Their idea now, or so it appears, is to make as little reference as possible to the title of a play in its text. There is, as an instance, not the slightest reference to turning to the right in "Turn to the Right." The title itself, in fact, is not even awarded the importance of a song cue and is never mentioned.

So much is practically true, too, of "Good Gracious, Annabelle," in many respects the most happily irresponsible farce of the season. The heroine's name is Annabelle, and one of her favorite expressions is "Good gracious!" But it is in no sense a forced expression and no attention is called to it by the other characters, which ordinarily is the playwrighting custom. "Annabelle" is, as suggested, frankly insane. It was written by Clare Kummer, the song writer, and was intended originally to serve Marie Cahill's emergence from a rather protracted retirement. As it stands the songs have been taken from it and Arthur Hopkins has refashioned it as a straight farce for the use of a fine cast headed by that rapidly advancing comedienne, Lola Fisher.

Anabelle is an irresponsible young woman who has fled precipitately from a western cave man with whiskers and landed in New York. The cave man had forced her to marry him after he had carried her from her father's home during a mining camp riot. Being a very rich and rather a sensitive person, he also continued to support her after she had acquired the Fifth avenue hotel habit and invariably spent her quarterly allowance the first day she got it.

The play discovers Annabelle on such a day, both broke and distrait, wandering the lobbies of an inexpensive hostelry in search of some one from whom she may borrow. It is a trying morning for her. She not only fails to get the money but learns that her best friend is about to name her in a divorce suit. In this state of mind she overhears an imposing butler person explaining his immediate need of a complete new set of house servants for his rich master. She applies for the job of cook and presses several of her impecunious friends into the other positions.

The rest of the play is concerned with the experiences of the pretended servants and their meeting with their new employer, an idle rich youth in a perpetual state of intoxication. To increase the strain upon the probabilities it happens that the intoxicated one is a business rival of Annabelle's cave man, who appears on the scene minus his whiskers. Thus Annabelle falls in love with her own husband.

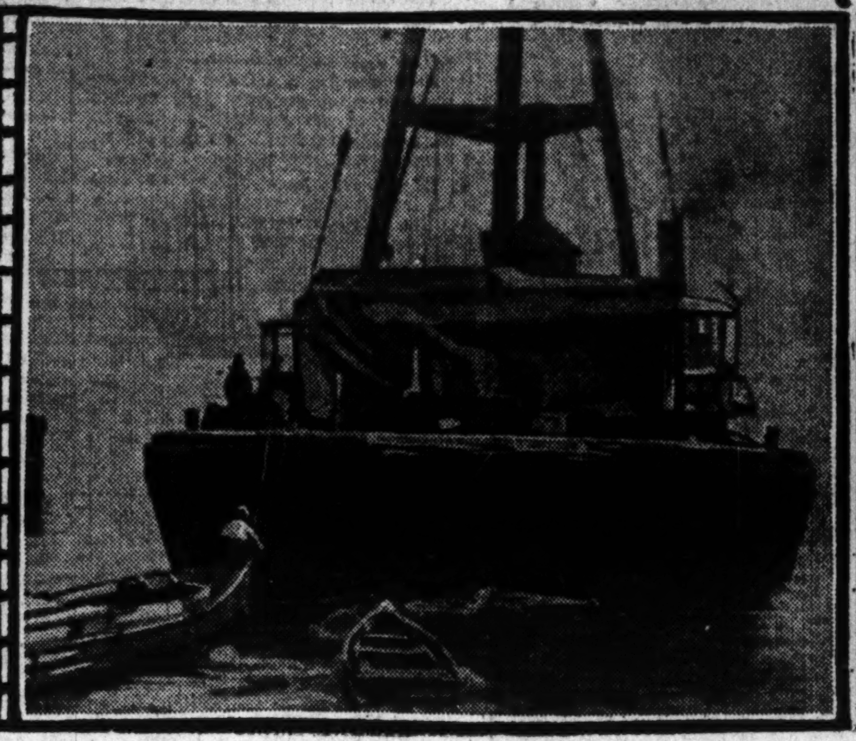
LEADS LABORERS OF JAPAN.

This is a picture of Bunji Zuzuki, labor leader and president of the Laborers' society of Japan, who arrived in this country to attend the convention of the American Federation of Labor, in Baltimore as a fraternal delegate.

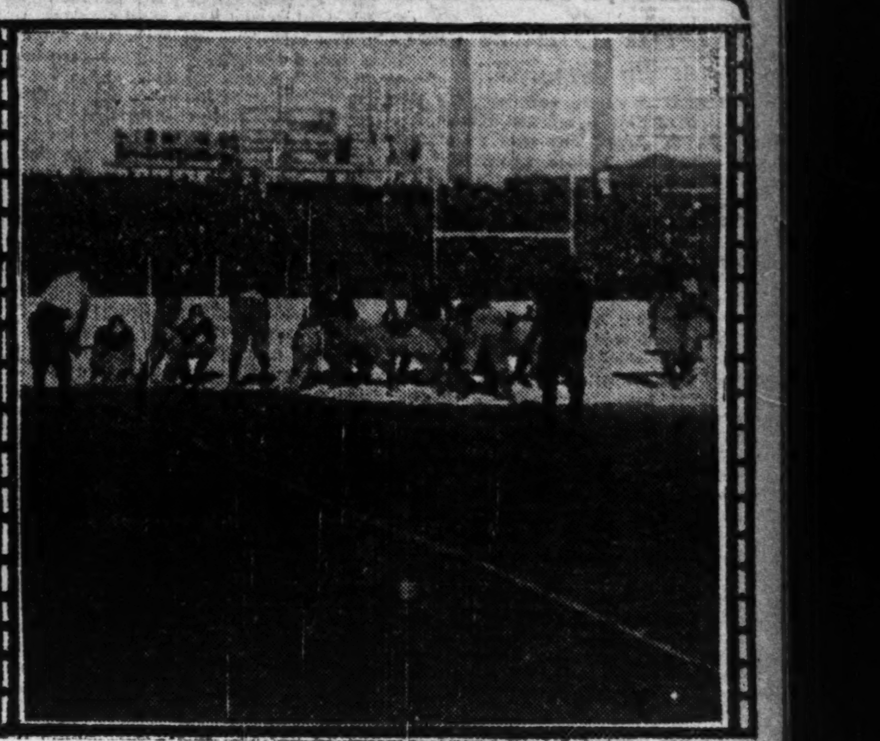


THE DEATH CAR.

In the car here pictured numbers of people were sitting quietly when, with a swerve, a creak, and a downward plunge, it went through an open draw into the waters of the Fort Point channel, Boston. Fifty-four persons lost their lives.

WHEN OPERA BALLET REHEARSES.

Ever see the dancers that delight your eyes during the grand opera season rehearse? If not, now's your chance, for this film takes you behind the scenes while Ballet Master Ambrosing drills his people that they may find favor in Chicago's eyes.



HARVARD VS. PRINCETON.

It was a great game! That closely contested gridiron battle, you know when Harvard defeated Princeton by a score of 3—0.

AND FASHIONS!

With Miss Vivian Reed of Selig posing.

Right off the Reel

Emily Stevens Seeing Herself.

By Mae Tinee.

Did you ever sit in the room with an actress while she was watching herself act? You probably never did. Therefore you'll be interested, I think, to know that as I reviewed "The Wager," in which Emily Stevens is starred, that young woman sat immediately behind me. This was in a projection room.

I was a little late and she and another woman and a couple of men who were with her were already seated and the room had been darkened. I slipped into a seat and almost immediately the screen flashed into prominence. We were introduced to "Diamond Daisy" Doyle—in real life Emily Stevens. There came a delighted laugh from behind us.

"O, my dears, it was such fun," effervesced Miss Stevens. "It was simply corking, you know! Simply corking!" An interested murmur was the response of her companions. Slippery Jim, the sweetheart, taken by Lyster Chambers, drew forth no comment. This I could readily understand. There are undoubtedly crooks for whom a woman would give up all—not this crook! No appeal whatsoever. Rather a pity. All the other parts were so remarkably well taken.

The introduction slipped on, accompanied by observations from Miss Stevens. She laughed and talked about herself and the others in the picture quite frankly, but when Frank Currier, who plays the bombastic and susceptible old jeweler, was shown, she was wildly enthusiastic.

"Isn't he darling! O, isn't he a love! O, isn't he a wonder! Did you ever see anything so clever in your life as that man. I assure you he is wonderful."

She's right—he is!

"The Wager" is one of the most cleverly gotten up productions I have seen for quite some time. "Diamond Daisy," a notorious jewelry thief, and her sweetheart, "Slippery Jim," just out of prison, have made up their minds to live "straight." The "slippery" one took violently ill and the doctor who was called declares that he has acquired consumption in jail and that his only hope lies in going west and living in the great outdoors.

Problem: Where will the money come from?

In another part of the city some merry old cronies enjoying a festive drink at their club make a wager. One of them is a jeweler and one of them is a commissioner of police. They are the two most concerned. The jeweler has declared that nobody can steal anything from him and the commissioner of police and others have said that nothing would be easier. And so they make a bet. The wager is for a dinner and a large sum of money—$5,000, I believe; I forget the exact figures.

Naturally the commissioner of police knows of "Diamond Daisy." He decides to procure her services. He calls her up.

"Diamond Daisy," being no fool, is immediately suspicious of a frameup and refuses absolutely to undertake the task until she is given a paper signed by the commissioner of police granting her immunity. She's to receive $2,000 if she succeeds in successfully robbing the jeweler. The understanding is, of course, that the jewels are to be returned.

The trick is turned and the way it is turned and the complications which arise one after the other are so funny and clever that I'll not spoil your enjoyment of the picture by telling you just how it is done. I will tell you, however, that Emily Stevens, hard, tender, vixenish, and hoydenish by turns, is just as clever as she can be and does not disappoint you for one moment.

After the picture, while she was waiting for a machine which was to take her to the veterinary hospital, where her pet pup had been undergoing treatment—"A love, my dear!"—we chatted rather desultorily. Miss Stevens is long on acting but short on conversation, when it comes to an interview.

What does she look like? Well, that's a question! I imagine she has her moments of illumination when she is beautiful. At any time she would be pleasant to rest one's eyes on. I rather think, however, that the word "alert" is the one that best describes her.

Gossip of Screen Players.

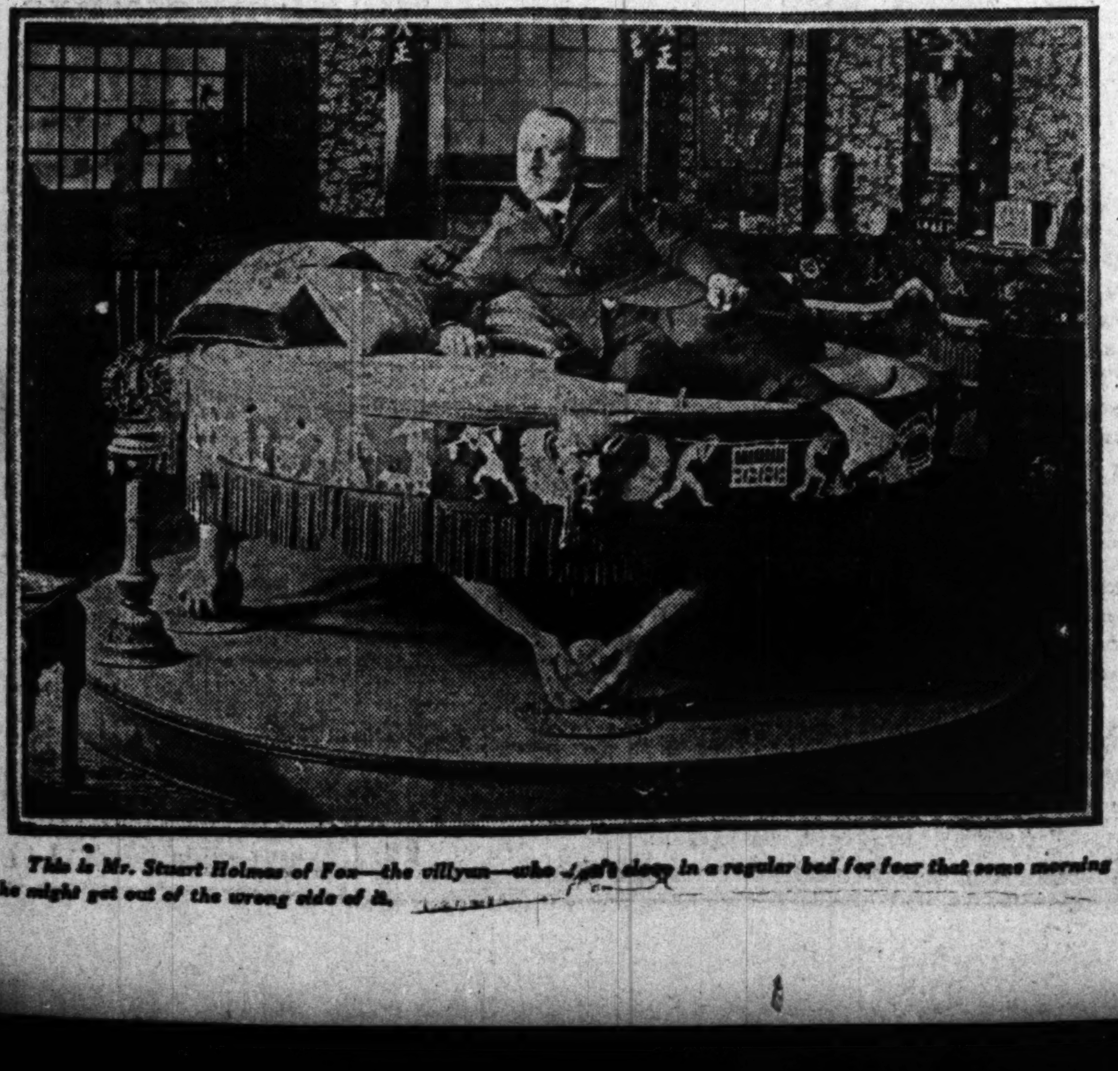
Edna Purviance gave a Holloween party for the members of the Charlie Chaplin company.

Here's June Caprice's favorite cake recipe: "Take two pints of finely granulated sugar and one pint of butter. Stir these to a light cream and add one pint bowl of sweet milk, if the milk drivers aren't out on strike. Then take a pint of sifted flour and a half pint of sifted cornstarch and four teaspoons of baking powder. Put these into a flour sieve and sift twice. Beat the whites of twenty-four eggs to a stiff froth and stir them lightly into the cake mixture. Bake in one loaf, and be careful that it does not brown too much. The cake will be sufficient for a party of thirty." Try this out, girls, and let me know how it tastes.

Valeska Surat, who is accused of being superstitious, recently disproved the accusation, for on the thirteenth day of the filming of the picture in which she is soon to appear she gave a luck party. Included in the entertainment arrangements were ladders, black cats, overturned salt cellars, open umbrellas, and knives crossing the forks—and there were thirteen at table!

Miss Nell Craig of Essanay recently addressed a meeting of the Lake Bluff Woman's club. Among the questions these society women wanted to know were: "How old are you?" "Do you talk as you act in the movies?" and "Do you think there should be censorship of pictures?"

Mabel Taliaferro, while doing some exterior scenes for "The Sunbeam," was dressed in rags sitting in an automobile on Eleventh avenue, New York. A crowd of street urchins gathered about her. Said one: "Gee, she's a movie actor." Said another: "She is not! Look at her clothes." A small and anxious voice piped up from the midst of them: "Betcha she's been pinched by the Gerry society! Let's beat it!" And they all beat it.



This is Mr. Stuart Holmes of Fox—the villyun—who can't sleep in a regular bed for fear that some morning he might get out of the wrong side of it.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

MRS. F. L. B.: It certainly seemed like old times to receive your letter. I'm so glad you remembered to write me again. You miss the "sofa"! I'm awfully sorry. It was a nice, comfortable looking sofa, wasn't it? Do write me again. Your manuscript was forwarded to the Morosco-Pallas company.

S. T.: If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I'll take great pleasure in sending you the printed material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. I think this may be helpful to you.

B. R.: Old enough to have my eyes open, thank you!

JOE K.: I don't know, Joe. I think, however, that she is only about 25. She is married to Howard Hickman. I don't wonder you admire Miss Barriscale; I do myself.

MUDDLES: Well, Muddles, you just write to me any li'l ol' Sunday night you haven't anything else to do. Anybody who can "force real tears and look natural" should certainly go into motion pictures! The Essanay company is located at 1333 Argyle street, Chicago. I wish you luck. Yes, my dear.

L. E.: In the picture you mentioned Herbert Rawlinson took the part of Bert T. Daley and Anna Little played opposite him.

PAVLOWA and THEDA ADMIRER: Some combinash! Anna Pavlowa is now in opera. Miss Theda Bara has dark brown eyes. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall. Her latest production was "Romeo and Juliet." No, don't know any reason at all for it.

ANXIOUS DOT: (Anxious and a little dotty?) Jack Warren Kerrigan is not married. Douglas Fairbanks is. Address Mr. Fairbanks care of the Triangle company, Los Angles, Cal. If you send me a stamped, addressed envelope I'll be delighted to mail you the material I have on how to become a photoplayer. No, it's not a bit of trouble.

L. K.: If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I'll be delighted to send you the article I have on the doubling process.

R. N. G.: Harold Lockwood and May Allison are with Metro, 1445 Broadway, New York; Theda Bara, Fox, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York; and Pearl White, Pathé, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J.

J. J. K.: I have no possible way of knowing where the members of the stock company you mentioned are located. Ise de motion pictuh editah, suh!

H. J. S.: Kathlyn Williams is with the Morosco company, Los Angeles, Cal. She is married. Her husband's name is Mr. Eyton. He used to be Bessie Eyton's husband. I don't know her age.

EDNA B. S.: Mighty glad I can get some chuckles from you. Address David Belasco, care of the Lambs' club, New York.

Opera Helps Make a Strenuous Week for the Smart Set.

By Mme. X.

IS this, as gossip surmises, the last year of Chicago's grand opera? Are we to forfeit our title as a first class, up to date metropolis? Is this to become a one horse town, satisfied with a short out of season engagement from New York's Metropolitan Opera company? Is this a community that really only cares for such musical efforts as "Chin Chin," "Alone At Last," etc.?

The opening week of this season's opera would seem to indicate all these things. On Monday the Auditorium was filled with a large, brilliant, enthusiastic audience, but after that empty side boxes distracted the attention and hurt the feelings of the opera lover, while the main body of the house was not as thickly settled as one could wish. The galleries, the home of the genuine music lover, were better patronized.

Chicago grand opera is undergoing its supreme test. If the season is a popular and brilliant one the opera will become an institution here like the Art Institute and the symphony concerts. If not, few of the present backers will renew their pledges to make up the deficit, as they have been doing for the last five years in a most generous and public spirited manner, and Chicago will lose a great acquisition. The loss will be one felt by the city's commercial world as well as by its social circles.

One final suggestion we have to make and that is that, in view of the thoroughly work-a-day flavor of this community, the operas should not be allowed to drag on too late. The intermissions could be shortened to the great relief of the average business man, whose eager wife demands his attendance. In Italy, Spain, and even in France, the operagoer thinks he has not had his money's worth of joy if he leaves the theater or opera before 12:30 or 1 a. m. Not so here, where alarm clocks are set for 7 in the morning for many an opera fan.

Week of Social Functions.

If society sleeps late this leisurely Sunday morning it has earned its nap by a week full of social functions. Monday night was opera night, when Michigan avenue was packed with motors in serried ranks. Tuesday night "le beau monde" turned out again en masse for the benefit performance of "The Boomerang," arranged by Mrs. Russell Tyson and the other sponsors for the Eli Bates house. Those who did not go there went to the Civic Music league's fall festival at Orchestra hall and joined in the lusty singing of national airs.

Wednesday evening offered the discriminating a choice between the old-new opera, "Andrea Chenier," and the initial performance at the Playhouse by the Little Theater company of Bernard Shaw's cheerful piece, "Mrs. Warren's Profession" (which, between you and me, and in spite of P. Hammond and Dick Little, was well done).

On Thursday evening Mesdames Joseph and John H. Winterbotham entertained at the residence of the latter a small group of the younger married set, who compose that clever little club modestly yclept "The Scribblers," at a costume banquet, a strictly hen party, which—well, it was a great success.

On Friday the ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Francis Carry, Mr. and Mrs. Edward George Pauling, and Miss Pauling, in honor of the two debutantes, Miss Ermina Carry and Miss Janet Pauling, at the Blackstone brought out a host of people old and young—particularly the latter, for the floor of the Blackstone crystal ballroom glitters black, shiny, and smooth for the feet of the dancers these days, and, prophecies to the contrary notwithstanding, dancing has not lost its vogue nor the drum and saxophone their appeal.

Ball for Ogontz Nursery.

Tomorrow night the Chicago Ogontz association is giving another ball at the Blackstone to help fill the association's treasury in order to carry on the Ogontz Day nursery. Mrs. John J. Mitchell heads the list of patronesses, while Mrs. M. M. Sheriff receives the checks for the tickets ($5 each, admitting a "couple"). Among others interested in the affair are Mmes. George Isham, Bertram Walker, Harry Hamlin, Walter Kirk, August Magnus, and William S. Jenks.

It may be of interest to anti-suffragists to learn that one of their most prominent eastern leaders is more or less responsible for the presence in the congressional ranks of the first woman member of that august body, Miss Jeanette Rankin of Montana.

The said New York leader made a little morning talk on her pet theme some five years ago in Mrs. James Keeley's pleasant drawing room in Ritchie place to a group of representative Chicago society women who, for the most part, had, up to that time, given little attention to the subject. The discourse provided them with food for thought, though not along the lines the fair orator indicated.

The result was a meeting a few months later, called by Mrs. Tiffany Blake, in her drawing room in Walton place, when Mrs. Stanley McCormick spoke, not against, but for, suffrage. Out of this meeting in still another drawing room was evolved the present Chicago Equal Suffrage association, with Mrs. Blake as president.

The first public entertainment undertaken by this organization to raise money was a concert by Mme. Schumann-Heink at Orchestra hall, when over $2,000 was cleared. The Chicago Equal Suffrage association, though suffrage was not yet attained in this state, devoted $1,200 of this sum to the salary of an organizer in Montana for one year. This organizer was Miss Jeanette Rankin. So well did she do her work that Montana attained woman suffrage the following year and Miss Rankin became the best known woman in the state and the best liked, too. Her election to congress marks a real epoch in woman's efforts toward enfranchisement and active participation in government.

The workers for the allied bazaar are developing each week more steam and now, with many a rumble and grumble, the huge enterprise is really getting under way.

Mrs. Arrick Kirk and her committee are to run a general store, whose proceeds are to be devoted to the "permanent blind war relief fund"—one of the most appealing of the many by-products of the great conflict. Everything is to be donated to this general store and what a strange and wonderful conglomeration is assembling! Among the articles is a pearl necklace, a kitchen stove, two Persian kittens, a ton of coal, a gorgeous evening coat, a cake of soap, a sewing machine, and a bulldog (let us hope he won't eat up the kittens). Furthermore, everything is to be new—it isn't a white elephant booth.

Assisting Mrs. Kirk in collecting and selling these many and diverse articles are Mmes. Watson Armour, Orville Babcock, Archibald Freer, Lockwood Honoré, Charles G. King, Chauncey McCormick, Edward S. Moore, William H. Scriven, Albert Sprague II., and Bertram Winston.

A real nest of debutantes will be Mrs. Harry Channon's section, where she will have on sale French posters, post cards, engravings, and books. She is the president of the Alliance Française, and the proceeds of the booth will be devoted to French needs.

The annual meeting of that stately and effective association, the Antiquarians, last Tuesday in its beautiful rooms in the Art institute saw few changes made in the board. Mrs. Martin Ryerson was reëlected president, with Mrs. Edward Ayer as vice president. Mrs. John J. Mitchell was made treasurer instead of Mrs. Ralph Clarkson, while Mrs. George M. Eckels became secretary. Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson replaced Mrs. William J. Calhoun on the executive board, which otherwise remains as last year, and consists of Mmes. S. E. Barrett, J. J. Glessner, William O. Goodman, Charles M. Hutchinson, William R. Linn, Potter Palmer Jr., and George M. Pullman.

The society expects in January to give a reception when Dr. Meyer-Riefstahl will give a talk on "Chronological Tapestry," on which topic he is the great authority of the day.

Poets to Talk on Poetry.

Art is not the only concern of the elect. Those who care for poetry—and their number is growing—are looking forward to the talks on poetry by poets which begin this afternoon in the Little theater in the Fine Arts building with a discourse and recitations by Miss Harriet Monroe. Other poets—there will be a round dozen of them—will be Vachell Lindsay, Padriac Colum, Amy Lowell, Mary Aldis, Florence Kiper Frank, Carl Sandburg, Arthur Davision Ficke, Eunice Tietjens, and Wilfrid Wilson Gibson—as fine a galaxy of singers as you can find today.

Not only is Chicago the greatest railroad center in the world, the center of the pork packing industry, the chief wheat market, but, thanks largely to Miss Harriet Monroe, it is the nation's chief rendezvous for poets. Vachell Lindsay, Edgar Lee Masters, Carl Sandburg, Arthur Davison Ficke, Mary Aldis, and Harriet Monroe herself are all essentially western by birth and tradition, and Chicago is their shrine. Let us not forget that the names of those that live longest in history, the personalities that burn brightest, are not the merchants, money makers, and commercial promoters of an age, but the poets. Long live Chicago poets!

Friends of the Harold Cranes, quondam Chicagoans, who now live in San Francisco, are much interested in the story, "Snipe," published in the latest Atlantic Monthly and written by their son, Clarkson Crane. He is a great-grandson of Bishop Clarkson, a prominent figure here in the fifties and sixties. Young Crane's mother belongs to the well known High family, her mother, Mrs. Thorne Clarkson, having been a sister of Mrs. John Noyes and the late Mrs. John Cutler, which makes him a cousin of Mrs. Hubert Galt, Ernest Noyes, Mrs. John Root, and Thornton and Thomas Taylor Jr.

WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lincoln Beck of 3074 North Delaware street, Indianapolis, announce the marriage of their daughter, Edna Sanger, to George Harold Dunn of Oak Park. The wedding took place at noon on Saturday, Nov. 11, in Indianapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will be at home after Dec. 1 at 949 Lake street, Oak Park.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Overman announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Abbie Overman, to Frank L. Page. Mr. and Mrs. Page will be at home after Jan. 1 at 1708 East Sixty-ninth street.

Dr. A. S. C. Clarke and Mrs. Clarke of Evanston have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, and Emerson M. Callis of Toledo, O. The service will be solemnized on Friday and the officiating clergyman will be Dr. Clarke, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Jenkins. Miss Elizabeth Clarke will serve her sister as bridesmaid and Milton Callis of Detroit will act as best man for his brother.

Parent-Teacher Meeting to Discuss Crowded Schools.

By Hazel Whitaker.

THE council of the Parent-Teacher associations of Chicago and vicinity, of which Mrs. George Goodell is chairman, will meet on Tuesday at 2 p. m. in room 604 of the Tribune building. Representatives from all clubs will be present and will give short reports of their parent-teacher work. The general subject will be "The Overcrowded Conditions of the High Schools" by Charles Stillman. The discussion will be led by Miss Elizabeth Campbell, dean of girls at the Fenger High school. The general public and any one interested are invited to all of these meetings.

This council was established for the purpose of bringing together at least three times a year the officers and delegates of the parents' associations and the mothers' clubs in and around Chicago for opportunity for mutual suggestion and stimulation.

The next state meeting will be held in the spring at Bloomington and the next national at Washington, D. C.

A good cause will grow and such has proved the case with the Congress of Mothers and the parent-teacher clubs, of which there are now 264 in the state. Just three years after the National Congress of Mothers was organized in Washington, D. C., in 1897, the Illinois branch came into existence at the call of Mrs. Roger B. McMullen, who had been a vice president of the national organization and who became the first president here. By 1905 the parent-teacher work had gained such proportions that it was incorporated with the Congress of Mothers, so that the combined name became the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher association.

The Illinois association now has fifteen standing committees besides those on finance, the press, and founders' day. They are: Child hygiene, eugenics, child labor, country life, education, home economics, juvenile protection, kindergarten, legislation, social centers, better films, story telling, Americanization, school beautiful, and mothers' pensions. They have many church and thirty-one women's clubs affiliations. Last month seventy-nine speakers were furnished and many papers loaned.

Miss Grace Abbott, who is chairman of the Americanization committee, is aiming to have the foreign mothers brought more closely in touch with the school, and with that idea in view classes are being organized to teach them English, and representative women from all the foreign neighborhoods are being chosen to get their neighbors interested in this idea.

The committee on home economics under Miss Alice De Lagneau is trying to introduce school lunches in the city schools where these are not provided and also in the rural districts; in all schools the matter of school diet is being carefully discussed.

The child labor committee, whose chairman, Mrs. Walter E. Beebe, attends all court hearings in Cook county in which the enforcement of child labor is involved, keeps in close touch with the practical operation of the child labor situation in Chicago.

The better film committee speaks for itself and the practical work which this committee under Mrs. Fred Michael is doing can best be proven by the fact that a comprehensive article appeared in a recent motion picture magazine in which the club idea of a juvenile film exchange and therefore special films for children was highly commended.

The finance committee is making a special effort to increase the income in order to make possible more extension work, which means more associations and wider coöperation. Mrs. L. D. Doty is chairman of this section.

The officers for 1916-1917 are: Mrs. Benjamin F. Langworthy of Lake Forest, president; Mrs. M. B. Blouke, recording secretary; Mrs. Jacob Mueller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. P. Mears, treasurer; Mrs. C. W. Blodgett, auditor; Mrs. George W. Eggers, historian.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young is an honorary life member. Mrs. William Hefferan is city organizer and Mrs. William Young is state organizer. Mrs. Julius Rosenwald and Mrs. Charles S. Deneen are among the directors.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Former Montana Girl Now at the Kaiser's Court.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—So often I find myself thinking of life as a moving picture. I have traveled round quite a bit, and I am always running across an entire set of characters in a drama far from another spot of the earth's surface where I have seen them all before.

Last week Mrs. "Jimmie" Gerard and her mother, Mrs. Marcus Daly, arrived at the Plaza from Montana, and immediately the simple occurrence sent my mind traveling over miles and miles of past. I don't believe that many middle westerners think of Mrs. Gerard as the daughter of that Montana copper king. I shouldn't myself if I hadn't seen her in her various settings.

Years ago, when I was scarcely more than a little girl, I made my first trip to Montana, and my objective point was the Bitter Root valley, garden spot of the earth, I think it still. I stopped in a beautiful little hotel all covered on its walls with life sized portraits of race horses. There was one beauty of a steed, who greeted you with forefoot lifted. It's the conventional way, you know, of presenting a horse, just as artists show a statesman with his hand in the opening between buttons of his coat. This horse stood at the turn in the wide, light colored stairway. Four others adorned the halls of the lobby.

"Why do they go in so for horses?" I demanded.

"O, don't you know?" answered the clerk. "This is Marcus Daly's country. He built this hotel to entertain his guests in when he asked them down for the races. That over there is the beginning of his estate."

Later I drove over it—down the avenue of maples and over its miles of good roads. I saw the fancy stables, as luxurious for horses as the fine hotels of New York are for human beings. The whole place looked deserted and run down at the heel, however. Mr. Daly had died, his widow was broken hearted, and she and her daughters were in California.

At the local photographer's, however, I saw pictures of those daughters. They were standing in a row eating ice cream and giggling, just like the town girls all over the United States, whose fathers were not worth fabulous millions. Others were taken with the girls in bending positions, with fans furled, like Geisha girls, and some of them had young men in the picture. None of the young men was Mr. Gerard, however; of that I am certain.

While I was there Mrs. Daly came home, and I saw her driving about town. Her face looked worn and lined. It bore traces of grief in its expression.

Since the war has been going on I have been to Germany, and of course the first thing I did was to betake myself to the American ambassador. The Germans at the frontier had said they might as well let me get in, I'd never get out. I went to see Mr. Gerard to arrange my exit. He was jolly and friendly and kind.

Helping the Wounded.

I sat with him that first morning for quite some time, and while I was there, who should rush in but Mrs. Gerard. She began excitely: "Jimmy, will you give me a hundred marks. That boy is worse." She was working in one of the many relief organizations—indeed, I am quite sure that it was the society of American women who are helping the wounded in Germany.

I think Mr. Gerard told me she was president of it. But that is not the point. My first thought was that she didn't look much like that little Montana girl with the white shirt waist on and the big shoes, who was bowing like a Geisha girl. She was so prettily dressed, with billowy, soft stuff foaming round her chest and throat and a tailored skirt sloping over her dainty hips.

Mr. Gerard introduced us, and I had ample opportunity to observe her personality. That early Montana bringing up was still observable. There was a frank cordiality about her that does not come from the east. Even her boarding school experience in New York had not obliterated this. It was modified, however, with a sweet dignity and toned down from those early memories of mine by a little clump of gray hair above the temples.

The little Montana hoyden was representing us at the court of the kaiser, and I fancy she does it much better, much more graciously and characteristically than if she had come from any place this side of the middle west.

Visits Her Old Home.

I've been thinking of those two encounters with her ever since reading that she had gone to her Montana home to visit while Mr. Gerard waited for her at the St. Regis. The other day I saw her and her mother. Mr. Gerard moved over to the Plaza when they came, because Mrs. Daly has memories of it that make her wish to stop there. The lines of acute and new sorrow were gone from the older woman's face. She looked really quite buoyant and happy. And the younger one had really a look of cosmopolitan comprehension in her face. She has been everywhere and she has a point of view on almost everything.

It is just a little piece of corroborative evidence, this story without much point that I have been telling of the popular old theme that time can repair, can avenge, can make over anything. The Gerards are planning to go back on Dec. 5, so they said, to Germany. It will be interesting to me through these years to come to think of the mistress of the big embassy as having been out in her rather run down home, near the little rural hotel, with the costly paintings of race horses on the walls.

Children at Horse Show.

Here I am reminiscing and trying to reproduce an impression that is in my own mind when I ought to be describing opera openings and horse shows. In a pungent odor of fresh tanbark society assembled to greet the horses on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, whose husband has in a way taken the place of the late Alfred Vanderbilt in the organization of the horse show, was there looking happy and efficient as a social leader. She wore brown velvet and furs, although she was ahead of the cold wave in so doing.

Because Alfred Vanderbilt loved them Mrs. Vanderbilt has since his death made a great point of children's day. It was on the opening afternoon this year and hundreds of them scampered in through the wide, hospitably open doors. They were from different institutions. Many of the events were children's events and the ponies and horses were shown to the little children of the poor by the little children of the rich. Each of the former group received a box of sweetmeats as the gift of Mrs. Vanderbilt.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

News and Gossip of Social Doings at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special correspondence.]—How do you suppose the president and Mr. Hughes, and even more Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Hughes, and their respective families down to little Miss Elizabeth, managed to live through the last fortnight? Most of us nearly lost our minds over the suspense, even though we didn't have so much as a pair of gloves or a pound of candy at stake. And yet here are the president and Mrs. Wilson back at the White House, going through all the usual motions, even to their interminable motorings, and the cabinet reassembling, just as if it were last year, or next year, or any other old year.

And the Hugheses? Well, Miss Helen and Miss Elizabeth are back, little Miss Elizabeth at her studies and Miss Helen looking after her small sister and much occupied with the winter conference of the Young Women's Christian association which began on Tuesday at the Washington Y. W. C. A. rooms.

As to their future plans Washington at least does not know. It assumes that the red house on the Sixteenth street hill will be rented and Justice Hughes return to the practice of law, probably in New York. In fact, there was a circumstantial story a week ago that the Hughes residence had been rented to the Louis Lombards. And Washington accepted "the passing of the Hugheses" as regrettable but inevitable.

The story, however, proved a false alarm. It turns out that the Lombards have taken the Jewett house in S street at Connecticut avenue.

President Wilson announces that if he can possibly make time, he and Mrs. Wilson will go off for a little rest to one of the mountain resorts, possibly to White Sulphur, where they spent their honeymoon, before the opening of congress.

As for Washington, it is slowly recovering from election day—the first election day since Grant, by the way, when a president was running for reëlection that there has not been an election party at the White House awaiting the returns—and beginning to talk about the inauguration and to look over the field and see just how hard the election has hit it. With Wilson reëlected it will escape the upheaval, social as well as political, which always follows a change of administration. Nevertheless, there'll be changes a-plenty to make things interesting.

With the election safely over, society can return to its more normal interests. Chief among these are the movements of some of the more notable of its recent brides, and the November crop which is just starting out.

They will have for neighbors the Walter Scott Penfields, who were married in Omaha on the same day that the Hubschers were being married in Cincinnati. The Penfields have been down in Panama and in Cuba for their wedding trip, Mr. Penfield being a young lawyer who seems to have made a big hit with the Pan-Americans, and is attorney for several of their legations, and plays around a good deal with John Barrett.

The John Balentine Pitneys—she was Francise Williams, younger sister of Mrs. "Joe" Leiter and Mrs. "Billy" McCombs until she married a couple of months ago the nephew of Justice Mahlon Pitney of the Supreme court—are dividing their time between Morristown, N. J., his home, and Washington, hers. Just now they are in Washington with Mrs. Williams, who reopened her home last week.

Princess Margaret and Prince Andrea Boncompagni should by now be in Paris, having sailed Saturday of last week, after spending a week with Mrs. Draper. Outside of a few intimate friends nobody knows where they went for their honeymoon. From the moment the Draper motor disappeared from the Draper door, bearing the newlyweds, until they reappeared about a week later, not a hint reached Washington as to where or how they were spending their time.

News of the Religious World

Churches Want Big Fund for Home Missions.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

BEGINNING today and including next Sunday, national home mission week will be observed in several of the largest denominations.

The Presbyterians in Chicago hope to reach the goal of raising $100,000 for mission purposes in Chicago. The Baptists and Methodists are engaged in the national campaign. The Congregationalists, because of the plans for the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims, which include raising missionary money, are not engaging in the national home mission week.

The special $100,000 goal set by the Presbyterian churches is for special expenditures in Chicago and vicinity in addition to the regular contributions for home missions. Impetus was given to the movement by the offer of the Rev. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, to raise $25,000 of the amount, if the other churches would contribute $75,000.

A general rally will be held next Sunday afternoon in the Strand theater, South Wabash avenue and Seventh street, in which reports will be read from all Presbyterian churches showing their part in contributing to the $100,000 fund. The rally is intended to be a popular one with special music and inspirational addresses.

The boards of home missions of the various denominations joined in observing the week nationally in order to concentrate greater attention on the subject and in order to foster the interdenominational spirit, which is regarded essential in preventing overlapping of church work in small communities and also prevent fields from being neglected, as is quite certain to happen if every denomination pursues its work independent of all the others.

Wilmette Baptists have purchased a new lot and have plans nearly ready to submit to the congregation for the erection of a new $30,000 church. C. L. Major is chairman of the building committee.

The Rev. Melvin E. Trotter

The Rev. Melvin E. Trotter is the newly appointed superintendent of the Pacific Garden mission, 67 West Van Buren street. He succeeds the late Harry Monroe.

While Mr. Trotter is a convert of the Pacific Garden mission, coming there as a down and out twenty years ago, he is now a regularly ordained minister and a member of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) presbytery. For seventeen years he has been engaged in mission work. He has established forty-six rescue missions in various cities of the union and for several years past has raised annually for their support a budget of $200,000. It is his purpose now to place the care of most of the missions on his brother, George Trotter, and other mission leaders and to devote himself to Grand Rapids and Chicago.

Mr. Trotter plans an immediate enlargement of the work of the Pacific Garden mission by the establishment of branches on the three sides of the city. He hopes after the work is well under way to secure the erection of a new building for the central Pacific Garden mission.

Horace G. Ingersoll arrived in Chicago last Thursday to take up conservation work in connection with the mission. He will follow up the converts of the mission and make an effort to get them employment and see they are established in ways of sobriety and industry. This is a new feature of Pacific Garden mission work.

Mr. Trotter will be the regular speaker tomorrow at the meeting of the Presbyterian ministers in the Ohio building, 509 South Wabash avenue. Mr. Trotter is known among mission workers by the name of "Mel," just as the Rev. Dr. William A. Sunday is "Billy" and the Rev. Daniel A. Batey is "Dan."

The Methodist Episcopal church gave last year to foreign missions, according to the report of the board just issued, $2,967,026. This, the report says, exceeds the amount given by any other denomination by $900,000. The amount given to home missions will be nearly $2,000,000, making a total of gifts to mission sor nearly $5,000,000. The board sent to the foreign field last year ninety-four missionaries. The cost of administration of the foreign board is 7.6 cents on the dollar. Of the total gifts $1,033,770 came from the Woman's Foreign Missionary society and $990,311 came from the Woman's Home Missionary society.

The corner stone of the Morgan Park Baptist church will be laid on Thanksgiving day, Nov. 30. The Rev. Dr. Benjamin Otto is the pastor.

A festivale for the founding of a new school for Itaka children will be given in the St. Philip's Catholic church, Oak street and Cambridge avenue, beginning this evening at 7 o'clock with a concert. A program will be given every night this week in connection with a bazaar.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein of the Roman Catholic church will dedicate today at 10 o'clock the combination church and school of the Immaculate Conception on Deerfield road, Highland Park, Ill. The Rev. James D. O'Neill, S. T. D., is the pastor.

The building is three stories in height with a chapel on the first floor. The structure is of brick and stone and provides for twelve class rooms. The former school building was burned last March. The parish also has erected a new rectory of the same kind of construction as the church, with living quarters for the clergy and a parochial office.

Conferences for young people from 15 to 24 years of age will begin Friday under the auspices of the Cook County Sunday School association. The young men's conference will be held in the South Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, South Park avenue and Thirty-third street, and the conference for young women will be held in the First Baptist church, Thirty-first street and South Park avenue. There will be athletic meets on Saturday afternoon and a banquet on Monday night. The conferences will be open to the representatives and adult leaders from any school in Chicago. R. A. Waite, Lincoln, Neb., formerly religious boys' work secretary of the International Young Men's Christian association, will be the principal speaker at the boys' conference. On Sunday evening the meeting will be a joint session.

An appeal to the churches of the archdiocese has been made by Archbishop Mundelein for contributions to Peter's pence, which is to be used by the pope in providing for the administration of the church and to help in missionary enterprises. The appeal is accompanied by the statement that the most liberal Catholic countries, Belgium, Austria, and France, have been prevented from making their usual donations by reason of the war.

The Sunday schools of the Cook County Sunday School association are back of the men's fall festival chorus concert to be given next Thursday night in Orchestra hall, 220 South Michigan avenue. Edward T. Clissold is leader of the chorus, William Middleschulte will be organist, and the Imperial quartet will sing. Six United States flags will be distributed as prizes among the Sunday schools for securing the largest attendance at the concert.

William Jennings Bryan will be the speaker today and tomorrow before several church bodies.

This evening he will address the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall. His subject will be "The First Commandment." John T. Pirie of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. and the Rev. James G. K. McClure will also take part in the meeting.

Tomorrow morning he will speak at the meeting of the Methodist ministers at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Clark and Washington streets. The meeting will begin at 10:30, and Mr. Bryan will speak at 11 o'clock. His subject will be "Temperance."

At noon Mr. Bryan will be the speaker at a luncheon of the Dry Chicago Federation at the Hotel Sherman. He will help in making plans to make Chicago dry in the spring of 1918.

In the evening Mr. Bryan will be the speaker at the Congregational club in the Hotel La Salle.

"Look, Pa, How 'Gets It' Works!"

Lifts Your Corn Right Off. Never Fails.

"Ever in your LIFE see a corn come out like that? Look at the true skin underneath—smooth as the palm of your hand!"

Well Now, Look at That! Off Comes That Pesky Corn as Slick as a Whistle.

The earth is blessed with the one simple, painless, never-failing remedy that makes millions of corn-pestered people happy, and that's "GETS-IT." Apply it in 3 seconds. It dries. Some people jab and dig at their corns with knives and razors—wrap their toes in packages with bandages or sticky tape, make them red and raw with salves. Nothing like this with "GETS-IT." Your corn loosens—you lift it off. There's nothing to press on the corn or hurt. Angels couldn't ask for more. Try it tonight on any corn, callous or wart.

Sold in Chicago and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel, Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. Wieboldt & Co., Independent Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's 3 stores, Rothschild & Co., Central Drug Stores, Consumers Drug Co., C. R. ART

by Louise James Bargelt

REVISITING THE SCULPTURAL EXHIBIT.

On visiting again one day last week the sculptural exhibit at the Art institute I recalled the advice of a famous London specialist who was in the habit of sending his patients suffering from nervous strain to the British museum to pass an hour or so among the antique statues there. They always came away decidedly refreshed mentally, he claimed, and I had much the same feeling on leaving.

This exhibit to which Chicagoans are being treated is not only excellently representative of modern American sculpture, which every year is more and more proving its right to take its place among the sculpture of the world, but is inclusive of inspiring examples of the three groups into which sculpture, since time began, has been divided.

The "Christ" by Charles N. Niehaus is a strong portrayal of the Savior and the cross and a good example of modern religious sculptoring. Niehaus has some fine portraits. His "Lincoln," his "Silenus," his "J. Q. A. Ward," and his "William the Silent" all belong to the school of naturalism and are essentialy modern in spirit. For the sculptor today is much more interested in bringing out the expression, suggesting the life of the soul within, than was the sculptor of ancient times. The Greeks adored beauty and the faces of their statues wore expressions of permanent glory. George Eliot described the figures of the vatican as white forms whose marble eyes held the beauty of another world.

Though the earliest attempts at sculpture in this country did not produce any famous statues, they were for the most part portraits, and the lineaments of many of our great men are often known to us through the work of American sculptors. From the beginning of our sculptural history, which catalogues the names of such talent as Powers, Story, Ball, and Rinehart, most of our artists have studied at that incomparable Academy of the Beaux Arts in Paris. This school has the world-wide reputation of producing artists of almost perfect technique. Add to this technique an American freshness of spirit and wholesomeness of subject and you have the splendidly national sculpture the Art institute is now showing.

The second sculptural group is generally known as the sculpture of sport, and in these modern times an increasing amount of the finest work comes under this head. Heroic deeds, the tragedies and exaltations of war, produce deep and stirring emotions, and it is in war that the sculpture finds many inspiring subjects. In Anna V. Hyatt's "Joan of Arc," which stands in Riverside drive, New York, and the replica of which is now in the institute, you can feel the whipping of battle flags about her and hear the victorious cries of her war crazed soldiers.

Then there is a third type of sculpture and that has for its theme beauty pure and simple. Idealism is wrought from the chisel. Truth is found in beauty. Directly opposed to this school might be mentioned the increasingly sizable school of naturalism which inclines too often to the purely ugly and to the revoltingly hideous.

In Sargeant Kendall's "Quest" there is a tremendous appeal. I have seen numbers of people about the statue at the same time and each one has some comment to make. Not all of it is complimentary, but it stirs one to thought and the impression it makes is never negative. The same quality may be noticed in his paintings, which have been exhibited at the institute. They are striking in their direct appeal, sometimes to the intellect, but more often to the emotions and the feelings.

Anna V. Hyatt, besides her world famed "Joan of Arc," has a number of fine animal statues which are full of strength and repressed energies.

Piccirilli, besides his "Outcast," which occupies the most prominent of positions on the institute steps, has some other equally fine if not so large and impressive pieces. Piccirilli is one of nine brothers, all of them Italian stone carvers by trade, and one of his brothers, Furio, has two works, "Young Mother and Child" and "Eurydice."

Other statuary which should not be missed are Polasek's "Aspiration" and "Fantasie," Bela Lyon Pratt's "Lord Amherst," Proctor's "Charging Elephant," Putnam's "Turtle," Lucy Perkins Ripley's "Study," Daniel Chester French's "Spirit of Life" (which is the Spencer Trask memorial), Charles Grafly's various portrait heads, Lorado Taft's sculpture work, and Sherry Edmundson Fry's "Goddess of the Waters."

Fry and Gregory and Polasek are the three sculptors in this exhibit who have already won the Prix de Rome. Manship is the fourth American to have achieved that honr, but he was not able to send.

President F. L. Brown of the Elgin Motor Car corporation is somewhat of a statistician. Mr. Brown, who has been going exhaustively into motor car figures, has found out that there are $2,500,000,000 worth of automobiles owned in the United States, and that the number of machines now registered in this country is 2,500,000, which makes the average price $1,000. The makers of the Elgin car are particularly interested in that fact, for the Chicago made six sells for less than $1,000. Mr. Brown has discovered that there is one motor car to every forty inhabitants of the United States, and that in Iowa there is one machine to every nineteen people. At the rate Elgin cars are being marketed, President Brown expects to raise the average in the middle states.

The prediction, made early in the season, that the 1916 production of Chandler cars would be more than double that of last season has been most conclusively verified, according to Tom Hay, the local Chandler distributor. An increase in actual deliveries of 352 per cent for October, 1916, over the same month last year is indisputable evidence of the demand for the Chandler, and October was no exception, for production in every month this season has shown a large gain over the corresponding month of 1915. In preparing for an increased output in 1917 two new buildings, totaling nearly 200,000 square feet of floor space, have been added to the Chandler plant at Cleveland.

The first of the year the Chicago agency of the Roamer automobile, now located at 2210 Michigan avenue under the management of C. Y. Kenworthy, formerly sales manager for the Baker, R. & L. company in the New York and New England district, will take possession of a new building to be erected at 2240 Michigan avenue. The Roamer, which made its local debut last month in a coming out party at the Congress hotel, made a wonderful appeal to automobile connoisseurs wishing a car of distinction and the sales have been most promising. Among the new Roamer owners is Miss Clara Joel, leading woman in the support of John Mason in "Common Clay."

Polite vaudeville has gone a step further and now the public is to be educated in the manufacture of automobiles. At the Victoria, Crown, and McVicker's theaters one of the acts will consist of the assembling and disassembling of Maxwell cars. Eli Miller, "a true disciple of the open road," stopped at the Louis Geyler company's salesrooms one day last week just to say "hello." With his wife and four children, Miller travels in a Hudson car, and takes an extended trip each summer or fall. The car that he is now driving has covered 14,000 miles, and while Miller has not gone out for any records, his car has made a record for consistent performance, having given him absolutely no trouble.

Announcement of an increase in price within the next five or six weeks is made by the Empire Automobile company. F. A. With the advance in sight there is an actual saving of from $70 to $100 for every Empire buyer who purchases before that time."

TELESCOPIC APPEARANCE OF THE PLEIADES

THE PLEIADES.

The Pleiades form a star group of the highest interest in the skies. It is probable that the most casual observer has seen the gossamer haze which reveals them to the unaided eye. They are in the constellation of Taurus, the Bull, which is well up in the eastern sky by 8 o'clock.

Six of the stars in the group usually can be seen without aid. One star is of the third magnitude, Alcyone. The visible points of light in the haze have a dipper shaped form, and Alcyone is the star at the juncture of bowl and dipper. The bowl is formed, running the top line away from Alcyone, by Maia, Taygeta, and down the outer edge, by Celaeno, and, on the bottom, by Electra and Merope. Atlas is at the end of the handle. Pleione, a star too faint for ordinary vision, is not a part of the dipper formation, but is above Atlas, and there is also a double Asterope, below ordinary eyesight, outside the bowl.

Only sharp eyes can make out all the stars which are referred to as within unaided vision, but an opera glass will help even poor sight to point the haze with bright stars. It is hardly necessary to give directions for locating and identifying the swarm. Look in the eastern sky and the gossamer of light will reveal itself.

There are said to be more than three thousand stars in the group. The telescope cannot discover all of them. Photography reveals more of the wonders of what has been called a cosmical fog.

It is a great system of suns in which the one which appears brightest to us, Alcyone, is estimated to be sixty times brighter than Sirius, the great star which now arises late in the evening. The group is two or three hundred light years distant and the suns which compose it are closely related in development.

Tennyson, in one of his poems, calls the Pleiades a "swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid." His words were truer than his knowledge, for we now know that the stars of the group are, in fact, connected by streamers and sheets of glittering nebula.

Pictures of long exposure taken with a star camera plainly show that every star is a nucleus about which are wound and congregated the nebulous clouds.

If there are those who can watch and understand upon any of the lesser planets of the swarm, the sky must be to them a spectacular and wonderful thing. We live in the center of a cluster composed largely of mature and aged suns, and except for the Milky Way the only conspicuous nebulosities that we see are two small patches in Orion and Andromeda. But for a world in the midst of the Pleiades there would be not only these objects but in addition the far flung uncondensed dust clouds from each of the giant suns, and a whole sky laced and crossed with gleaming streaks of white nebula.

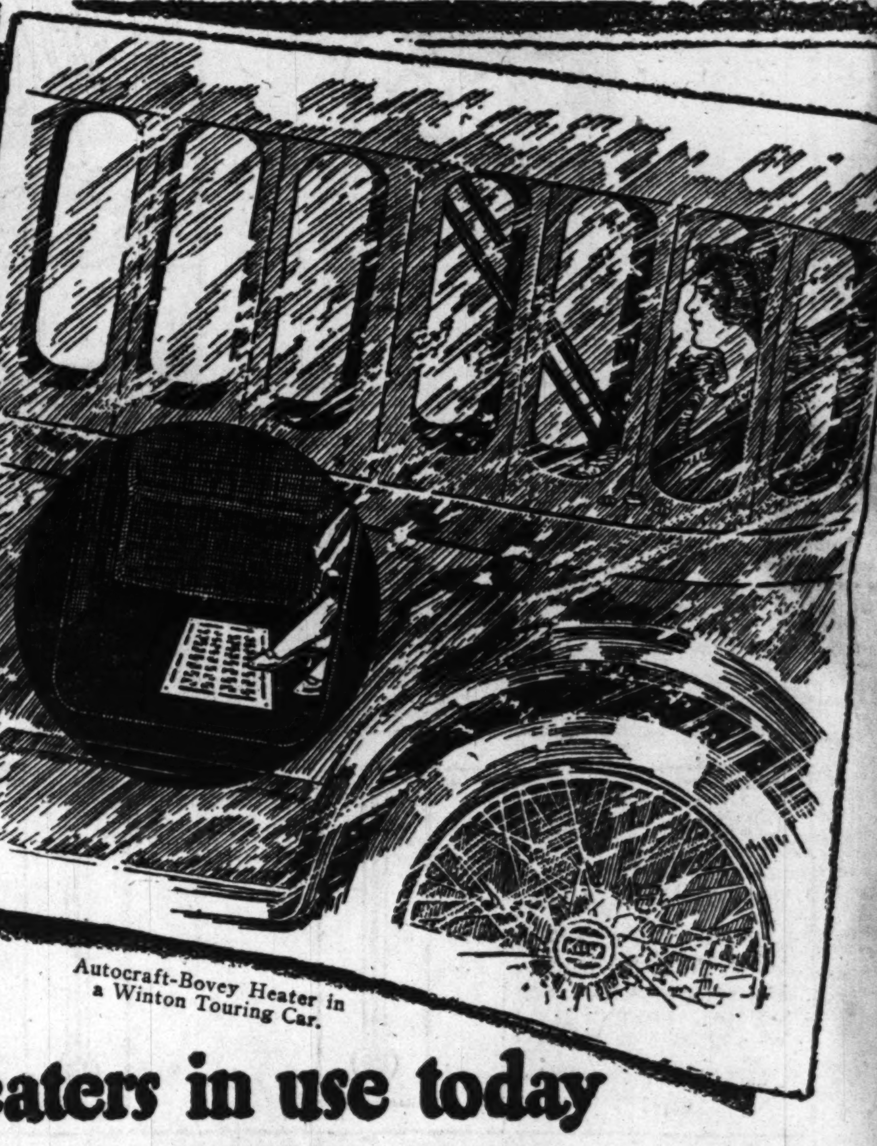
Illustrating the installation of the Autocraft-Bovey Heater in a Franklin Sedan.



Autocraft-Bovey Heater in a Winton Touring Car.

Make your car as warm as your home —thousands of Autocraft-Bovey Heaters in use today

Any garage man can install the Autocraft-Bovey Heater in your car in 90 minutes.

And instantly your limousine or touring car is converted into an all-year car.

Simply turn the lever on your dash and every corner of your car is instantly flooded with fresh, warm air—free from odors of any nature. Summer comfort in the bleakest weather. Its temperature is completely under your control.

And all this is accomplished without any obstruction or damage to your floor space.

Only Safe Heater Made—You Can Put Your Bare Hand on Register Plate

The Autocraft-Bovey Heater is as safe as the radiators in your home. For there is no direct contact between the radiation coils and the register plate, or any part of the car. It can't cause even the slightest injury to shoe leather.

No other heater has ever been indorsed by fire insurance underwriters. Think what that means for safety!

And it lasts for years. It can be taken from your old car and installed in a new car any time.

Money back in 30 days

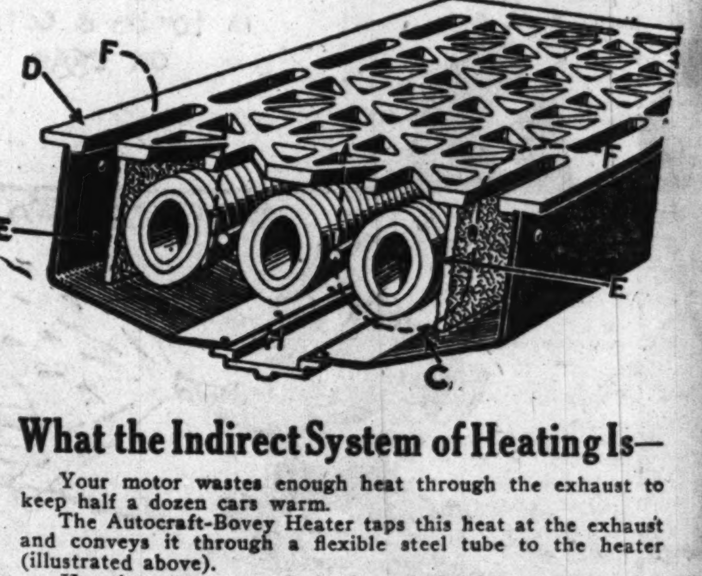
Don't lose the use of your car a single day during the winter months. And, by all means, do not expose yourself to coughs and colds by riding in a cold car, when absolute comfort is so easily and cheaply obtained.

Install an Autocraft-Bovey Heater in your car now—entirely at our risk. That is the only way on which it is sold. Enjoy the comfort of summer temperature in winter for 30 days—at our risk.

See for yourself its remarkable simplicity. Note that it requires absolutely no attention.

Apply any and every test you wish to the Autocraft-Bovey Heater. Examine it thoroughly. Note that no part of the heater except the radiator coils ever gets hot. See how these coils are suspended within the body of the heater and are completely surrounded—first, by an asbestos lined steel wall; second, by an intake air space. Thus is absolute safety positively assured.

If, at any time during this 30-day, no-risk trial, you are dissatisfied with your Autocraft-Bovey Heater, your money will be cheerfully refunded.



What the Indirect System of Heating Is—

Your motor wastes enough heat through the exhaust to keep half a dozen cars warm.

The Autocraft-Bovey Heater taps this heat at the exhaust and conveys it through a flexible steel tube to the heater (illustrated above).

Two asbestos walls—"EE"—prevent any contact with the steel walls of the radiator, and thereby prevent any danger of fire.

The cold air is drawn into the heater through the sides of the register plate—"FF"—passed over the radiator coils, where it is warmed, and passes up into the car through register. An indirect method of heating, furnishing an abundance of warm air. And yet the register plate never gets so hot that you cannot put your bare hands on it.

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton

National Parks Draw Many Motorists in 1916.

DURING the summer of 1916 thousands of American motorists made a remarkable and profitable discovery. They found that in this country there were touring grounds of astonishing scenic grandeur that could not be equaled in the much visited, much praised, much exploited old world, now closed to motor traffic by the barricades of war.

West of the Rocky mountains are located the seven most popular of Uncle Sam's sixteen national parks—Yellowstone, Yosemite, Rainier, Glacier, Crater Lake, Sequoia, and Gen. Grant—to which 142,387 "See America first" tourists were atracted during the 1916 season. More than half of these tourists—72,072, to be exact—were gasoline gadders, making their trips of wonderland exploration and belated discovery in automobiles.

Although opened late in the season because of the heavy snows in the mountains, Mount Rainier national park was the most popular with the motorists, 17,760 of the 23,989 visitors driving there in automobiles. Yellowstone, where self-propelled vehicles were first admitted on Aug. 1, 1915, also made a splendid record, 14,930 of the 35,938 persons registering with the authorities being members of the gasoline buying freemasonry.

The complete attendance records for 1916 in the seven most popular national parks, tabulated by Stephen T. Mather, assistant to the secretary of the interior, are as follows:

Park.	Total.	Motorists.
Yellowstone	35,938	14,930
Yosemite	31,216	14,166
Rainier	23,989	17,760
General Grant	15,360	8,612
Glacier	12,889	1,677
Crater Lake	12,265	11,500
Sequoia	10,780	3,527

The table showing the number of cars registered at these parks in the last three years also proves that 1916 was a season of national park visiting by the motorists, the comparative figures being as follows:

Park.	1914.	1915.	1916.
Yellowstone	*	958	3,445
Yosemite	673	3,895	3,888
Rainier	1,594	3,288	3,938
General Grant	392	1,584	1,749
Glacier	267	457	902
Crater Lake	1,107	2,015	2,600
Sequoia	158	830	735

*Not open to automobiles.

Glacier, as will be seen by the table, made the poorest showing, not because it is lacking in beauty, but because there are few miles of trail on which the motorist can drive his car. To explore the park, he must abandon his automobile for horse or burro. Consequently, comparatively few motorists brought their machines into the park. Instead they garaged their cars at some nearby point after driving overland to this wonderland.

The discovery of the national parks by the motorists was profitable to the government, automobile tourists paying $65,311 in fees for the privilege of bringing their cars into the seven wonderlands. The receipts from motorists were larger this year than ever before, although the fees were reduced in three of the parks, Rainier, Glacier, and General Grant, and only slightly increased in [illegible] Crater Lake. The fees paid by motorists in the last three years are as follows:

Park.	1914.	1915.	1916.
Yellowstone	.....	$ 7,076	$25,380
Yosemite	$4,083	13,457	19,606
Rainier	8,147	16,317	12,691
Gen. Grant	445	1,685	952
Glacier	842	578	800
Crater Lake	1,167	2,102	4,202
Sequoia	817	1,158	1,594

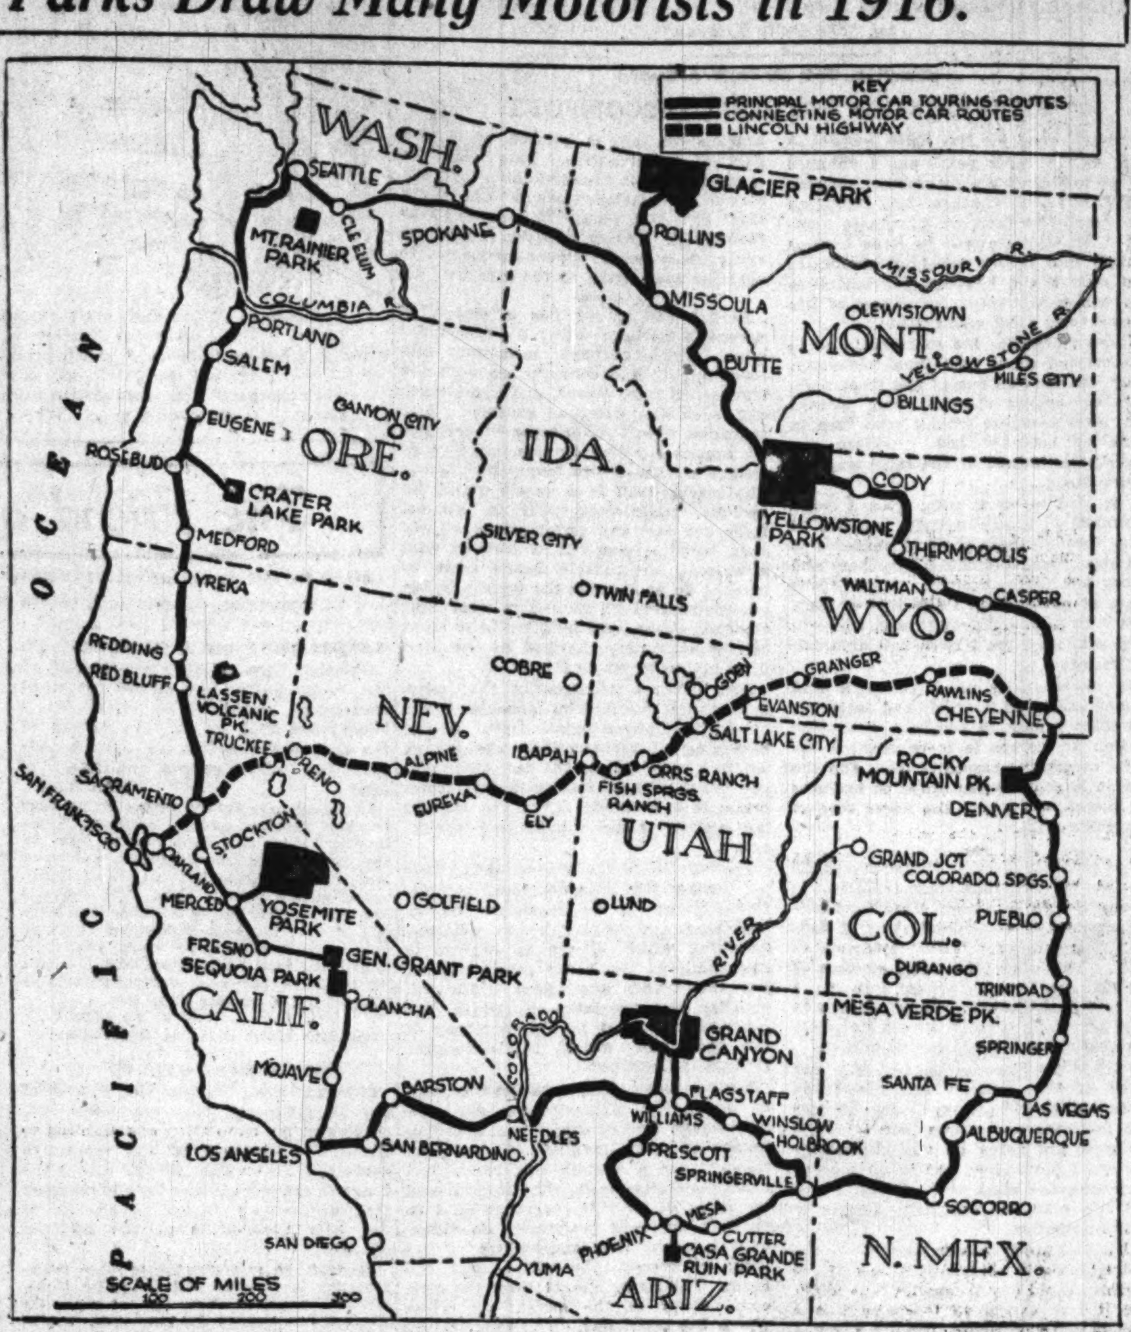
Although complete figures, showing the fees paid by all tourists compared to those paid by motorists, are not as yet available, the money received from automobile registrations was almost one-half of the total revenue. In Yellowstone, for examle, motorists paid $25,000 of the $60,000 taken in.

The automobile fees in the seven parks, put in force at the opening of the 1916 season, are as follows:

Park.	Flat rate.	Season rate.
Yellowstone	$7.50	$10.00
Yosemite	5.00	8.00
Rainier	4.00	6.00
General Grant	.50	2.50
Glacier	.50	2.00
Crater Lake	2.00	3.00
Sequoia	2.00	3.00

The rates are based on the mileage of motor roads that each park offers the tourist. The Yellowstone fee is the highest, there being more miles of automobile highway in that wonderland than in all the other national parks combined. On the other hand, the fee in Glacier and Gen. Grant, where the mileage of motor roads is short, is low.

Automobile fees saved the day in the Yellowstone, money received from the motorists making possible a change in the police detail in the park on Oct. 1, when civilian rangers were substituted for the United States army regulars. On Sept. 1, when the threatened railroad strike cut off tourist traffic by train, Assistant Secretary Mather feared that he would not have sufficient funds to employ the civilian rangers at increased pay, but the fees paid by automobile owners for admission to the Yellowstone more than made up the deficit.



Several changes in the national parks are contemplated before the opening of the 1917 season, by which the motorists will profit. One of the most important plans now under consideration is the establishment of a western entrance to the Yosemite. The new road, which will provide a winter route for automobiles and thus encourage winter sports, will extend from Merced to El Portal, paralleling the railroad and following the valley of the Merced river.

The state of California must pay the cost of building the highway to El Portal, the park entrance, and a $15,000,000 bond issue, voted upon at last week's election, will furnish money for this work. In the park the government will spend $50,000 for the improvement of the El Portal road, and an additional $50,000 on other motor trails in the Yosemite.

There are now three entrances to the Yosemite—the eastern or Tioga, road, which does not open before July 15, because of the snow on the crest of the Sierras; the northern, via the Big Oak Flat highway, and the southern, over fifty miles of toll road that runs through Wawona and Mariposa Grove to Glacier Point, and to travel over which a fee of $2.50 per car is charged.

There is now but one automobile highway in Mount Rainier National park. The motorist drives from Ashford to the southwest entrance, and then, following the Nesqually valley to the snout of Nesqually glacier, goes around Rickseker Point and Nevada Falls to Paradise park, famous for Alpine scenery. Before the opening of another touring season, however, Assistant Secretary Mather hopes to have another motor road in Mount Rainier park, a thoroughfare connecting with the state concrete highway at Orting and following the Carbon river to Carbon glacier and Spray park.

During the present week Assistant Secretary Mather will meet with the proponents of the park-to-park highway, which, when completed, will take the motorists on a circle tour of Uncle Sam's wonderlands. Starting at Denver, the tourist will drive to Yellowstone, Glacier, and Mount Rainier, thence over the wonderful Columbia river road to Portland and Crater Lake, down to San Francisco, and then east to Yosemite, General Grant, and Sequoia, from where the last leg of the trip takes him to the Grand Canyon and Mesa Verde park in Colorado.

I have been having a great deal of trouble with my carburetor lately, and two or three mechanics who have attempted to fix it have had no success. I have trouble in starting the car, and after the motor gets to running it misses and also makes a popping noise. Can you suggest a remedy?

ELTON BLAKELY, Dundee, Ill.

The most important thing to know about a carburetor is to leave it alone unless you are certain it is at fault. If possible, I would suggest that you visit one of the service stations now maintained by most of the carburetor makers. If you have a magneto on your car it is quite possible that it needs attention. That may be the reason why your motor misses. If the motor starts hard, flood the carburetor by pushing down the tickler on the top of the instrument. If, when the motor starts, there is a popping noise in the carburetor when the throttle is suddenly opened, your mixture is too lean and the needle valve should be opened slightly. In case the motor runs sluggishly, with black smoke through the exhaust, then the mixture is too rich and the needle valve should be closed slightly.

Having just come into possession of my first automobile I am rather green and would like to have your advice as to what method to pursue in regard to taking out a license and also what kind of insurance to place on the car.

M. K. M., Chicago.

First of all write to Louis G. Stevenson, secretary of state, Springfield, Ill., for an application blank, which you will fill out and return with the fee required. You may drive the car ten days with no license plate attached. Go to the city collector in the city hall and pay the wheel tax, which will only be from the present time to the 1st of May. There are four classes of automobile insurance—fire and theft, liability, property damage, and collision. However, most motorists take out only fire, and theft, and liability. Fire and theft covers the body, machinery, and equipment of the car. Liability insures one against accidents to others, and the insurance companies defend suits up to $5,000 for a single person and up to $10,000 where more than one person is injured by the driver of the machine. Property damage insurance covers damage to other property than your own and collision insurance losses or damage to your car caused by collision. There are two classes of collision insurance, one where the damage must be over $25 in order to collect, and the other called "fully insured," which covers any and all damage sustained in a collision.

Will you please give me the approved route between Springfield, Ill., and Alexandria, Minn.? What are the chances of good roads this late in the season? I have a large, seven passenger touring car weighing 4,000 pounds, and will carry five people and hand baggage.

J. R. B. V. C., Springfield, Ill.

Naturally, it is getting rather late in the season for long distance touring, for the roads are not in as good shape as they were a month or so ago. However, if the weather is fairly good you should have but little trouble in making your trip. About the best way would be to go through Bradfordton, Ashland, Bluff Springs, Beardstown, Rushville, Ripley, Mount Sterling, Clayton, and Camp Point to Quincy, 119.9 miles. Then go through Ursa, Sutter, and Hamilton to Keokuk, 37.2 miles, at which point pick up the Red Ball route, which is completely marked clear through to St. Paul. This route takes one through Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, 191 miles; Charles City, Austin, and Faribault to St. Paul, 209 miles. From St. Paul go through Champlin, Anoka, Elk River, St. Cloud, St. Joseph, Avon, Albany, Freeport, Melrose, Sauk Center, and Osakis to Alexandria, 141.2 miles.

Is not the Red Ball route due recognition in giving out the list of highways by your department, as, for example, in answer to query signed "Reader, Indianapolis, Ind.," in the issue of Nov. 12? This route runs from St. Paul to St. Louis and is recommended not only to tourists traveling between those two cities, but also to those going from Chicago to St. Paul. No motorist will make any mistake by taking the Lincoln highway from Chicago to Cedar Rapids and then taking the Red Ball to St. Paul. The road is not only a fine one, but a thoroughly marked throughout. The writer realizes that it is sometimes not possible to recall all highways in making up lists such as you published, but the Red Ball is of sufficient importance and length and is popular enough among tourists, to be mentioned along with other routes of the middle states. You will find that there are a great many highways that are simply "highways on paper," but it is not so with the Red Ball. You also will find that the name given a highway does not guarantee its good condition, nor its systematic marking. The Lincoln highway, Dixie highway, Jefferson highway, and many others are only as good as each community through which they pass desires to make them. Tourists frequently refer to this matter in talking with me and I have personally observed this fact.

R. N. C., Iowa City, Ia.

Pardon our oversight. The Red Ball route consists of fine natural dirt roads, is well marked, and many faverable comments on it have come inot the department. It certainly deserves to be classed with the best highways of the middle states, and we take pleasure in making the fact known to our readers.

What is the distance from Canton, O., to Wheeling, W. Va., and what is considered the best route between the two cities?

L. P. M., Canton, O.

The distance is 92.8 miles. The best way is through Reedurban, Massillon, Navarre, Harmon, Justus, Beach City, Dover, New Philadelphia, Urichsville, Dennison, Franklin, Laceyville, Cadiz, Science Hill Harrisville, Pleasant Grove, Colerain, and Bridgeport to Wheeling.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

NOVEMBER

Snow Flurries.

THE first snow comes from magic casements which fancy opens in the gray vault. The adult's world is always in part a child's world and the early token of winter, brought by the first white flurries, is something invested with the genial, acceptive romanticism of youth when change is a thing desired.

Change is the servant of ambition in youth; it is the headsman in post-meridian life. Change when it is desired in youth goes in lead shoes; when it is feared it runs in winged sandals. It beckons youth to the heights; it pushes post-meridian life into the valley. It is the beginning and it is the end. It is the creator and the destroyer.

When the first snow comes driven by a northeast wind through the brown and yellow and bare woods, when the crystals whirl and dance in the shafts of light from the windows, change, bringing another aspect, other conditions, other demands in life, has asserted itself. The first touch is genial. The whitened crust on the dead leaves, the nipping wind, the washed sunlight the morning after the flurry, the vinous air and tonic response of the body are elements of joviality.

Life is being driven again to close quarters, within the four walls of hut happiness, to find contentment in the measure in which it is prepared for the restriction of physical activity.

The early snows are jovial but the changing seasons eat at the rim of life.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

THE WORLD WE LIVE IN.

In spite of the violent partisanship which the European war has kindled, most of us in this more or less neutral land realize that a long time must pass before the factors of responsibility can be established. Historians themselves will differ sharply, and, since there is a philosophical basis for every judgment of human actions, they are likely never to agree.

But if time is necessary for this moral valuation, it is equally necessary even for the mind to seize upon the material outlines of the war. We who are its contemporaries have no adequate conception of this tremendous phenomenon. We are like men at the base of a mountain. We have a dim sense of its swelling bulk, we see the rocks and chasms of its sides. But only a long perspective can bring the whole gigantic mass within the scope of the eye.

If we have made mistakes, as we have, in judgment during the passage of these staggering events, it is because we have been dealing with details of a cataclysm so mighty that we have not even any figures of speech to measure them by. The wars of primitive gods and heroes, the triumphs of Alexander and Napoleon, pale into insignificance before the world sweep of this struggle. Our classic analogies have broken down, and among a mass of mighty mind-filling facts we can grope only for some dim sense of the incredible whole. We have read of beleaguered cities, but now a continent is beleaguered and the round earth is battle ground. The distinction between the warrior and the civilian has been swept away. Every man, every woman is a warrior, intently, anxiously, passionately at work upon one huge effort. All civilized life feels the sweep of the current. Even here in America, outside of the clash of armies, we feel it and are borne along into the vortex. In Germany the daily food of every living thing is anxiously measured, and now individualistic England adopts the same iron law of siege. We feel it in the rapid increase of the cost of necessities, and if the war continues we shall ourselves be compelled to adopt the law of the siege. We have been shocked at the destruction of peaceful women and children on the high seas. But there is no peace anywhere, and these were a handful. For months in the countries of Europe every human thing, from the infant to the centenarian, has been bearing the burden of this all-embracing struggle. We in America can take no action that has not some consequence upon the main event. Whether we act or refuse to act, whether we give or stay our hand, we are accomplices and must bear our share of the responsibility, moral and material.

In Europe the differences between national organizations are being wiped out. Each nation is an armed camp obeying the same inexorable needs. The English system was the opposite to the German, philosophically and practically. As the war lengthens the differences disappear. The grim aristocracy of war rules all. We are not yet directly within its jurisdiction, yet, if the conflict continues, we shall find our own habits, customs, even our institutions, gradually conforming to the necessity of organized power.

We shall do well to recognize this inevitable tendency and to direct it wisely. Though we cannot seize the whole fact of this earth struggle, we can at least know the set of the current. We can realize from what we do see, from the demonstration of Germany's organized strength, from the almost miraculous transformation of the whole English system, that America cannot continue to live the life it led before the war. Reactions there will be in Europe after peace comes, but not for a long time, if ever, toward the loose jointed, haphazard, wasteful, unthinking life of our America of the passing generation. Nationality means far more in the world, and will mean, than ever it has before, because it is expressing itself in an intensive organization of national resources and a moral organization to support it which are unprecedented in the history of mankind. In America alone we have all the temptations of easy wealth and peace. We are relaxed in a world of giant strain. We play with large, vague ideals which the keen edge of fact has not put to the test. The tremendous basic realities of the life of men and nations are all that remain to the peoples of Europe. They are hid from us behind comfortable illusions.

It is very unlikely that we can take without heavy price what Europe is paying for in blood and agony. That is not the law of life. It is virtually certain that we in our turn must pay either in cleansing misfortune or in slow deterioration. But what can be done by taking thought is for us to do. It will be little enough at best.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH.

When the militia set out for the Mexican border most Americans forgot in the excitement that something might be learned from the mobilization. They were heroes fighting for the welfare of the country. Perhaps the cost was thought of, but efficiency and criticism was in no one's mind.

In the four months, more or less, of mobilization the government spent somewhere between a hundred and a hundred and fifty millions—over a dollar each for every inhabitant of the United States. Out of that money they got no settlement of the Mexican question, but they got, if they are willing to take it, a bitter lesson in American military efficiency. The citizen soldiery—not a million over-night, as Bryan estimated—but a hundred thousand in a month, had not been tested since the Spanish war. Each citizen paid a dollar or more for the lesson. He is entitled to it. THE TRIBUNE will attempt to give it to him.

With this issue begins a series of articles on the mobilization of the militia by Capt. Henry J. Reilly. There can be no doubt of Capt. Reilly's competency for this work. His education and experience in the United States army have been augmented by military observations on three continents. He was in command of a militia unit at the border.

The story of the mobilization is a bitter story of incompetency and waste. It could not have been otherwise, as Capt. Reilly shows us, under our system of defense. "It is just as impossible," he writes, ". . . to hastily throw an army division together and have it work efficiently as it would be to try to start any of the biggest businesses in America by hastily gathering together groups of individuals who had had some experience but who knew nothing of each other, of the general manager, or he of them."

No American in business life would attempt so insane a thing. No nation but the American, with the lesson of world war staring it in the face, will imagine that it can accomplish national defense under any such system or lack of system.

The hundred million dollar experiment proves nothing except that we shall have to begin the problem of national defense all over again.

THE DEMON RUM AND NEW YEAR'S EVE.

The most unlovely festival we have is that of New Year's eve. It is a boor bacchanal, a booze carnival, the object of which is not to be happy but drunk. The intent is to get intoxicated as quickly as possible and thereupon be as rowdy as possible.

The purpose is to saturate all the restraints and conventions of life with alcohol and then set fire to them. We are unhappy in most of our festivals. They are violent attempts to break away from normal life. They have no natural grace and little rationality. The cause in part may be nerves, but a sounder explanation is that American life is not yet rich enough in traditions and habits.

Our most successful holiday is Thanksgiving. It is a festival of the home, where an American is at his best. It is domestic and tranquil. Its traditions are as old as the country. It is a festival of the kitchen, and although the American is not one of the world's great eaters—the north of Europe has the real trenchermen—yet he likes to sniff the fleshpots and contemplate the delights of a roast fowl. Thanksgiving does not demand a violent departure from normal. It merely intensifies placid pleasures and decorates domesticity.

New Year's eve is a false carnival of the violent minority. It does not touch the whole people as Thanksgiving does, but it makes a larger spectacle because it has a mob impulse.

The old New Year's day celebration, abandoned because of its influence upon the habits of the young bucks, who were drunk before they had made half their calls and thereafter scandalized debutantes and matrons, had a social reason and was wise beyond the conception of the folk who now want to make the last night of December a thing remembered for the aching head of the first day of January.

Alcohol and geniality went together when New Year's day was a latitudinarian home festival, when hospitality put on garlands, and when the new year was ushered into a jovial world.

That custom, which had some sense to it, was abandoned because too many young fellows fell into the punch bowls. For it we have substituted the wholly inexcusable rip roaring abandon of New Year's eve. The Demon Rum decided to be a real demon on New Year's eve and strip himself of every gracious, genial aspect. The nearer he got his patrons to the gutter the better he was pleased.

For considerations such as these it is impossible to be forlorn this year even if the mayor should persist in regarding Sunday as Sunday whether the great wet night comes on that day or not. Mr. Thompson, who heroically punishes a few saloonkeepers every Monday for sneaking a few bottles of beer to thirsty patrons on Sunday but who seems to be indifferent to cheating on a large scale, may wink at a little cheating New Year's eve. We suspect the occasion will not be wholly arid, but if it is the blow can be sustained.

If defense of alcohol has to include excesses of the New Year's eve sort, then its rational friends might as well close the school of argument. If alcohol is to be regarded wholly as an intoxicant, then rationality is out of court.

If liquor is to be tolerated in the human scheme of things it is upon the theory that people's moods and aspirations are too complex for the dead level of uncolored existence. The prudential life may produce a safe human mechanism, but the human being, not content with being a protected mechanism, will try to satisfy some longings for a discreet moment in Valhalla.

Excessive prudence results in a shriveled life and it questions its own validity.

Editorial of the Day

MAN POWER.

[The English Review.]

Better a country of barracks than what the shirkers would make it—a country of cemeteries.

If we aspire to regulate the balance of European power in a sense favorable to ourselves, which in brutal truth means our continued existence as a world empire, it is as a nation in arms we must pursue the fight to a finish. Today it is men, not money or armaments, that our nearest ally lacks, and it is man power that we must contribute if a premature and inconclusive peace is not to be forced upon our valiant friends under conditions which they would regard as detestable. For unless Britain can manitain for another two years or thereabouts an uninterrupted flow of man power to the western and southern fronts our valiant neighbor across the silver streak will find it humanly impossible to maintain the struggle which has in the last two terrible years involved the depletion of the flower of her manhood.

This was whispered many months past; now it is being openly discussed wherever thinking men get together, whether in dugout facing the unspeakable Hun or snatching a few hours' leave in the bosom of their families.

"Men; more men," "England must send more soldiers," are the common expressions of opinion in the fair land where already so many of our khaki clad heroes sleep.

DISCRIMINATION.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright, 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]

SIR JACOB SASSOON, who after having long since reached the allotted span of threescore years and ten has just passed away at Bombay, was the acknowledged head of the celebrated house that bears his name, and among the members of his race, in the orient at any rate, bore the ancient and inherited title of "Prince of the Captivity."

Sir Jacob claimed descent from King David, and his ancestor, Abraham Sassoon, who flourished at Bagdad in the seventeenth century, is said to have secured records and compiled a genealogy showing that he was a direct descendant of Shephatiah, the fifth son of King David.

Not only are there numerous references to the name of the family in ancient Hebrew literature, but even in the Talmud, and the Sassoons figure in the old history of Spain as heads of the sect known as the Ivn-Shoshan and held the position of chiefs of the Jewish patrician community of Toledo prior to the expulsion of the Jews from Spain. The name of Shoshan signifies Lily, while Sassoon is the Hebrew equivalent for Gladness.

The Sassoons had been established for over 400 years at Bagdad, where they held the offices of treasurers of the Ottoman government when in 1832 David Sassoon, who had been born there in 1792, visited Bombay, to which in due course he transferred the headquarters of his firm, with branches at Calcutta, Shanghai, Canton, Nagasaki, and throughout the orient.

The late Sir Jacob was his grandson and principal heir, and having no children, his aronetcy goes by special remainder to his younger brother, now Sir Edward Elias Sassoon, who makes his home in London at 46 Grosvenor place, close to the American embassy, and whose two sons have been serving since the beginning of the war as officers of the British army and navy respectively.

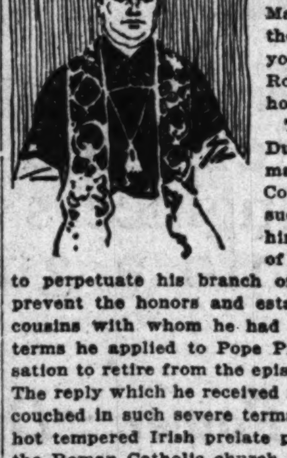
There is another Sassoon baronetcy, now owned by the late Sir Jacob's young cousin, Sir Phillip Sassoon, whose mother was a daughter of Baron Gustav Rothschild of Paris. He is a Conservative member of parliament for Hythe, is unmarried, and has been serving since the beginning of the war in France and in England as a lieutenant of the East Kent yeomanry on the staff of Field Marshal Lord French.

But it was the late Sir Jacob who was regarded as the real head of the family and who was recognized as the chief of the entire Jewish community of British India as well as the principal benefactor and protector of all Jews in Turkey, China, Japan, Persia, central Asia, and Africa.

Nor was this protection a mere figure of speech, for the power and influence of the Sassoons throughout the orient is enormous, owing to the fact that for hundreds of years—indeed, ever since they settled at Bagdad—they have enjoyed something akin to a monopoly of the native banking in Asia and northern and central Africa.

It is their money that for centuries has financed almost all the native trade of Asia and of northern and central Africa, and, though nothing but personal security is ever asked by them from the native borrowers, and collateral is never demanded, yet their losses have been few and far between. The traders, the tribesmen, the various chieftains and rulers know that "to fail the Sassoons" would be to lose all possibility of trading again. To be "blacklisted" by them meant not only financial ruin but ostracism on the part of orientals. The consequence has been that in spite of the almost continuous strife raging about Bagdad in the days when the headquarters of the house were maintained there, and around so many of the branch establishments of the firm in Asia and in Africa, no attempt has ever been made to confiscate Sassoon wealth or to loot Sassoon treasure.

Lord Dunboyne, twenty-sixth holder of a peerage created in 1274, and a captain of the royal navy, is advertising for sale Knoppogue castle, an estate of over a thousand acres, near Quin, in County Clare, which has been in the possession of his family for many centuries. It is one of the few old Irish feudal castles that are still habitable, and with its stately, broad staircase, its secret passages and dungeons, is a most interesting place of residence. The meaning of its name is Kiss on the Hill.



In former times the territorial possessions of the Lords of Dunboyne were much larger. But most of the property belonging to the peerage was alienated by the twenty-first baron, who bequeathed it to the Maynooth college for the education of Irish youths intended for the Roman Catholic priesthood.

The twenty-first Lord Dunboyne was the Roman Catholic bishop of Cork, when the barony suddenly devolved upon him through the death of a nephew. Wishing to perpetuate his branch of the family and to prevent the honors and estates from passing to cousins with whom he had always been on bad terms he applied to Pope Pius VI. for a dispensation to retire from the episcopacy and to marry. The reply which he received from the vatican was couched in such severe terms of censure that the hot tempered Irish prelate publicly seceded from the Roman Catholic church, joined the State Reformed Church of Ireland, and then married a Protestant.

There was no issue of this union, a circumstance which exercised a considerable influence on the mind of the ex-bishop. Another thing which perturbed him was the sudden mortal illness of his old family coachman when driving with him one day along a lonely road, remote from any village. Realizing that the man was at death's door, the ex-bishop, forgetting his Protestantism, besought his old servant to make his confession so that he might grant him absolution.

The coachman stubbornly refused on the ground that his master was an apostate. Lord Dunboyne assured him that even an apostate at such times of dire necessity had full power given him by the church to grant absolution. The coachman died unshriven, declaring that he would sooner trust to the mercy of God than receive absolution at the hands of a renegade.

The ex-bishop was horror stricken and so profoundly impressed that the incident undoubtedly contributed to his reconciliation with his church not long afterwards.

FUNCTIONING WITHOUT DISCOMFORT.

(Contributed by Dr. Effie Lobdell.)

ABOUT three years ago I chanced to pick up a copy of the magazine, Physical Culture, and read an article written by a business woman who claimed to have trained herself into health befitting her duties and out of the physical infirmities so common to women in all phases of life during their most efficient years.

These infirmities are so common as to be accepted as a traditional necessity. They are used as one of the most common arguments showing why women can never compete wholly with men in work or business and therefore can never be estimated by the same wage or salary scale.

I decided to work out a plan I could recommend to any woman patients to carry through these physical phases with the least possible evidence to others and discomfort to themselves. In the three years of observation I am able to state that with the intelligent woman who will coöperate with me I have had astounding results.

My observations cover the girls and women employed in stores and factories, the office women in positions where the tension on nerves is more marked because of greater responsibilities, and the women in professional life or in business for themselves where the nerve tension is greater still.

The greatest number incapacitated by the simple function, menstruation, is among the girls of large stores and factories where the manifestations of dysmenorrhœa become almost epidemic at times. This shows the large element of "letting go" which enters into it. I am told that the same thing happens in high schools, especially where elaborate preparations are made for their care.

I would not discount the necessity nor value of the modern accommodation made for the girls in up to date schools and factories and stores, but I believe the girls are doing an unconscious injustice to themselves and to all the sex by letting the weak side of their physical life play so prominent a part in their occupation.

This is exactly where and when the first training in personal hygiene of the woman should begin. Institutions might find it less expensive to make this a part of their régime, even by using a kind of disciplinary demand for health or a premium for health. Their present arrangement founded on leniency is not wise or economical.

Dr. Kristine Mann of New York, writing for the American Journal of Public Health, May, 1916, under the title "The Health of Department Store Women in New York," states that of 100 saleswomen, average age 20, examined by her as to symptoms, 40 per cent had menstrual troubles." (I believe a younger set would yield even a higher percentage.) "The total number who would be benefited by medical advice was 89 per cent, yet only 4 per cent were under a doctor's care."

The office woman has more need of concealing her feelings, as her position is raised to more of an equality with her fellow male workers. Personal hygiene is more carefully observed by her accordingly, and she trains herself to relegate personal feelings to the background. Nurses in the hospitals and on private duty train themselves to pass through menstruation with little deviation from the usual in duty. It is almost an unknown thing for a nurse to be put to bed for dysmenorrhœa, although they are the most strenuous of all workers, having long hours, walking many miles a day while on duty, and with great responsibility through it all. They are careful that no special attention shall be directed to them at menstrual time. About the only difference in their daily routine is that they use their period off duty for rest instead of for recreation.

The professional woman and the woman in business for herself has a definite value for her time and talent. Her emotions and personal feelings she subjugates to her ambitions and her self-discipline. She refuses to let a physical disadvantage check or limit her. She is the first to voluntarily find out her true state of health, and then train herself accordingly.

TO PASS COMFORTABLY THROUGH MENSTRUATION—Rational method is all that is necessary, excepting in those cases where correction of anatomical defects may exist. Woman's early training teaches that bathing must not be done during the menstrual period. Therefore, at the time she needs it most bathing is done the least. In inquiring into the cause of this very general rule I find that in most instances girls and women have lived under conditions where cold water was the only kind obtainable, without extra trouble, and not much privacy in the home was possible. If any one they ever heard about had bathed at such times, such practice was held to be the cause of any illness, from dropsy to tuberculosis, which might develop. Therefore modesty and fear were the prevailing first causes of personal uncleanliness at this time. They were the foundations on which the teaching was based.

Conditions of living have improved. Hot water arrangements are almost as general and necessary as cold water arrangements. A special room is now set aside for toilet purposes where the individual occupant can isolate herself. Not only can she have hot water, but she has a bathtub especially adaptable for her purposes, and, most important, she can regulate the temperature of the bathroom to suit her needs. Even if it has no special heating apparatus, she can heat it by running the tub full of hot water first and cool the water down after the steam has heated the room. Temperature is the most important element at the menstrual time, and the factor which should entirely dissolve any persisting fear. It was the cold water and the probable cold room that prolonged the fear of bathing at this time.

The woman of today not only can use a warm bathroom but she has hot water or water tempered as she wishes it. Many bathrooms have a special tub for her—the Sitz bath—but where this is missing she can get the same effect, though somewhat less conveniently, by using the ordinary tub.

During ten days of every month of a woman's menstrual life there is an increasing activity of the ovaries and the glandular structures of the uterus. A portion of this activity is in preparation for, and a portion of it is a part of, menstruation. This means increased blood in the structures involved, slower circulation through the parts, their size and weight, accompanied by feelings of tension and heaviness, varying from slight unconsciousness to aches or acute pain, as the case may be.

Behind the uterus lies a plexus of nerves, sometimes called the abdominal brain, which controls sensation and blood supply and connects up with the bladder, rectum, uterus, and appendages and even the external genitals. Any irritation to one or another of the pelvic organs supplied by this nerve counteracts on the entire group of organs. The uterus itself is in part a gland, its mucous lining being rich in glands. Here are also the terminations of minute blood spaces. It is also in part a muscle, the muscle bands lying in layers. In each layer the muscle bands are distributed in such a manner that the size, shape, and length of the layer can be absolutely changed by the kind of stimulus to which it reacts.

Just before a menstruation the uterus is very irritable and its muscular fibers act to their physiological limit. At the beginning of menstruation the glands act to a point where the secretions and the blood supply to the lining membrane is exhausted. Then the muscular activity again comes into prominence.

This should be the predominating factor during the intramenstrual period. The activity is as rhythmic as is breathing and should be as painless. Anything which affects its rhythm is disturbing to the other pelvic organs. For this reason any agent which will equalize the circulation or which will produce congestion in the periphery of the body and which will stimulate rhythm is indicated.

Nothing is so efficient as the Sitz bath to accomplish all purposes desired—cleanliness, loss of symptoms, and limitation of time involved. It is best taken when a woman can rest for a short time afterward. The bath should be begun at body temperature—that is, so that she feels practically no difference between the temperature of the body uncovered, the water, and the room. The water should cover the hips, come about to the navel, but never above the waist line. The temperature should then be increased to the point of tolerance from time to time until the skin of the abdomen is deeply reddened. Then the water should be allowed to run out and the cold to run in at the same time until comfortably cool. A general bath at this time—that is, the immersion of the whole body—should not be taken.

To summarize: During the days just preceding menstruation a woman should take a general warm tub bath. From the onset of menstruation and during its entire course the woman should take a hot Sitz bath several times a day. The greater her heaviness, discomfort, or pain the more frequently she should bathe.

TIRED SOMNAMBULISTS.

V. M. X.: "After reading your articles on sleep walking I feel that there is still something left unsaid. Apart from the emotional or hysteria theory, about which I am unqualified to speak, and the heavy supper explanation, which, perhaps, may be proven, there is also a very simple reason: i. e., excessive fatigue and overstimulation not only of the muscles but of the brain.

"I am an intermittent somnambulist myself, and far from emotional. In my own experiences I always found after going to bed much too tired, that some time within the first hour or two of sleep I got up and tried to go on working. For instance, I would find myself hunting for a certain pair of shoes, locking a door, carrying things about the room, and occasionally opening a window. Moreover, during an illness of several months I discontinued my sleep walking entirely, because, according to my theory, both mind and body were at rest.

"I also knew of a housemaid, probably overworked, who cleaned a room thoroughly in her sleep.

"Now, all these instances seem to be not unlike the wriggling of a dead snake's tail—an absurd fact, which means merely the mechanical reaction of certain muscles. And somnambulism often means the recurrent action of certain muscles and mental impulses in a person too tired to rest."

REPLY.

I cited at least one case somewhat similar to yours in the article on night terror—a boy who slept poorly because he overdid trying to keep up with an elder brother.

SCARLET FEVER RASH.

D. K. writes: "Is it possible for any one to have a mild case of scarlet fever and not have a sore throat? I have had a rash of the same description as the scarlet fever rash, but not a sore throat. I also have had the other symptoms of the fever before the rash broke out, but was not sick enough to go to bed. I have read the descriptions of all the rashes I can find, but the scarlet fever rash is the only one that describes what I had. It is the absence of the sore throat which puzzles me. Otherwise I am very healthy."

REPLY.

Yes. In many persons scarlet fever is a mild disease and causes no sore throat. On the other hand, there are rashes exactly similar to that of scarlet fever in appearance but not due to that disease. Watch for scaling. If you scale it will tend to confirm your suspicion.

STICK TO BRAN.

Mrs. F. W. K. writes: "For years I have been troubled with constipation, but for the last six weeks have been greatly helped by the use of bran. For breakfast and supper I eat a dish of cereal, oatmeal, cracked wheat, or cream of wheat, with good rich cream and one-half cup of bran mixed with it. Today I read the inclosed and thought to ask you if you think bran injurious."

REPLY.

Stick to bran.

CLIMATE OF LIMITED SERVICE.

Mrs. J. M. B. writes: "What climate would you advise for one that has catarrh? Do you think the climate around Jacksonville, Fla., would be favorable?"

REPLY.

Climate is of limited service in catarrh. Possibly the climate of the southwest has some virtues. The Jacksonville, Florida, climate is somewhat better than a colder one.

ASSESSMENT ON A 25 FOOT LOT.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you advise me what assessment ought to be levied on a twenty-five foot lot for the paving of the alley between Cornelia avenue, Addison and Halsted streets, and Reta avenue?
MRS. E. S.

As the estimate for the paving of the alley between Cornelia avenue, Addison street, Halsted street, and Reta avenue has not been prepared by the engineers, the exact cost of the improvement cannot be ascertained at the present time. The probable cost, however, for paving this alley with brick will amount to about $3,500, and if paved with bituminated concrete would amount to $2,450. An assessment on a twenty-five foot lot for brick pavement would approximate $80, and for a concrete alley $60.
M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Are electors chosen according to the population or according to the voting strength of the respective states? Also whether (in the south) the Negroes are allowed to vote and whether they are counted in the population, or are only three-fifths of the Negroes counted?
A. W. G.

Electors are proportionate to state representation in congress and the latter is dependent upon population. In the south the Negroes are counted as population, but in some states they are disfranchised by means of the "grandfather" and other clauses governing the right to vote.

PROPERTY HELD PRIOR TO MARRIAGE.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Does a husband have any claim upon real estate in possession of the wife before her marriage? Can she sell, mortgage, or otherwise dispose of such real estate and dispense the sum realized as she sees fit?
D. E. D.

2. Yes.
Dower attaches only to real estate held during the existence of the marriage relation.

IS ENTITLED TO POSSESSION.

Keokuk, Ia., Nov. 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.—A man died thirty years ago, leaving a wife and one daughter. His wife had two children by a former husband, but he never legally adopted by them. The wife has now been dead three or four years, but the old home is still recorded in the name of the father. What must be done in order to make legal possession of this home by the one daughter who is the only heir of her father? Are the two children by the first husband entitled to any share of the property, and, if so, how can they relinquish their claim? What would be the probable cost of getting a clear title to this home?
READER.

1. She is entitled to possession. If other parties resist she should employ an attorney to sue.
2. No.
3. You now have clear title. Some purchasers might insist on the probating of your father's estate in order that the record might show how title came to you and that creditors had been barred. We cannot estimate the cost of such proceedings.

ALCOHOL AND ITS JOLT.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial in this morning's TRIBUNE on "Demon Rum" and those which have recently preceded it on the same subject, while masterful in their way, nevertheless show an amazing indifference toward one of the latest developments in the world-wide anti-alcohol movement.

You argue that alcohol when it finds its way "into a body governed by a sane intellect merely heightens the colors of life and makes existence a more serene, acceptable experience," and you quote William James as remarking that people have "to be jolted out of the deadly humdrum of life by alcohol, if in no other way."

This defense of alcohol upon physiological and psychological grounds flatly contradicts the most authoritative teachings of modern science. A few years ago 800 distinguished German scientists, physicians and professors signed a statement saying that alcohol "causes disturbance in the brain's action and paralyzes the critical capacity, power of will, the ethical and esthetic sense and lowers self-control. For this reason one should realize that it is a poison and no longer to be classed with foods."

Alcohol may, indeed, as you say, "jolt people out of the deadly humdrum of life." It certainly does jolt men out of their jobs, out of official position, out of homes, out of health, out of hope, out of life. It jolts the doors of prisons and insane asylums open; it jolts the doors of opportunity shut. But if the signs of the times are not misleading the jolting is not all on one side and one of these days some distinguished editors are going to be jolted out of their indifference toward the most destructive agency in modern life.
W. T. HEWETSON.

A LESSON FOR US.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—You ousted Lorimer, but you could not oust Wilson with all your sarcasm and fault finding, cartoons included. This is a lesson for your big concern, which ought to be long remembered. It is good doctrine to live and let live. If Senator Lewis had got his bid in weeks before he did others might have protested against your vituperation. I am afraid your penny sheet is waning and I do with thousands give you the laugh.

MISS DOTY'S QUALIFICATION.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—When I read the announcement in THE TRIBUNE that shortly an article would appear in THE TRIBUNE giving the true conditions in Germany I was looking forward to its contents, as I was certain at last we would get a true report that had not passed through the hands of the German and English censors.

But after reading the first portion of the article I knew that no true conditions could possibly be reported on by the woman who made the trip, as she went there not familiar with the German language and the only word in her German vocabulary seems to be "verboten." How any big newspaper like the CHICAGO TRIBUNE could send a reporter to a foreign country to get the "true conditions" who is not familiar with the language of that particular country is beyond my comprehension. How could she make a true report when she depends entirely on interpreters?
C. SANDER, 1821 Berenice avenue.

MR. LINN DISSENTS.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I, as a reader of THE TRIBUNE for more than twenty years, ask a question which I think many thousands of people are asking themselves today? Why does THE TRIBUNE so constantly impugn the motives and intelligence of those from whom it differs?

Few doubt the sincerity of THE TRIBUNE editorial writers, of whom at least two have given convincing proof of the honesty of their beliefs. It is the more regrettable that THE TRIBUNE should regularly insist on the stupidity and cowardice of those to whom it is in opposition.

Take the most striking case—the series of "yellow" editorials run during the campaign, and the California editorial of Nov 9. Over and over you call 8,000,000 people poltroons and the inhabitants of a whole state boobs—what is this but a policy of chalking the fence? The small boy resorts to a similar device because he lacks ideas and because he is at heart a savage. THE TRIBUNE does not lack ideas. Is it, then, a savage at heart?

Burke declared that you cannot indict a nation. The essence of THE TRIBUNE's charge in its "yellow" editorials is that national acquiescence in President Wilson's foreign policy has its root in fear. Fear of what? Foreign nations? If we feared them would we now be guarding against them? Fear of war? No, but hatred of war, which is quite a different matter, and a feeling which THE TRIBUNE shares.

It differs from many of its readers about the best method of expressing hatred of war. Is that a reason for assuming that in others that hatred springs from timidity, while in THE TRIBUNE it is the outgrowth of common sense? I do not say that THE TRIBUNE is right or wrong in my judgment; I say that it is impugning motives.

Let me repeat: When THE TRIBUNE argues we are always [illegible] convinced; when it calls names we Chicagoans proud of our great paper feel ashamed.
JAMES WEBER LINN.

CALIFORNIA'S REAL PRODUCER.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial "Nobody Home In California" is certainly great. Every one enjoying it and talking about it. Their much advertised climate is just about as big a joke as their election returns. They have fifty-seven varieties, but can give them all to you in one. I have seen our eastern tourists in their elegant cars leave a city on a sunny day and before traveling twenty-five miles they come in contact with this variety and their elegant cars robbed of windshields, curtains and even paint, to the surprise and horror of the occupants who had heard so much of their wonderful climate.

Their fertile valleys and orange groves as producers fade into oblivion when compared with the American tourist, their real producer.

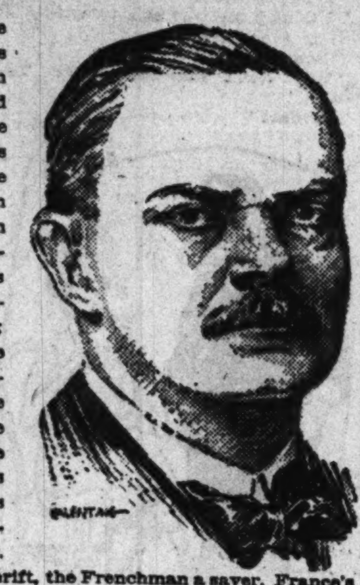
YESZCZE POLSKA

by Edward Goldbeck



WIBICKI'S heroic lightheartedness seems justified now by the unforeseen march of events. "Poland is not lost as yet!" he sang out in 1797. The central powers have given a solemn guarantee that Poland shall become an independent state when the war is over, and Grand Duke Constantine invited the Poles in 1914 to join Russia, as there was no hope for them but "in the open arms and on the maternal bosom of Great Russia." It is true that a Pole pointed out in a letter to the grand duke that up to then these arms had only choked Poland and that the maternal bosom had tendered only the poison of demoralization, but as a fact both belligerent parties have made promises now which they cannot break without becoming vile perjurers. Even the greatest empires cater to public opinion nowadays, and the Polish cause is the most popular cause in the world. Why it is so an anecdote will explain. Count Koscielski, the kaiser's temporary favorite, once gave a book about Poland to the old field marshal Moltke, and Moltke said after reading it that he had liked the following sentence best: "One does not love Poland as one loves Germany or France or England but as one does love Liberty!"

THE Polish nation appeals to our imagination; it is picturesque in the highest degree. The Pole is gifted, generous, brave, magnificent, credulous, lazy; in short, an aristocrat in his faults and virtues. And, queer enough, the more equalitarian and monotonous the world becomes, the more we like aristocracy and its lively colors. But a nation of that mental makeup was bound to succumb in the struggle for life, and as far back as in the sixteenth century the Jesuit Skarga, a glowing Polish patriot, prophesied Poland's fate in one of his sermons before the diet. Listen to his inspired words:

"A foreign enemy will come over you and he will profit of your internal discordance. Your dissensions will make you prisoners and all your liberties will be lost. Great territories which belonged to our crown will be torn off, and you, who reigned over other nations once, will be the laughing stock and the toy of your enemies. You are destroying what there is left of this old and widespread nation, the only free nation of all the Slavs, and you will be swallowed up by other nations which hate you."

All this came true. The Poles like to dwell on what they suffered, and surely there is no more tragical destiny to be found in modern history, but if they want to resurrect as a nation they must at first confess: "Mea culpa! Mea maxima culpa!" and acknowledge that the greed of the surrounding foes—Russia, Prussia, and Austria—would have been impotent had not the individualistic conception of the state—i. e.: base selfishness—previously demoralized the nation to the core. In fact, there was no Polish nation, because there was no middle class.

Poland was a democracy of nobles, each of whom could stop the whole governmental machinery by opposing his liberum veto to any decree of the diet. Below them, separated by a social abyss, there were serfs only, and here, in the thoughtless cruelty and criminal neglect which the masters showed them, is the dark side of this superficially brilliant civilization of a minority. Liberty was a privilege and this privilege was insisted upon to the last consequences. There was method in this madness, but an insane condition like this could not last. So, if Garczynski and Mickiewicz and especially the mystic Towianski compare the Polish nation to Christ and call it the crucified, the comparison is blasphemous, for the Poles themselves were guilty and the punishment dealt out to them was not entirely undeserved.

Of course, the three powers were far from holding such harshly benevolent pedagogical views; they simply trampled down a weaker nation which had not been clever enough to see that its geographical position demanded a spirit of sacrifice and unity. When they saw it it was, alas! too late. On May 3, 1791—nineteen years after the first division of Poland—the diet and the king accepted a constitution which made the royal dignity hereditary, provided responsible ministers, and abolished the unrestricted veto. Maybe Poland would have been able to overcome its deep rooted vices if then at least the powers had left it alone, but repentance limped behind evolution and Poland's martyrdom began.

THE nation never ceased to hope. Its optimism has been admirable. It is true that it was fostered and supported by occasional rays of light. Again and again the international situation seemed favorable. Napoleon I. exploited the Poles unscrupulously, but they believed in him a long time and did not desert him in the moment of need. When he hurried back from Russia in a sleigh, a lonely and disappointed man, a hundred Polish lanciers volunteered to accompany him from Smorgoni. The cold was terrific, they parted at night, and the next morning only thirty-six of them were left alive. After the congress of Vienna a republic of Cracow and a kingdom of Poland were founded, but both creations proved unable to live. The republic of Cracow became the center of a reckless all-Polish propaganda and the kingdom of Poland was changed into a Russian province. Anyhow, the fact that the experiment was tried proved the bad conscience of the powers assembled at Vienna in 1815.

Since those days the Poles have changed a good deal. They have become less brilliant, less aristocratic, less gullible; they have learned to work. A solid, responsible middle class has come into life. The economic development of the German Poles has been so intense and successful that the Prussians in their eastern provinces have felt themselves to be on the defensive and have tried to push the ever advancing adversary back by exceptional laws. The same happened in Russia. The vitality of the Poles overcame every handicap, and now it seems as if they were going to reap the reward of their patriotic perseverance, as if they were going to be liberated from the Russian knout and the iron rule of the German bureaucracy.

This iron rule has been for their good; the Poles know by now what efficient administration means, and every well wisher of this hard stricken nation must hope that they will adopt a good deal of German ideas as a ballast to their light winged nature. If they should refuse to do so in ill advised antipathy and superciliousness, then their independence will not last long. Their future is still fraught with dangers. They certainly are a noble nation. Poland gave a refuge in medieval times to the Jews; Joan Sobieski liberated Vienna from the Turks: these two deeds show a wonderfully unprejudiced and chivalrous character, but no nation can exist without self-discipline, and the question is whether the Poles have acquired it in a century of subjugation. What they will need in the future is commonplace and useful virtues.

One of their greatest poets, Julius Slowacki, has given the following definition of God: "I see that he is not the God of the worms or of crouching animals. He likes the flight of giant birds and gives the reins to galloping horses. He is the fiery feather on proud helmets." Nobody but a Pole could have made this comparison, not even the Frenchman, fond as he is of the "panache." It shows that the resemblance with the Frenchman which people so often emphasize is nonexistent. The Pole is romantic, the Frenchman rationalistic; the Pole is a poet, the Frenchman's element is prose. The Pole speaks all the languages, the Frenchman only his own. The Pole needs ballast, the Frenchman is terre-a-terre. The Pole is a spendthrift, the Frenchman a saver. France's sympathies for Poland have been very effusive . . . in words, but the only thing the common Frenchman knows of the Poles is contained in the saying, "Soul comme un Polonais" (Drunk as a Pole). The Poles should pray every night: "Make us humdrum, O Lord!"

THE world recognizes that the attempt to destroy a nation of twenty million people is futile. It may be called criminal, but I am not dealing with moral questions; for the political student it is enough to know that it is futile. But the resurrection is immensely difficult, and the main difficulty lies in the fact that the Polish nation in Russia, Prussia, and Austria feels itself to be an inseparable unity. It will not be satisfied before it is united within the bounds of one state. In other words, the central empires intend to create a state which cannot but feel unfinished and incomplete.

From the first moment there will be a Polonia irredenta, an unredeemed Poland, in Austria and Prussia. Is it very probable that Austria will give up Galicia, the fourth part of Austria proper, with its nine million inhabitants? Three of these millions are Ruthenians, who hate the Poles bitterly and would decline most emphatically to be incorporated in the resurrected Poland.

Bismarck thought it might be possible; let us hear what he says about the matter: "Galicia is more loosely added to the Austrian monarchy than Posen and western Prussia to the Prussian. The Austrian province, open toward the east, is artificially glued on outside of the frontier wall of the Carpathians, and Austria could live just as well without it if it would get some compensation in the Danube basin for the five or six millions of Poles and Ruthenians. During the Crimean war and in 1863 ideas like that have been considered officially and unofficially. One thought of getting Roumanians and southern Slavs in change of Galicia and of reëstablishing Poland under an Austrian grand duke. But the old Prussian provinces are separated by no natural frontier from Posen and western Prussia, and it is impossible to give up the latter. Therefore the issue of Poland's future is particularly difficult."

GERMANY cannot give Posen and western Prussia to a new Polish monarchy, because this monarchy would then reach to the doors of Berlin. There would be no harm in such a neighborhood, as Poland will be grateful to the power that liberated it. That sounds as sweet as marshmallow, but there is no gratitude in international life. Russia liberated Bulgaria—the motives are irrelevant—and Bulgaria has turned against it. If Austria should renounce Galicia and Germany should keep its so-called Polish territories the Poles would concentrate their patriotic fury on Germany. The German or Austrian prince who would be at the head of the state could never restrain them, as to become popular and trustworthy these monarchs have to espouse the national cause unqualifiedly. The resolution of the Polish massmeeting in Chicago showed the trend of these tendencies. It speaks of the final reunion of Galicia with the parent Poland and of the "reunion of our brethren of Posen and Silesia with the rest of Poland." Let us hope for Poland's sake that on the other side of the ocean people will not indulge in or at least will not utter such Utopian hopes. If the Poles need anything at this moment it is cool blooded moderation and that grasp of reality in which they have always been lacking.

The idea that resurrected Poland should be a buffer state between the barbaric, half oriental Russia and the civilized west is attractive at the first glance, but it does not stand closer examination. Poland without Galicia and the Prussian dominions would be much too weak for such a purpose; it would be nothing but a Belgium of the east, and very soon the same game would begin. It is the inevitable game of a weak nation edged in between strong and dangerous neighbors.

Political constellations change quickly. The German-Austrian alliance may come to an end and Poland would then lean toward Austria, a Catholic state, which has treated the Poles very liberally. The monarch will probably be a Bavarian or a Saxonian prince, and both dynasties are gravitating toward Hapsburg. So Poland's future attitude is an unknown factor from the German point of view.

FOR the moment, of course, the German-Austrian proclamation strengthens their cause materially and morally. It is the first step which can be called constructive policy by kind hearted people, it will create a Polish army, it clears the atmosphere, pleases the neutrals, and makes an arrangement with Belgium possible. England's claim to stand up for the smaller nations is effectively ironized.

But the difficulties and dangers of the arrangement are patent. Russia remains as strong as before, and the peace on this basis will be nothing but a truce. Russia will fight again for her lost provinces. The German chancellor emphasizes his willingness to support a peace movement, and it is laudable that he should speak this language, because it will be the fashion in the next decade, and every one who refuses to adopt its dictionary will be called a barbarian. We are out for Wilsonism all over the world. The cause of "preparedness" will be unpopular, but so much the more it is necessary to state that neither the principle of nationalization nor the principle of internationalization will abolish war and that the first necessity in a resurrected Poland would be universal military service.

Otherwise this resurrection will not be more than a mirage, and instead of "Yeszcze Polska" the Poles will have to sing again the melancholy hymn of Ujejski, "Z dymem Pozarow." The lesson is the same for all nations: Let us work for justice wherever we can, but let us believe in nothing but our own strength, not in arbitration treaties, not in alliances, not in the power of persuasion, and above all, not in a sudden change of the human heart.

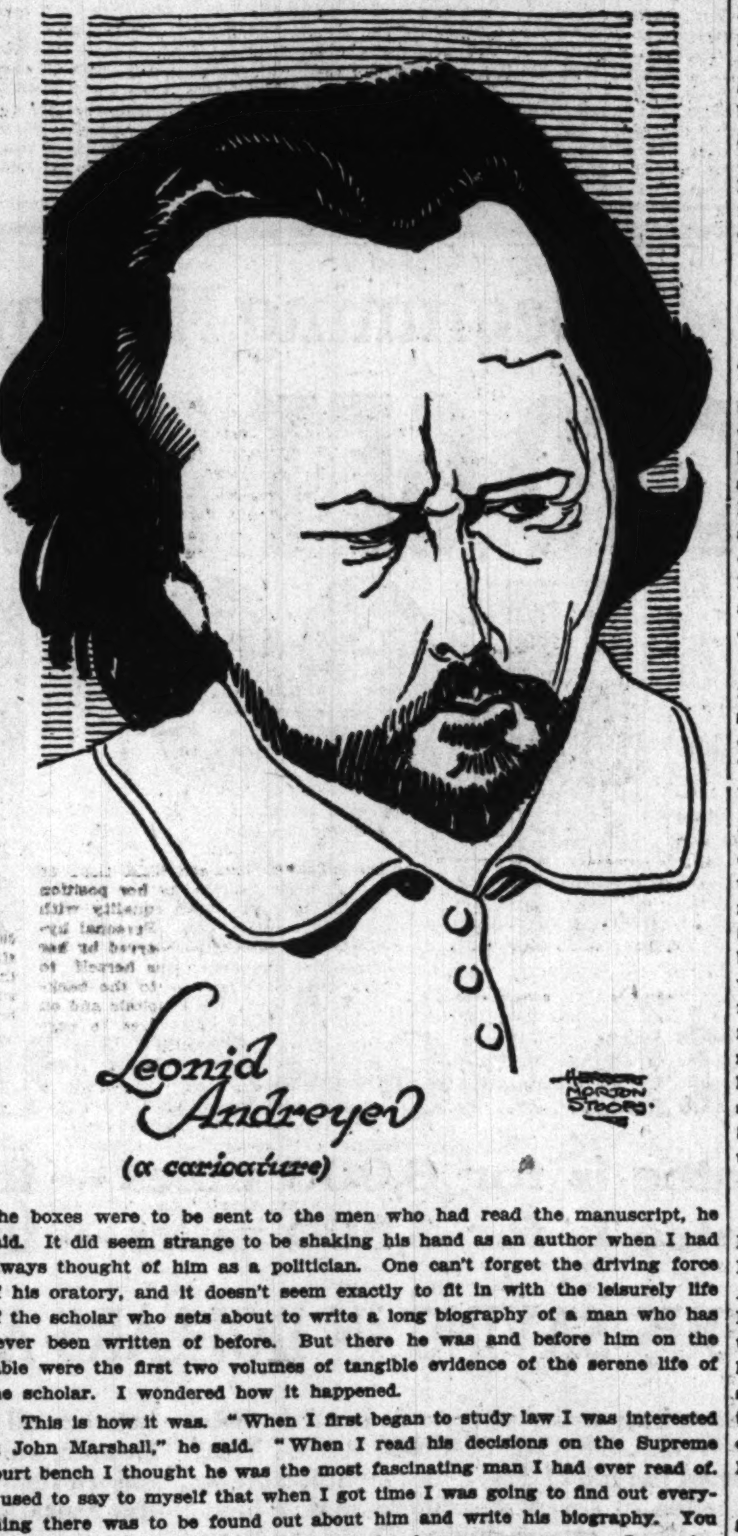
BOSTON welcomed me with its most doleful mists and icy fogs and with the same shake of the head that answered my query in New York for authors. "There aren't many in the city now. Most of them live in the country. You go up along the coast in the summer and you'll find plenty of them." November isn't summer, though, and I couldn't go up along the coast anyway, and I was determined that Boston should produce something more interesting to tell you of than a rainy snow and bits of news that the publishers gave me.

So, in spite of the fact that Amy Lowell is very ill and Margaret Deland is seeing no one on account of the serious illness in her family, I did find representative authors in Boston, four of them, the author of the most important biography on the Houghton, Mifflin list this season, the author of delightful essays which are reminiscent of the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, a fiction writer of popular ways, and a co-author of a fascinating travel book.

Albert J. Beveridge was slipping notes of gratitude into the boxed volumes of his "The Life of John Marshall" when I was presented to him.



Leonid Andreyev
(a caricature)

The boxes were to be sent to the men who had read the manuscript, he said. It did seem strange to be shaking his hand as an author when I had always thought of him as a politician. One can't forget the driving force of his oratory, and it doesn't seem exactly to fit in with the leisurely life of the scholar who sets about to write a long biography of a man who has never been written of before. But there he was and before him on the table were the first two volumes of tangible evidence of the serene life of the scholar. I wondered how it happened.

This is how it was. "When I first began to study law I was interested in John Marshall," he said. "When I read his decisions on the Supreme court bench I thought he was the most fascinating man I had ever read of. I used to say to myself that when I got time I was going to find out everything there was to be found out about him and write his biography. You know how hard it is to do leisurely work when you are young. I was increasingly busy and I had to let it go. But I never forgot about it. And when I left political life I started in with the work of collecting the material for the life. Unlike any of the other political giants of his time, Marshall has never been written about, so that I had to collect all of the data first hand, had to comb the country for letters and anecdotes about him. See this frontispiece? It is a reproduction of a miniature of Marshall when he was young. I found it in a southern town in the possession of one of his obscure descendants. The direct family has not even seen it yet."

There are two volumes ready now, and there will be another or perhaps two more. Mr. Beveridge is working upon the rest of the material now. They are complete in themselves, the story of Marshall's life to the time of his induction into the Supreme court. The only reason why they will not rival the "Life of John Hay," which was the most popular biography of the year, is, some one said, because they cost $8.

Samuel McCord Crothers' last volume is "The Joys of an Absentee Landlord and Other Essays," as charming and gentle as all of the other books which have come from his pen. I went out to see him at Cambridge, where he lives and where he is a minister. We sat in front of his blazing fire and the glow from the flames lighted up his fine old face. I remembered hearing him lecture at Mandel hall when I was at the university. "Yes, I get out to Chicago two or three times a year," he said, "although I haven't any engagements at the university this year." His titles are such alluring ones—"On Protective Coloring in Education," for instance—that I wanted to know how he happened upon them. "I don't know," he modestly said. "I have an idea, and I write my essay and then it must be called something."

"Do you have literary office hours?" I asked him. "No, I think that one cannot write essays that way. They must be spontaneous. I write when I have something to say; and when I do not, I don't write. I am not working on anything now, because I haven't anything that must be said. When I do start I often write for a long time without stopping, but I never write when I don't sincerely want to."

The next time you read one of his essays remember that and you'll realize why they are so full of charm which before now has seemed inconsistent with the hurry-bustle of modern life.

Frederick Orin Bartlett, author of "The Wall Street Girl," was the third author I found in Boston. He, too, lives in Cambridge, but there's nothing leisurely about the way he works. "I don't suppose any one else works the way I do. I get up at 4 o'clock every morning, make some coffee and eat a sandwich, and then I start to work and I work until 7. I have my stuff all thought out and all I do is write for those few hours. I used to be a newspaper man, you know, and so I write directly on the typewriter. What sort of things did I do? Mostly Sunday stories, the kind that fill the Sunday supplement. I wrote three and four of them every week until I got so sick of it that I quit the whole thing. I'd written a few short stories and I thought I'd rather take a chance on starving than going crazy doing Sunday thrillers. That was about ten years ago. I've been writing fiction ever since. I do from 1,000 to 1,500 words every day and then I revise. It sounds very like not working at all, when I have my entire day free to fish or shoot or walk or do anything but work, but in reality I'm always getting copy, and besides I find in the long run that I do as much work as the ones who spend a full working day at it every day. I never miss a day, Sunday morning as well as every other morning. I'm up at daybreak. It's a fine system for me."

One of the most interesting things which I saw in Boston was some of the material which went into "The Last Voyage of the Karluk" (Small, Maynard), by Robert A. Bartlett and Ralph T. Hale. Mr. Bartlett wasn't in Boston, but I talked to Mr. Hale, who did the writing of the story. The story itself is one which keeps you breathlessly interested, as true tales of exploring expeditions are sure to do. Robert Bartlett was captain of the Karluk, the principal boat of the Stefansson exploration which came to such a tragic end. He told the story to Ralph Hale, who recorded it.

Among the things which Mr. Hale showed me was the government map which Capt. Bartlett carried inside his shirt during the long, hope-deadening search for a way home after the wreck of the Karluk. There was also a map which one of the Indian guides of the Cook party drew for him to show him, when he was with Capt. Peary on their dash to the pole, just how far the Cook party had really gone. Capt. Bartlett had filled in, under the Indian's direction, caches, places where water was to be had, and stations where there were one or two huts. It was the word of this Indian that convinced Bartlett that Cook had not reached the pole.

The most interesting thing of all was a copy of the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," much frayed, repaired with adhesive tape, which Capt. Bartlett has carried with him for fifteen years. It was given to him in 1901 when he started off on a hunting trip to the arctic, and he has never been parted from it. It was his companion when he went with Peary in 1905-6 when they did not reach the pole, in the Peary expedition of 1908-9 when they did reach the pole, on the trip in 1910 when he went with Paul Rainey and Harry Payne Whitney to the arctic, when they brought back Silver King, the great polar bear, which is the pride of the Bronx park zoo, on the Stefansson trip of 1913-14 when the Karluk was wrecked, on various sealing trips since then, and on the famous journey to Rome and London when they received their medals for the discovery of the pole.

Another collection of short stories by Leonid Andreyev has been published by Alfred A. Knopf. The translation was made by Herman Bernstein, the authorized translator of Andreyev in this country, and the title of the volume is "The Crushed Flower," for one of the tales in it.

Margaret Sherwood, a professor at Wellesley, has written "The Worn Doorstep" (Little-Brown), which seems to be receiving the same cordial welcome that Mildred Aldrich's "The Hilltop on the Marne" (Houghton-Mifflin) received last season. It is a war book of the same gentle charm. The royalties from the sale of the book, Miss Sherwood has announced, she will give to the war relief fund of the allies.

On Oct. 28 at Saranac Lake, N. Y., a permanent American memorial to Robert Louis Stevenson was established when the Stevenson cottage and the exhibit of Stevensoniana was officially opened to the public. In this cottage Stevenson lived while he was under the care of Dr. Trudeau during the winter of 1887 and 1888. He called it "a hat box on the hill." It was here that he wrote "The Master of Ballantrae." While I was in Cambridge I went to see the famous Stevenson room in the Widener library at Harvard. First editions of all of his things are there. The librarian opened a little leather box and showed me a set of proof sheets which Stevenson had inscribed to a friend which she said would bring $20,000 at any auction. The small room's value is a round million, she said. They were the statistics which she gave me, unsolicited, hence I pass them on.

Arnold Bennett, W. L. George, William J. Locke, E. Temple Thurston, Hugh Walpole, H. G. Wells, and Louis Wilkinson are the English authors who signed the protest against the suppression of Theodore Dreiser's "The 'Genius'" (John Lane).

Philip Curtiss is spending his honeymoon, long deferred, in Norfolk, Conn. He was sent to the border with his regiment only a few days after his marriage. After the mustering out of the Connecticut regiment in which he was a captain he resigned his post, regretfully, he says. "Between Two Worlds" (Harper's), his latest novel, was published while he was on military duty.

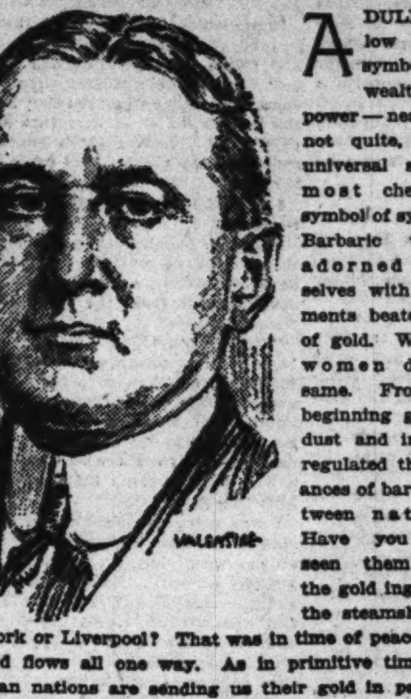
The new Robert Service book, "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man," is published in this country by Barse & Hopkins. I mistakenly said not long ago that the American publication has not yet been arranged for. Also I called his popular book of poems "Songs of a Sourdough," which title the publishers assure me has never been used in this country. "The Spell of the Yukon," it has always been called. I read it as "Songs of a Sourdough" and shall always think of it as that, but here is my official apology for the misstatement since it has been brought to my notice.

GOLD

by Robert Herrick



A DULL yellow metal, symbol of wealth and power—nearly, if not quite, man's universal symbol, most cherished, symbol of symbols. Barbaric women adorned themselves with ornaments beaten out of gold. Western women do the same. From the beginning gold in dust and in bars regulated the balances of barter between nations. Have you ever seen them drop the gold ingots off the steamships at New York or Liverpool? That was in time of peace: now the gold flows all one way. As in primitive times the European nations are sending us their gold in payment for what they want more than gold—wheat and arms.

It was different two years ago. Then we owed Europe gold for our borrowings. Europe wanted it back in a hurry, and our bankers were nervous lest we could not pay out at once, over the counter, all the gold we owed in Europe without creating a dire panic. But the shrewder ones among them realized that if this war business were to continue for any length of time, this gold would come back, and more too. And so it has happened! We have gold daily by the ten millions of dollars. We are surfeited with gold. We have too much of it already, and the end of the stream is not yet in sight. Our bankers are becoming disturbed.

AT the beginning we were prudent, canny: we would be paid at once, on the nail, with gold, the only sure form of money. And we got it. Europe had to pay it. She still has considerable hordes of gold to draw upon. It seems likely that before the war ends we shall get most of these gold hordes in payment for bread and munitions. Then what? Already there are signs of what may happen when Europe has exhausted her gold hordes to pay her debts to us. The allies may agree to do without gold. They can easily. They can continue to pay us our balances with what gold they have left—for they hope after the war not to have balances against them. Not large ones. They can do their own business without the aid of gold.

That would be a profound revolution, indeed, as an indirect result of the great war—the demonetization of gold. To break the bonds of gold, that ancient fetish of the human race, would be an accomplishment, indeed. There is an inherent absurdity in basing values on the scarcity or abundance of a commodity that has few intrinsic uses to human beings. On a little pile of pale yellow metal, neither especially beautiful nor useful, mankind has reared a stupendous structure of credit, of confidence, of values, of civilization. It is time to base all these things on some less erratic and fictitious substance.

MEANWHILE should Europe conclude to substitute some other symbol for gold, what should we do with our immense accumulations of the yellow metal? What does anybody do who "holds the bag"? At first we should feel, no doubt, extremely proud and rich, having most of the earth's treasure. But very soon we should begin to realize that it is no longer a treasure, but what we have been told Sundays that gold was "dross"—a dull, pale, rather useless substance less serviceable than so much copper.

Before this day happens the artificial increase in values, known as inflation, through which we are already passing, will have come to an end. Prices will tumble. The bubble of gold-blown prosperity will be pricked. For it is inconceivable that we alone, rich as we should be in gold, could maintain respect for the metal in the world. What nobody wants but ourselves quickly comes to have no value even to ourselves.

THERE is a fable of certain greedy giants demanding gold for ransom of a fair woman and being overwhelmed by the weight of metal thrown at them.

So in a way comes our fate. Europe is ransoming its spirit, and buys with her gold the precious means of accomplishing the necessary task. We sell, at a price, what Europe needs, and we take our pay in gold, which might in time crush us with its useless weight. Today we prize the yellow slips of paper in our pocketbooks, the ten, twenty, fifty, one hundred dollar gold certificates. They beam at us warmly, reflecting the gleam of the metal buried somewhere in a dark vault to redeem them. These certificates are paper, after all, and may at any time at the will of a considerable element of mankind become what they really are, paper. We could get the gold in the vault for the certificates, but we should not want it.

For gold is neither useful, even to fill teeth, these days, nor is it very lovely. A gold plate has no beauty of its own, nor a gold chain. Still less a gold ingot or gold bar. A new Wagner should write the epic of the demonetization of gold—humanity's apostasy before the yellow god, after unnumbered generations of service. When we no longer think in terms of gold, love and strive in terms of gold, we may insensibly become less material in our thoughts, our loves, and our strivings. When no longer do we use a barbarian's ornament as the standard of all our values, we may begin to question more closely the reality of those values themselves.

We should not forget to make a huge monument out of our gold horde, surmount it by a shining statue of Bryan, and place it beside the Potomac where its eyes might rest forever upon the White House.

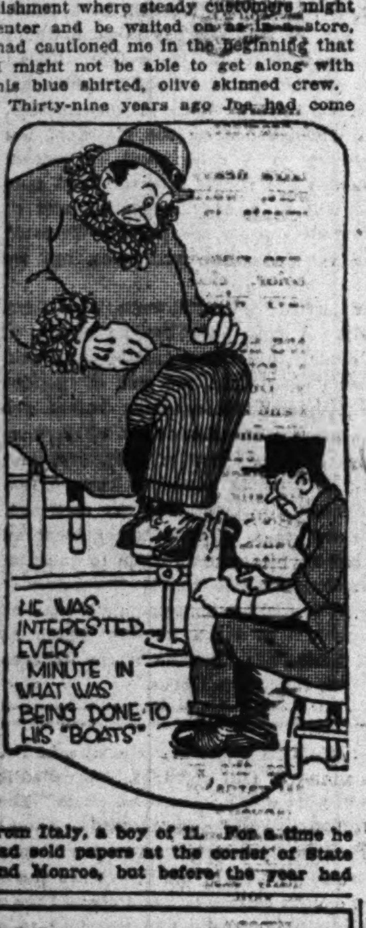
"My Ancient Rome Hunch Was All Wrong" Says

ONLY FRED SWEET

NONE of "The Original Joe's" customers knew what Pete and Tony were talking about. The customers, reading newspapers or looking at themselves in the mirror or intently overseeing the job being done on their shoes, seemed wholly uninterested in the topic of Pete and Tony's conversation. But I couldn't help but be interested because Pete was rubbing polish on a shoe at my right and Tony was playing a tune with a rag at my left.

I was directly in line of their cross fire, and I was mighty glad that the owner of the shoe I was struggling with was reading a newspaper instead of belonging to the overseer type. Not only was I handicapped because everything was new to me about the work, but I couldn't help but imagine Pete and Tony must be talking in their native tongue about me. Twice, in my excitement, I wabbled the foot before me completely off its rest.

"The Original Joe," he who had first conceived the idea of making shoe shining a regular business with an establishment where steady customers might enter and be waited on as in a store, had cautioned me in the beginning that I might not be able to get along with his blue shirted, olive skinned crew.



HE WAS INTERESTED EVERY MINUTE IN WHAT WAS BEING DONE TO HIS "BOATS"

Thirty-nine years ago Joe had come from Italy, a boy of 11. For a time he had sold papers at the corner of State and Monroe, but before the year had passed he had started a two chair shining stand. Great bankers, who had had him shine their shoes in those days, still come to his busy place at 30 west Monroe. At least 300 other such places have come into being in the loop. If they aren't Italian places, they are Greek places. If there is but one foot rest for the customer, it is an Italian place; if a rest for each foot, it is a Greek place. And Joe's crew of ten had all come from Italy, too; the same part of Italy where he had spent his early boyhood—around Naples.

Tony and Pete had not been over from Naples long. It was foolish to think they were talking about me, I decided. Hunting around among the paraphernalia for a box of paste I glanced over to see Pete in the act of turning up the bottom of a new customer's trousers. He leaned over in front of me and began jabbering afresh to Tony. Now I figured I had caught the drift of the conversation.

Somehow I could see Pete beside the beautiful Bay of Naples that within its curving arms holds the history and the legends of two thousand years. It was noon out on Monroe street. Chicagoans were rushing to and from lunch. You could hear the whistle of a traffic policeman on the corner. All we could see in front of us all day was shoes, shoes, shoes—"black shoes, 5 cents; tan shoes, 10 cents; Sundays and holidays, all shoe 10 cent." But evidently Pete was seeing something besides shoes. Apparently he could see the soft waves steal into the Bay of Naples from the outer sea, kiss the beach with a murmur of delight and retire. He was thinking no doubt about the resplendent barges of his ancestors that had once adorned that sea. Ah, the illustrious Romans who had once made their homes on that shore! Back there the air was tremulous with classic memories. Back there—

"Next foot," Pete was trying to say in English, and he was giving his customer's shoe a tap with his polish bottle in order to attract attention.

I was shining away as best I could, but I had come to realize that the Original Joe was right in his contention that before working in a first class place like his own one should serve an apprenticeship in some outlying district. According to Joe there were over a thousand Greek and Italian bootblacks in Chicago and if I could not attend to at least a hundred patrons a day there was little chance for me to succeed in the game. According to Joe each shoe called for individual treatment.

Finally I concluded that the shoes I was working on were as good as I could make them and I pulled back my stool to give my newspaper reading client a hint that it was time for him to let some one else take his place in the chair. The bird climbed down from the marble stand, straightened out his pant leg, adjusted the collar of his overcoat, and Joe began clinking on the cash register. I did everything in my power to try to brush an extra nickel out of the departing guest with one of the long whisk brooms, but he seemed unusually interested in something that demanded his attention up the street.

When I got back to my stool there was a charming young woman in the chair. I was relieved to note that she became immediately absorbed in studying her reflection in the mirror opposite because it gave further opportunity for me, a rank amateur, to continue unbothered in my freshman course at "shining 'em up." Joe said that about 10 per cent of his customers belonged to the fair sex so I guess there was no particular reason for Pete and Tony to get unduly excited over what had just entered the place; I tried to appear unconcerned myself. Pete and Tony had both taken on new customers, also—they could finish a job in ten minutes—and they had continued with their animated repartee.

No longer did I feel any doubt as to the nature of the subject which the two were discussing. What could be more natural than that they should be harking back to the scenes which they had once known? It was no trouble at all for me to picture Pete and Tony in a far different environment than that of 30 West Monroe. I could see them among the vineyards and gardens which still adorn the slopes of Naples as in the time of Horace. Why, Tony and Pete had come from the very paths that the old Roman emperors had trod.

Pete had possibly lived near Nisida, where Cicero and Brutus parted from each other, never to meet again; one to reutrn to Rome to perish by the emissaries of Mark Antony, the other to join Castus. Pete and Tony might even be descendants of Vergil, whose "Æneid" has outlived so many centuries.

It peeved them no doubt to think that instead of wearing shining white robes and riding in chariots as had their ancestors, they were shining shoes in Chicago. Belonging to a race that had been the world's leader in literature and art, they were polishing black shoes for 5 cents and tan shoes for 10 cents all day long.

I noticed that Tony seemed excited at times and that Pete's black eyes were constantly flashing as he talked. Ah, those days of ancient Pompeii—those days of that classic grandeur before Vesuvius hid it from the sight of man! Those days——

"The Original Joe" had come along back of us to return a pair of shoelaces to the rack. "Looks to me like it was going to rain," commented Joe. "You know what a rainy day means—poor business on the day it rains and the next day everybody's shoes so dirty it takes a long time to clean them. Rainy day kills two days."

I was going to ask what in the shoe shining business had gone up "because of the war," but I refrained. I kept steadily at work. I was ready for the young woman's left shoe, but I didn't feel like hitting her on the right foot with the polish bottle, because the leather of her shoe was so thin, so I coughed two or three times, and she finally ceased adjusting her veil, glanced down, and placed her other foot on the rest.

At this juncture the fat man in Tony's chair began to make complaints on the way Tony was conducting his operations. If you don't think that people can be cranks about getting their shoes shined, just work in one of these places yourself for a day. The fat man was neither a paper reader nor an admirer of himself in the glass; while he got his shoes shined he inspected the job. He was interested every minute in what was being done to his "boats." He was bawling Tony out. Think of it—Tony, whose relations centuries back had lived in homes whose courtyards were surrounded by graceful columns, homes whose walls were peopled with fair forms in fresco, homes in which gilded couches were in part concealed by draperies from Damascus!

I DID EVERY-THING IN MY POWER TO TRY TO BRUSH AN EXTRA NICKEL OUT OF THE DEPARTING GUEST.

But Tony didn't sass the fat man back. He continued to shine away in a manner that showed he strove to please and pretty soon he started to converse again with Pete. The conversation continued in a tongue that neither the young woman nor the fat man nor myself could understand. I guess the fat man and the young woman didn't care what Tony and Pete were talking about. As for myself I felt sure I knew. They must surely be going over and over the grandeur of the mighty past which their race had known. The din of Monroe street might creep into the place where Tony and Pete were shining shoes, but their spirits I felt certain were out in the courts that opened to the sky and where sweet voiced fountains murmured day and night.

When the cranky fat man and the young woman had gone their way there was a slight lull of business in our corner of the shop and the opportunity was given me to ask of Tony and Pete what they had been discussing so enthusiastically.

"Tony," I says, "I've heard you fellows talk so excitedly back and forth all morning and I can appreciate how traditions and memories must affect you. I know that though you are here shining shoes, a can of polish in one hand and an old rag in the other, your thoughts must naturally be with the home folks of the illustrious bygone. Undoubtedly it is no trouble for you to trace your ancestry back perhaps to Dante, one of the three greatest epic poets of the world. You are thinking of Boccaccio, who sang of love, and of Petrarch, composer of those unrivaled sonnets. Ah, yes, and there was Michiavelli, the statesman; Galileo, the astronomer; Brunelleschi, the architect; Andrea del Sarto and Dolci, the painters; Cellini and Ghiberti, the sculptors—yes, and greatest of them all, Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo. Naturally your minds revert to these proud leaders of the world in art and culture from whom you are descendants. I sympathize with you fully in how you must feel toward modern prosaic America. I——"

"Wake up, the chairs are full again," interrupted "The Original Joe." "I'll tell you what Tony and Pete have been talking about. It's always that way 'the morning after.' I tell 'em they better save their money even if they are making better than $60 a month, tips and all. I'll tell you what they've been talking so excited about all morning. They're always talking about what swell times they have at those west side hall dances."

LINES TO A MOVIE VAMPIRE.

(Written by request—ours.)

I sing today the Vampire in the Movie.
I sing of Sheeza Beara—and she is—
Whose architecture Doric
Is a clutter of caloric
As she vamps it in her transcalescent biz.
We love to see her zaa a bit in Zaza,
She writhes, she lures, she palpitates, she quivahs!
You ask me has she got the props? She hasa!
She agitates our very lights and livahs!
Them eyes of hern,
Oh how they burn,
Oh how they sparkle, snap, and yearn!
Them liquid coives,
Oh how they swoives,
It's pretty doggone hard on noives....
She starts....she moves....she seems to feel
The thrill of life along her keel....
A rag, a bone, and a hank o' hair?
What do I care?
She's a bear! She's a bear! She's a bear!
There!
I sing today the Vampire in the Movie
(Them eyes of hern!)
I tell you she's a regular Vesuvy
(Oh how they burn!)
Her agile architecture is conducive to conjecture
(Them sneaky coives!)
Oh lamp this lyric lecture 'fore her luscious lure has wrecked your Throbbing noives!
On yon Paphian piazza you just ought to see her zaza,
You just ought to see her, yama!
Has she got the props? Cazama!
But she hasa!

PUBLIC TO GET EXTRA GUARANTEE OF

1500 MILES

On All Makes of Tires

With No Advance in Price

If old guarantee is for 6,000 miles --- the new guarantee gives you 7,500 miles
If old guarantee is for 3,500 miles --- the new guarantee gives you 5,000 miles

A TREMENDOUS SAVING IN DOLLARS AND CENTS TO THE MOTOR USING PUBLIC

HERETOFORE tires have been called upon to do not only their OWN work but the WORK OF THE SPRINGS ALSO. This, naturally, has shortened the life of tires. Tire manufacturers, therefore, have been compelled to accept conditions as they have found them and limit their mileage responsibility. There has been more mileage in the tires, but nobody has known how to get it out of them.

Fred Allen has found a way to get that mileage out of tires. Records of tests made by manufacturers and car owners show that the insertion of an anti-frictional, self-lubricating bronze bearing between all the leaves of all the springs, from end to end, gives free, smooth, uninterrupted spring action. This enables the springs to absorb their proportion of the road shocks, and makes possible this sensational tire guarantee.

Therefore the Fred Allen Automobile Supply Company will guarantee 1500 more miles for any standard tire than the manufacturer will guarantee, provided the tires are purchased at their store, 1610 Michigan Avenue, and the springs of your car are equipped with Dann Insert. The guarantee will be written and the Fred Allen Automobile Supply Co. will stand squarely behind it.

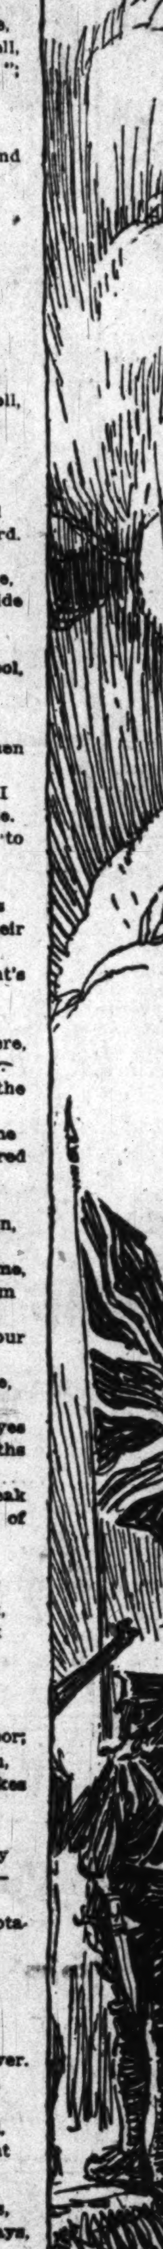
THE EVERLASTING TERROR to BOBBY

By J. R. Ackerley



For fourteen years since I began
I learnt to be a gentleman,
I learnt that two and two made four
And all the other college lore,
That all that's good and right and fit
Was copied in the Holy Writ,
That rape was wrong and murder worse
Than stealing money from a purse,
That if your neighbor caused you pain
You turned the other cheek again,
And vaguely did I learn the rhyme,
"O, give us peace, Lord, in our time,
And grant us Peace in Heaven as well,
And save our souls from fire in Hell";
So since the day that I began
I learnt to be a gentleman.

But when I'd turned nineteen and more
I took my righteousness to War.
The one thing that I can't recall
Is why I went to war at all;
I wasn't brave, nor coward quite,
But still I went, and I was right.

But now I'm nearly twenty-two
And hale as any one of you;
I've killed more men than I can tell
And been through many forms of Hell,
And now I come to think of it
They tell you in the Holy Writ
That Hell's a place of misery
Where Laughter stands in pillory
And Vice and Hunger walk abroad
And breed contagion 'gainst the Lord.
Well, p'r'aps it is, but all the same,
It heals the halt, the blind, the lame,
It takes and tramples down your pride
And sin and vainness fall beside,
It turns you out a better fool
Than you were taught to be at school,
And, what the Bible does not tell,
It gives you gentleness as well.

O, God! I've heard the screams of men
In suffering beyond our ken,
And shuddered at the thought that I
Might scream as well if I should die.
I've seen them crushed or torn to bits—
O, iron tears you where it hits!
And when the flag of Dawn unfurls
They cry—not God's name, but their girls',
Whose shades, perhaps, like Night's cool breath,
Are present on that field of death,
And sit and weep and tend them there,
God's halo blazing round their hair—
"Thou shalt not kill." But in the grime
Of smoke and blood and smell of lime
Which creeping men have scattered round
A blood disfigured piece of ground,
When Time weighs on you like a ton,
And Terror makes your water run,
And earth and sky are red with flame,
And Death is standing there to claim
His toll among you, when the hour
Arrives when you must show your power
And take your little fighting chance,
Get up and out and so advance,
When crimson swims before your eyes
And in your mouth strange oaths arise,
Then something in you seems to break
And thoughts you never dreamt of wake
Upon your brain and drive you on,
So that you stab till life is gone,
So that you throttle, shoot, or stick,
A shrinking man and don't feel sick
Nor feel one little jot of shame;
My God, but it's a bloody game!

O, yes, I've seen it all and more,
And felt the knocker on Death's door;
I've been wherever Satan takes you,
And Hell is good, because it makes you.
As long as you're a man, I say,
The "gentle" part will find its way
And catch you up like all the rest—
For love I give the Tommy best!
No need to learn of Christ's Temptation,
There's gentleness in all creation,
It's born in you like seeds in pears,
It ups and takes you unawares,
It's Christ again, the real Lover,
And not the corpse we languish over.
When Christ is in us he is dearer,
We love him when we understand
That each of us may hold his hand,
May walk with him by day or night
In meditation towards the light.

And so through all my life and days,
In all my walks, through all my ways,
The lasting terror of the war
Will live with me for evermore.
Of all the pals whom I have missed
There's one, I know, whom Christ has kissed,
And in his memory I'll find
The sweetness of the bitter rind—
Of lonely life in front of me
And terror's sleepless memory.

HOGENSON'S MODEL BUNGALOW HOMES IN AUSTIN

Are all carefully designed and have that complete, finished look that always attracts attention.

They are built in 5, 6, 7, and 8 light and liberal sized rooms, and with large screened porches, sun parlors, and with sleeping porches.

The heating plants are large, so as to give sufficient heat in the coldest weather. The trim used is of the best hardwoods, in the different finishes of oak and birch. The floors are of clear oak. We install the latest designs of lighting fixtures and the high grade art glass used is made to harmonize with the artistic decorations which these homes receive or which frequently are selected by the purchaser.

The prices—$4,000 to $6,500—for these homes are low, considering all that goes into them, and payments can be made to suit, like rent, or cash.

Look them over now, completed or under construction, for immediate possession or for spring delivery.

Natural Advantages

THE STEADY PROGRESS of the Swigart Tract is not a matter of chance but the result of natural advantages. Take your family atlas and note the unique location of Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford Counties, on the east shore of that great body of water—Lake Michigan. The Swigart Tract in these counties is in the center of one of the world's largest fruit districts. Its geographical location is the keynote to its success.

THE MOST PROSPEROUS communities the world over are located on an ocean, lake, or river, with water shipping facilities. Our Tract is at the central point of Lake Michigan's east shore, 96 miles from Milwaukee, 170 miles from Chicago, and with harbors at Ludington and Manistee. It is in the direct path of the great lakes traffic. In competition with western and southern states, whose shipments require 24 to 56 hours en route, our products placed on steamships in the evening are in Milwaukee and Chicago before 7 o'clock the next morning. We have good railroads with close connections with Grand Rapids and Detroit. Our wagon roads are good, with short hauls to shipping stations. Our home markets in the cities and towns within the counties are sufficient to make us an independent agricultural community.

BEING ON THE EAST SIDE of Lake Michigan is of great climatic value. It is mild and even; balmy in summer, with less extremes in temperature in winter. That's why we can raise delicate fruits such as peaches, apricots, pears, prunes, and quinces that can't be grown elsewhere in the same latitude, and for the same reason we grow more abundant yields of the hardier fruits—apples, cherries, plums, grapes, and berries. Orchards in our counties readily yield $200 and up per acre under intelligent care. For the same reason the conditions are favorable for rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, corn, clover, timothy, alfalfa, vetch, wheat, peas, and beans, and no soil surpasses our warm sandy loam for potatoes, tomatoes, pickles, and all vegetables. Our district is every year becoming more of a stronghold for dairying. It grows the grasses. It has the water—an abundance of it in streams and lakes and an annual 32-inch rainfall, well distributed over the growing season. The lands lie gently rolling and level and are well drained. Few localities can equal this for raising cattle, sheep, hogs, and poultry.

ONE CAUSE for great future commercial development lies in the vast amount of electric power which is being harnessed by big power dams in the center of the Tract. The Commonwealth Company is pushing the project and already has one dam completed. Besides supplying current to Manistee and Cadillac, it is furnishing the power to construct the second of this series of seven dams. Farmers are coming here because of our good crops, the impossibility of getting as good lands as cheap elsewhere, the dissatisfaction in renting farms in the older states, the desire of every farmer to own land of his own, the increase in population, and the growing profitableness, improvement in methods and desirability of the farming business. Look at the prices of all farm products today.

COME AND TAKE YOUR PLACE in our colony. There is room for a thousand more men and their families here. But it can't last indefinitely. The demand for land is manyfold greater than it was when I acquired this Tract some twenty years ago. You won't find any land as good for as little money. $15 to $25 per acre, and a large selection of the best lay of lands at $17 to $20 per acre on terms of $25 to $50 down and $7 to $10 per month per 40 acres. Learn about the insurance feature of my contract.

I CO-OPERATE with my settlers, operate a demonstration farm, and am putting capital back into development and improvement work. My orchard, when complete, will be one of the largest and finest in this country.

THE FARMING CONDITIONS are all described in a large 72-page book, giving statistics, comparative tables, and information of great interest about this part of Michigan. Write for this free literature or call, if you can, and get a large map and see samples of this year's products.

COME ON MY NEXT SPECIAL EXCURSION leaving our Chicago Offices at 11:20 a. m. Tuesday, November 28th. Round trip rate $12.50, including railroad fare, meals and lodging. A company reincorporating for $500,000, with assets of some $3,000,000, owner buying property at receiver's sale for a pittance a few months ago. Since then he has put it on a paying basis and is now a going project, sound to the core, although same was in course of construction since 1905.

Buying it at three per cent [3%] of its value, I have the benefit of the former owners' loss. Now big money can be made. No debts against it and money coming in monthly.

We can use $100,000 to $150,000 for such, and will sell only enough stock to put the project in better shape on sound business principles, without the usual high finance methods. A SAFE Investment

A Rebuilt Cadillac Is the Safest Investment It Is Possible to Make.

Rebuilt Cadillacs are superior to any new car at the same price. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in the new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them. We have a variety of body styles to choose from at the present time.

NOTE NEW PRICES

1916 Victoria coupe	$1,750
1916 7 pass. Touring	1,550
1915 Salon Touring	1,250
1915 7 pass. Touring	1,250
1914 Touring	800
1913 Limousine	1,250
1913 Touring	700
1912 Touring	500

A few Cadillacs which have not been rebuilt but are in good condition will be sold at substantial reductions.

We also have a very select list of miscellaneous makes at attractive prices.

YUKON PIERCES LANDS OF VAST NATIONAL RICHES

Lack of Government Lighthouses and Buoys Peril to River Steamers.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

S. S. SARAH, Yukon River.—After leaving the flats near the Arctic circle the Yukon twists about like a great liquid corkscrew until it comes to Fort Hamlin. Here it narrows and enters the Ramparts, a valley with fortlike walls rising up on both sides. Here the course is reduced from a width of several miles to one of 800 or 900 feet, and the valley in places in only half a mile wide.

High hills, covered with trees and moss, rise straight up from the river, and in some places they are more than a thousand feet high. The current is swift, and in the heart of the valley the water flows at the rate of seven miles an hour.

The Ramparts end at Fort Gibbon. The hills disappear and the land drops into a great low plain. Here the Tanana river flows into the Yukon, and you have an inland sea with great islands. Turning to the south, through the islands the steamers from Dawson go up the winding Tanana to Fairbanks, a distance of 275 miles, and, steaming southward, other ships make their way down the broad lower Yukon to Bering sea.

Lower Yukon 800 Miles Long.

The lower Yukon is about 800 miles long. It comprises one-third of the main stream and one-sixth or one-seventh of its navigable waters. The Yukon is 2,300 miles long, and its basin is ten times as large as the state of Indiana. Next to the Mississippi-Missouri and the St. Lawrence, it is the greatest river under Uncle Sam's flag.

The country on both sides of the lower Yukon is a wilderness. That part of the stream is about as long as from New York to Chicago. It drains thousands of square miles, and its population, I venture, is numbered by hundreds. Going down the river you now and then pass an Indian village and stop at several towns which form the ports for gold mines.

One of the chief towns is Ruby, 175 miles below Fort Gibbon. It is a placer gold mining center which had a stampede in 1911. There are, perhaps, 1,000 people there now. They live in a jumble of buildnigs made of logs, galvanized iron, and unpainted boards, all thrown together without regard to order or beauty. Most of the houses are of one story, and they look as though they had been pitched out of the sky and let fall where they would.

Town Supported by Mines.

The town lies in a little cove on the south bank of the river. A rock thirty feet high marks one end of the cove, and the space beyond it, running to the edge of the Yukon, is just large enough for the town. The people are supported by the gold mines, and the most of their supplies come from outside.

While our steamer lay at the bank the proprietor of one of the hothouses which supply the town with vegetables came aboard and took passage for Nome. He had a sample of his vegetables with him. It was a cucumber—a little one, he said, for he could not get the big ones inside his bag. I measured it. It was just eighteen inches long.

A little below Ruby we passed the mouth of the Koyukuk river, a stream which is navigable for more than 500 miles north of where it flows into the Yukon. It has rich mining camps which are reached by small steamers. Gold was found along the creeks leading into it fourteen or fifteen years ago, and about ten years ago $300,000 worth of nuggets were taken from one small patch on Nolan creek.

Captain Killed by Indians.

A few miles below the mouth of the Koyukuk we stopped at Nulato. This is an Indian village noted as being one of the oldest trading posts on the Yukon. It was established by the Russians when Van Buren was president, and at about the time that Tyler entered the White House it became a post of the Russian-American company and the chief market for the furs of this part of Alaska.

About ten years later an English ship came up the Yukon to search for Sir John Franklin. It stopped at Nulato and the commander said something that angered the Indians. They killed him and he is buried somewhere near by. His grave is unmarked.

There are two stores at Nulato and also a wireless station, whose tall mast can be seen rising high above the Indian cabins that line the shores. The town is mostly made up of Indians. It has a government hospital and a governmental school. It has also a mission station and an Indian cemetery.

Indians Leave for Feast.

The next town below Nulato is Kaltag. Kaltag is a trading post and a government telegraph station. It also has a wireless tower which was erected by private parties to maintain communication with the Iditarod gold fields.

Passing through the village, consisting of a dozen one story cabins all fastened with padlocks because the Indian owners had gone off for a feast to some town in the neighborhood, I entered a wilderness as untouched as it was when the Mongols crossed Bering strait to form the first of our Indian population. The grass back of the town reached to my waist.

A little further back the earth was covered with moss and spotted with stunted spruce trees and bushes loaded with blueberries, cranberries, and squawberries. Some of the berries are new to my eyes. One had a leaf like a respberry and a fruit shaped much the same. It was of a pale lemon color. I tasted it. It was bitter sweet and of an unpleasant flavor. The cranberries were smaller than buckshot.

It was during this walk that I had my first experience with the Alaska mosquitoes. The animals were not fierce, and their bites not as severe as those of the New Jersey species. I had neither gloves nor head net and suffered no great discomfort. This, I am told, is unusual.

In ordinary years the mosquitoes are almost unbearable. They come in May and June, shortly after the breaking of the ice. At that time every one who goes through the country must wear a head net and have his hands protected with gloves. Not a bit of skin is allowed to show. It is best to wear boots, for the mosquitoes bore their way through the eyelet holes in one's shoes.

Leaving Kaltag, the Yukon flows almost straight south for a distance of 150 miles or more to the Holy Cross mission, near which the Innoko river flows in. The Innoko gives access to the rich gold mining region known as the Iditarod. The Iditarod gold region was discovered in 1909, and it had yielded $6,000,000 worth of gold within the next two years.

Eskimos Bulk of Population.

Between Kaltag and the Holy Cross mission is Anvik, an Indian settlement with a Russian church, and still farther down the river is Andreafski, which was established by the Russians in 1853. Andreafski is now a little trading station on the banks of the Yukon. It has a great oil tank, and the steamers stop there to take fuel.

The town is populated almost altogether by Eskimos, about the only whites being the storekeepers, who have charge of some galvanized warehouses and a supply of country goods. The Eskimos live in log cabins, and there is a large village of them about thirty or forty miles away. Those we saw were dressed in skins, with boots of sealskin and caps of skin with fur coming out around their faces. They had skin boots and fur coats and trousers.

It is at Andreafski that the delta of the Yukon is said to begin. The country is flat, and you can see for miles over the low grass on both sides of the river.

As you go on from Andreafski the Yukon widens. It is soon three miles from one bank to the other. Then it branches out into wide channels, each of which is a mouth, and, where it flows into the sea these mouths have become a great fan 100 miles wide, the various streams forming the ribs.

U. S. Does Nothing for Navigation.

The government has done little to protect the navigation of the Yukon. The only lights on this mighty stream, with its winding course, its scores of tributaries, and its thousands of shifting sand bags and islands, are where the river flows into the ocean. The system all told has 4,000 miles or more of navigable and navigated waters, and there is not a lighthouse, a buoy, or a mark of any kind to aid the shipping.

Some of the captains are accustomed to put up their own marks to aid them in subsequent voyages.

PROTEST DOCK ORDINANCE

The Chicago River Improvement association protested before the council harbors committee during the week against the proposed ordinance to require the building of future docks along the river out of cement instead of wood. As a result the committee postponed action for thirty days. Edward Hines, the lumberman, told the committee the association is making a survey of dock equipment with particular reference to the pending ordinance. Dennis McCarthy, formerly superintendent of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, said the cost of cement docks is $150 to $175 a lineal foot, as compared with $16 to $30 for wooden docks.

ELOPE IN SECRET; FACE EACH OTHER IN DIVORCE COURT

Mrs. Louis Lehman Alleges She Has Had to Support Herself in Marriage.

A romance of childhood days in New York, which culminated in an elopement to Stamford, Conn., and a secret marriage, probably will have its last chapter written in Chicago divorce courts, according to a bill for divorce filed yesterday by Mrs. Beatrice Lehman against Louis Lehman.

Mrs. Lehman says she and her husband eloped from New York on June 3, 1908, to Stamford, Conn., where they were secretly married, and then returned to New York, she to the home of her parents. They kept their secret until Nov. 10, 1911, when public announcement was made of their marriage and they took up their residence at the home of Mrs. Lehman's parents.

Mrs. Lehman alleges her husband deserted her Sept. 25, 1914, and that the three years they lived together she had to support herself and her husband received help from her father. After her husband left her, Mrs. Lehman alleges she waited for him four weeks in New York, and then came to Chicago to make her home with her father, who had moved here.

Sues to Enjoin Husband.

Because she is afraid her husband, Harry McWilliams, will have squandered his inheritance before her suit for divorce and alimony is reached in the regular order of court, Mrs. Elin McWilliams filed a petition for the appointment of a receiver for her husband and an injunction restraining him from transferring or incumbering his property. The McWilliams divorce suit has been pending in the Circuit court since Aug. 31, 1916. Mrs. McWilliams is getting temporary alimony of $15 a week. Mrs. McWilliams alleges her husband is now intimate with Ella Einstein, who was named a co-respondent by Mrs. Lillian McWilliams, a former wife of McWilliams, who divorced him several years ago for adultery.

They were married in Ishpeming, Mich., Dec. 24, 1914, and separated March 10, 1916.

City Hall Clerk Sued.

George Andrin Jr., a clerk in the office of the city collector, is defendant in a suit for separate maintenance filed by his bride of five months.

She charges cruelty and alleges that on Nov. 3 her husband sought to drive her from their home, and upon her refusal to leave he left and has persisted in his desertion.

OUTER BUSINESS PROPERTY FEATURED BY FEW TRADES

There was not much doing of an important character in outside business property, particularly mercantile property.

A notable south side deal was the purchase by Frederick W. Matthiessen of La Salle, Ill., from John A. Carroll of the five story fireproof warehouse building at the northeast corner of Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue, with lot 120 feet on Cottage Grove avenue and 100 feet on Fifty-second street.

A reported consideration of $175,000 is given, and Mr. Matthiessen has leased the property back to the Empire Express, Storage and Van company for a term of fifteen years at an annual net rent of $11,000. William A. Merigold & Co. represented Mr. Matthiessen and J. W. Dooley & Co. Mr. Carroll.

There was filed for record the sale by Selina L. Allen to Edward L. Goold of the property at the southeast corner of Forty-third street and Evans avenue, lot 67x119 feet, north front, with three story store and flat building, for an expressed consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000.

Selina L. Allen also conveyed to Alfred J. Wilkes and Edward L. Goold the property in Baltimore avenue 150 feet north of Ninety-first street, 25x98 feet, for an expressed consideration of $25,000, subject to $5,000.

The north central business district furnished an interesting transaction in the purchase by Chester A. and Raymond C. Cook, trustees, from Flora and Clinton E. Hanson of the property at 613-15 Lincoln parkway on the east side of the street between Ohio and Ontario streets.

The lot is 40x100 feet at the corner of the alley, and it is improved with a three story and basement brick hotel. The consideration is $48,000, cash, which, excluding the improvements, is at the rate of $12 a square foot.

The purchasers have leased the property to Frederick M. Bowes for ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $2,250, or 5 per cent on $45,000. Mr. Bowes, who is said to have contributed to the purchase price, has in turn subleased the property to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Keller for a term of years at an annual rent of $3,000.

All parties to the transaction were represented by the Bowes Realty company, who have made twelve sales in this street during the last two years.

POSTAL DEPOSITS CLIMB UP.

Postmaster Campbell yesterday received a monthly report from Washington on the financial condition of the Postal Savings bank, showing deposits in October were $4,700,000 more than the September deposits, $320,840 of which came from Chicago. According to the report, the total deposits in the bank are now $104,200,000.

Petitions in Bankruptcy.

LAST week's real estate market was of an unusually interesting character, contrasting most favorably with that of the previous week. Generally speaking, it was a broad market, although there was little doing in apartment and outside business property of an important character.

Acres were not much in evidence, either, but not much activity in this field is looked for at this season of the year. There was, however, an unusually interesting deal in the downtown district, a series of notable transactions in the central manufacturing district, and one of the most important deals in high class residence property in the history of the city.

Building Big Feature.

The constructive, or building, character of the market, however, was its most conspicuous feature, and a remarkable showing was made in this respect, the chief development probably being the final materialization of the $5,000,000 hotel and apartment building which is to occupy the 400x216 feet at the corner of Lake Shore drive and Lincoln parkway, which, it is announced, has been acquired by the Drakes from the Potter Palmer estate.

In a sense the leading feature of the downtown deal was its building end—the construction of a theater which rumor has located at various choice spots in the loop district at frequent intervals during the last two years or more.

In an industrial way the new building projects announced for the Central Manufacturing district, particularly the great buildings to be erected for Montgomery Ward & Co., were of an impressive character. The Ward & Co. project is regarded as one of the most significant and important transactions in recent years.

Field Estate Adds to Holdings.

There is another interesting feature to the downtown deal, and that is the addition of another to the already huge holdings of the Marshall Field estate in this district. Rumor has been busy for some time with the property involved in the transaction, the Borden block at the northwest corner of Randolph and Dearborn streets and the Athenæum property adjoining on the north on Dearborn street.

Nearly two years ago a deal was on, it is said, involving the erection of a theater. Within the last six months report had it that negotiations were on for acquisition of the Borden block with the purpose of improving it with a sixteen story building with stores on the ground floor and a hotel above. They failed to materialize, however, and it remained for Albert L. Strauss to carry the present deal to a successful conclusion.

It means a new theater, which, according to the announcement given out during the week, is to be one of the most attractive playhouses in the country, as well as a ten story store and office building.

How the Deal Was Made.

The Marshall Field estate first purchased from Alfred E. Spink, trustee of the estate of William Borden, the Borden building, a six story structure on a lot 80x90 feet, for $607,500, and from the trustees of the estate of Daniel L. Wells of Milwaukee the Athenæum property, adjoining on the north, 90x80 feet, improved with a four story building, for $450,000, or a total of $1,057,500 for the two. The buildings are said to have been given no value in the transaction, making the sale at the rate of a little less than $74 a square foot.

The Field estate then leased the two properties to A. H. Woods of New York, one of the best known producing theatrical managers in America, for a term of ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $50,000 for the first five years and $55,000 for the remainder of the term.

The lease becomes operative May 1 next, when the present buildings will be razed and the work of constructing the proposed buildings will be begun. The cost of the two is placed at $600,000, and it is understood the plans are to be prepared by Marshall & Fox.

Theater to Front Dearborn.

The office building will front eighty feet on Randolph street and seventy feet on Dearborn street, while the theater will front 110 feet on Dearborn with a depth of eighty feet. It will not be particularly large—a seating capacity of 1,100—but its appointments will be of the highest possible class. The net return to the Field estate will be over 5 per cent. It is stated the Longacre Construction company of New York and Philadelphia will have the contract for the construction of the theater.

E. L. Richardson of Upham, Black, Russell & Richardson of Milwaukee looked after the legal details for the Wells estate. W. B. McIlvaine of Wilson, Moore & McIlvaine represented the Field estate, while Simeon Straus and Mr. Grossman of New York represented Mr. Woods.

The Borden block is one of the office building landmarks of the downtown district, having been erected by the late William Borden in 1888. The Athenæum building is another old timer, many of Chicago's older business men receiving their education there. The property was purchased by Mr. Wells in June, 1876, for $35,000.

NEW WRINKLE IN BUILDING

The two ten story fireproof apartment buildings to be erected at the southwest corner of Goethe and Stone streets, to be known as 59 and 71 East Goethe street, will be unique in several respects, notably the fact that the eight occupants of the "owners'" building, each of whom pays $50,000 for his apartment, are also to be the owners of the lessee building, with its sixteen apartments of eight to twelve rooms, which is expected to produce an income of over $70,000 a year.

The buildings, which were designed by W. D. Mann of Chicago and Phillip M. Juillien of New York City, will, it is claimed, revolutionize building in Chicago. The structures will be of reinforced concrete construction, and while 500 tons of steel will be used in connection with the concrete for reinforcing, there will be no steel columns. Again, instead of using brick or stone for exterior walls the Dennison interlocking hollow tile, with glazed surface, will be used, and the statement is made that this style of constructions means a saving of about $125,000 in the cost of the two buildings, which is placed at $675,000. Eugene A. Bournique & Co. will have the building operation in charge and will have the management of the building when completed.

COSTLY HOME OF WHEELERS SOLD

A. M. Johnson Buys Residence on Historic Site at Devon and Sheridan.

A notable feature of the week's market, said to be the largest deal in residence property in the history of the city, was the sale of the Albert G. Wheeler residence at the intersection of Sheridan road and Devon avenue to Albert M. Johnson, president of the National Life Insurance company, U. S. A. It is one of the handsomest homes in Chicago, and, while the consideration was withheld, it was sold subject to an incumbrance of $150,000.

The lot has a frontage of 276 feet on Devon avenue and 254 feet on the lake, and is improved with a residence and garage of Parian marble. The house contains seventeen rooms, not including the third floor, which is finished but not divided off. It may be used for a ballroom or for rooms.

An underground tunnel leads from the house to the garage, where is located the heating plant, in addition to space for four cars, and seven rooms above.

Mr. Johnson also conveyed his residence at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Rosemont avenue, an exceedingly attractive brown bowlder stone dwelling on a lot 300x150 feet, which was given a value of $125,000.

In addition to this Mr. Johnson is said to have made a large cash payment. John T. Wheeler of the firm of Baird & Warner represented both parties.

Apart from the attractive character of the Wheeler residence, which is considered by many to be one of the most beautiful homes in the country, the transaction has a special interest because of the historical incidents which surround the property, and which are thought to be known to but comparatively few people.

It is stated that it was on this point that Father Marquette, with the French traders, settled in October, 1679, to meet the Illini and other tribes of Indians and bring about a treaty of peace.

PLANS NEW BLAST FURNACE.

The Iroquois Iron company has completed plans for a new blast furnace to be built on its property on the Calumet river at Ninety-fifth street. The capacity of the furnace will be 400 to 600 tons a day, and it is estimated its cost will be between $700,000 and $1,000,000. It may be the company will decide to build two furnaces. Work will begin as soon as the detail plans can be worked out.

HOOL FORMS A PARTNERSHIP

James A. Hool, for the last three years with John R. Magill & Co., and previous to that with H. O. Stone & Co., has formed a partnership with Clarence D. Goodman of Brede & Goodman, and they will occupy offices in the Straus building, Clark and Madison streets. They will specialize in the sale, renting, and management of business and manufacturing property.

BUSINESS MEN TO BANQUET.

The Ashland Avenue and Fifty-first Street Improvement association, comprising business men in that locality, will hold its first annual dinner Wednesday evening, Nov. 22, at Cornell square, Fifty-first and Wood streets. The dinner will be featured by good music and several prominent speakers. Joseph F. Triska, president of the Southwest State bank, will be toastmaster.

PURCHASES WEST SIDE FLAT

An interesting transaction in west side business property is the sale by Marcus Weil to Emil G. Krueger of the property at the northeast corner of Monticello and Chicago avenues, lot 48x125 feet, improved with a building containing three stores and six flats, for a reported consideration of $35,000. Christen & Ahrbecker were the brokers.

Eugene Goldman, president of the Master Motor company, local distributor for the Republic Truck company, has exercised an option of purchase contained in a lease and has acquired from the Borden Condensed Milk company, through Mark Levy & Bro., the property at 3130-36 South Wabash avenue, lot 75x180 feet to "L" road, with one and three story buildings, for $22,500.

SELLS TRACT OF 160 ACRES.

Ward T. Huston, who recently acquired from the B. & O. C. T. R. R. a tract of 160 acres between Ridgeland and Harlem avenues, the B. & O. right of way and Twenty-second street, has sold the same to Biscoe Hindman. The consideration is withheld, but Mr. Huston is said to have held the east eighty acres at $2,500 an acre, and the west eighty at $2,000. Mr. Hindman will, it is said, develop the tract as a high class subdivision, along the same lines as the Ravenswood Highlands which he developed.

ANNUAL BANQUET TUESDAY.

The ninth annual banquet of the Cook county real estate board will be held in the gold room of the Congress hotel Tuesday evening, Dec. 9, and a great effort is being made by President Robert E. L. Brooks and the committee having the function in charge to make it a success.

WARD & CO. DEAL FOR WAREHOUSE WEEK'S LEADER

Mail Order Company's Plans in Southwest Section Considered Significant.

The announcement of the great warehouse building to be erected for the occupancy of Montgomery Ward & Co., west of Ashland avenue and south of Thirty-ninth street, in the Central Manufacturing district, was not only the most important feature of the week's market in a development way, but, together with the other transactions reported in the district, is also one of the most significant transactions of this character in recent years. They should have a marked effect on land values throughout that section of the city.

The trustees of the district, John A. Spoor and Arthur G. Leonard, are to erect a six story building, in six sections, each of which is to be 120x250 feet, all to contain approximately 1,080,000 square feet of floor space, not counting the basement.

Work on Building Started.

Four are to be rushed to immediate completion, the work of excavation having begun already. The construction will be of reinforced concrete, pressed brick, with terra cotta trim. The cost of the initial four sections will be about $1,250,000, and the entire six units $1,750,000. The building has been leased to Ward & Co for twenty-five years at a reported term rental of approximately $6,000,000, with a provision for a renewal for an additional twenty-five years.

The building will be located about a half mile west of Ashland avenue and 200 feet south of Thirty-ninth street, and will be served by the Chicago Junction railroad. Between the building and Thirty-ninth street will be located the new central power plant of the district, with large parkways and flower beds on each side. The units, or sections, are to be joined by connecting courtways, with freight elevators surrounded by shipping space in each court. The entire building will be equipped with twenty large electric freight elevators and numerous automatic conveyors. No place in the building will have less than 250 pounds to the square foot loading capacity.

Extends Over Bubbly Creek.

It is interesting to note that the building will extend for about forty feet into the notorious and malodorous Bubbly creek, which, however, has already been filled in at this point. It is understood to be the purpose of Ward & Co. to transport considerable tonnage from their present warehouse at Chicago avenue and the north branch to the new location by lighters on the Chicago river.

In a statement by J. Charles Maddison, vice president of Ward & Co., as to the reasons for securing the new location, he said in part:

"We always have sold a large number of items on the basis of direct shipment from the factory to the consumer, and this worked out well for many years. The development of business, however, and the growth of tonnage for transportation have more than kept pace with the facilities of the carrier for prompt handling, and this, together with the growing demand for quicker deliveries, made it necessary to inaugurate some new methods of handling this type of factory shipment business.

Tries Warehouse Plan.

"About three years ago we began to experiment with a plan for carrying this kind of merchandise in warehouses, with the idea that if the trade approved and the freight could be successfully handled we would eventually largely abandon the direct shipment from factory to customer in favor of shipment direct from warehouse, at which stock had been accumulated in large quantities.

"In accordance with this idea, we located a small warehouse in the central manufacturing district, as well as carried some merchandise in various outside warehouses. The plan has been so successful we have decided to go much further in this warehouse project, wholly on a service basis.

"While this means in no way any dissatisfaction with our present location at Chicago avenue and the river, it is our belief that to add to our already large tonnage at this plant the enormous volume of tonnage we contemplate handling through this new warehouse would tend to confusion, loss of efficiency, and increased operating cost."

Plan $20,000,000 Improvements.

It is estimated that the total improvements in the new 100 acre addition to the district will eventually cost around $20,000,000. The buildings already under construction, designed by S. Scott Joy, district architect, will require 3,000 tons of steel, over 100,000 barrels of cement, 50,000 cubic yards of gravel, and 30,000 cubic yards of sand.

A new cold storage warehouse is to be erected by the district, six stories and basement, 110x140 feet dimensions, on Thirty-ninth street near Robey, which has been leased to Cross, Roy & Saunders for twenty-five years at an aggregate term rental of about $500,000. It will cost $225,000.

New Union Freight House.

Ground also has been broken for the construction of a new union freight station and loft building on Thirty-ninth street, near Robey street. It will occupy 600x500 feet of ground, will be six stories and basement, and will cost about $1,200,000. The first floor will be used for freight purposes, while the upper floors will be used for industrial purposes. It is proposed to handle freight for all the roads entering Chicago.

It also is planned to start work within a month on a new power plant which is expected to cost about $200,000. Another project is to construct a series of underground tunnels for the purpose of transmitting steam, electric power, and water, and also for the purpose of handling freight between the different industries within the district. The cost is placed at about $150,000.

The work of constructing additional buildings will begin in the spring. They include general loft buildings for small industries and several special buildings to be erected for large concerns which are now located in other parts of the city.

Leases and Loans.

THE lease and loan market made a better showing last week than during the previous week, and according to reports from brokers and building managers the situation is steadily improving, both in the demand for store as well as office space.

In a loan way the feature was a loan of $300,000 at 4½ per cent in the downtown district. It was made by Edgar M. Snow & Co., in connection with Frederick T. Hoyt, who represented the borrowers, runs for ten years, and is secured by the premises 316-326 South Fifth avenue, 137x153 feet, east front, improved with two six story and basement buildings. Snow & Co. also made a loan of $40,000, five years at 5 per cent, on the 100x117 feet, with brick and frame improvements, southeast corner of Sixty-third street and Kimbark avenue.

R. D. Hill & Co. made a loan of $150,000, five years at 4½ per cent, to the trustees of the Art institute on the property at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Van Buren street, 80x110.5 feet. It is for the purpose of refunding the loan formerly held by the Scottish Provident institute, which Mr. Hill acquired recently when abroad.

S. W. Straus & Co. have made a bond issue loan of $115,000, two to eight years, at 6 per cent, on the Jordan apartment building to A. Irving Jordan. The building, which is located at the southwest corner of Drexel boulevard and Bowen avenue, will be six stories high, of fireproof construction, concrete frame, and will contain thirty two room apartments and thirty three room apartments; also one store in the basement. The land fronts 110 feet on Drexel boulevard and 92 feet on Bowen avenue. The value of the building and land is placed at $194,000.

Foreman Bros. Banking company is trustee in a loan of $40,000, five years, at 5 per cent, to Charles F. Beachel on the fifteen flat building southeast corner Sheridan road and Margate terrace.

They also have made a loan of $32,000, five years, at 5½ per cent, to Erich Edelmann on the six flat building at 616-18 Waveland avenue.

White & Tabor have leased for Henry Bosch, represented by Frederick T. Hoyt, to George W. Faust and Albert J. Milligan of San Francisco the entire ground floor and basement of the building at 21-23 South Wabash avenue, between Madison and Monroe streets, for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $215,000.

The lessees have for a number of years been large operators of cafeterias on the coast. It is stated they will open the one on Wabash avenue after extensive alterations in the building have been completed.

White & Tabor report a number of leases closed in the wholesale district, the most important being the lease by the Hirsch-Wickwire company to Cutler & Crossette of the third floor, northeast corner Van Buren and Franklin streets, for a term from Jan. 1 at a term rent of $32,000.

NEW $5,000,000 HOTEL FOR NORTH SIDE ANNOUNCED

As stated elsewhere on this page, a multitude of highly important building projects featured the week's market, several of which are of a fairly sensational character.

The most spectacular of them all was the announcement, late in the week, that the project for the construction of a great hotel and apartment building on the Potter Palmer estate property at Lake Shore drive and Lincoln parkway to cost, together with the land, in the neighborhood of $5,000,000 had finally been carried to a successful conclusion after negotiations begun nearly three years ago.

In Ideal Location.

The property fronts 400 feet on the drive and 216 feet on Lincoln parkway, overlooking the lake, and is an ideal location. It is announced it will be operated by the Drakes and will be conducted along the same high standard as the Blackstone hotel, but together with the apartment feature it will set a new high standard for Chicago.

It is announced the apartments will rent at $2,500 to $20,000 a year. Some idea of what this means may be gathered from the fact that the highest rent paid in Chicago at present is $9,000 for apartments in the Stewart building at 1200 Lake Shore drive.

Bournique & Co. to Build.

A syndicate represented by Eugene A. Bournique & Co. is to erect two ten story fireproof apartment buildings at the southwest corner of Goethe and Stone streets, following the action of the council committee on buildings about ten days ago, in recommending that a special permit be granted for the construction of the buildings. They will occupy the C. A. Chapin property, with a frontage of 178 feet and a depth of 131 feet, for which the syndicate is said to have paid $125,000.

The two buildings are expected to cost $675,000, instead of over $1,000,000, as previously reported. An interesting feature of the project is that one of the buildings will be known as the Owners' building, for the reason the occupants of the eight apartments of sixteen rooms each in the building are to own them by the payment of $50,000 each.

Other of Sixteen Apartments.

The other building, which will be separated from the Owners' building by an English garden, 50x131 feet, will contain sixteen apartments of eight to twelve rooms, which will be rented at $4,000 to $4,800 a year.

Quarters for the servants are to be provided on the top floor of each building, while the men servants will occupy the mezzanine floors, separate from the apartments proper. The buildings will be of the Gothic and Tudor style of architecture. Bournique & Co. declined to give out the names of those who will occupy the Owners' building.

The erection of a twelve story building to contain 300 apartments is planned for the southwest corner of Surf street and Pine Grove avenue. It will be erected by Julius F. Friend, the State street merchant, and will occupy a lot fronting 164 feet on Surf street and 148 feet on Pine Grove avenue to a sixteen foot alley, which has been placed under a contract of sale to Mr. Friend by John P. and Frances Ryan for a reported consideration of $50,000.

The proposed building, the plans for which are being prepared by Architect H. R. Wilson, is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $800,000.

Hog market was uneven, with heavy hogs of prime quality strong to 5c higher, while the light weight animals were weak and closed 10c lower. Sales were made over a wider range of prices than on any day in a long time and the average for the day was lower than Friday's. Top sales were made at $10.05, and the bulk at $9.00@9.85, while many loads of plain lightweight offerings sold at $8.50@8.75 on last rounds. Pigs were steady for light and 10@15c lower for the 130@150 pounders.

Final prices made heavy hogs 15@20c lower than a week ago, while lightweights were off 25@40c. Pigs were off 25@35c. The average price of all hogs here this week was $9.60, against $9.65 the previous week, and was the lowest weekly average in several months. Receipts for the week aggregated around 278,400 head and were the largest since last January. Shipments totaled 42,700, also being the largest in a long time.

CATTLE.

A substantial increase in receipts of cattle at Chicago this week caused a reaction from record prices previously established and the market closed with the bulk of the beef steers showing a loss of 25@50c. Plain to pretty good steers made up the bulk of the increase and suffered the most decline. Good to prime beeves were comparatively scarce and held without material change. Range cattle suffered a loss of 25c, while native cows and heifers declined 15@50c, wit hthe medium grades at the big end of the loss. Calves advanced 25@50c. Receipts for the week showed an increase of nearly 30,000 head. The shipments were also enlarged, the demand for feed and stock steers being the largest of the season.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 297,400, against 291,400 the preceding week, 209,300 a year ago, and 140,500 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 8,092,000, against 6,980,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Sheep and yearlings closed at a loss of 10@25c, while lambs were off 40@50c as compared with a week ago. The market closed in a depressed condition, with packers showing keen discrimination against weighty animals, some of which they would not take except at a big discount under prices recently paid. Early sales of lambs were made up to $11.95, but $11.60 was regarded as the limit for choicest fed westerns at the close. Natives at the finish were down to $11.40. Sheep topped at $9.00 but did not hold that level. Receipts for the week increased about 30,000 head, while shipments were smaller.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The cotton market practically recovered yesterday's losses during today's trading, with May contracts selling up to 20.93, or 56 points above the low level of Friday afternoon, and back to within 7 points of yesterday's morning high record. That delivery closed at 20.88, and the general list closed steady at an advance of 23@27 points on all months except August, which was nominally 50 points higher. The market showed renewed nervousness at the opening owing to liquidation of long cotton, which had been disturbed by the sharp break of the previous day. First prices were 10 points lower to 9 points higher, with near months relatively easy. After the early offerings had been absorbed, the market became strong; almost excited. January contracts sold up to 20.60, or 45 points above Friday's low level, and back to within 4 points of the high record, while March rallied to 20.75 and July to 20.60, or about 27x31 points above last night's closing figures. The advance was checked at this level by realizing or renewed liquidation, but the close was within 3@4 points of the best. Fall Rivers sales for the week were estimated at 165,000 pcs, compared with 130,000 last year. Port receipts today 32,005; for the season, 3,568,187; exports today, 19,548; for the season, 2,145,984. Larger Annuities Possible.

The system of annuities provided by state authority for residents of Massachusetts is administered by savings banks. Any savings bank in the state can engage in the work, under the supervision of the savings bank insurance commission, but no bank may write any annuity contract binding it to pay more than $200 a year plus dividends.

In the west there are few savings banks organized on lines suitable for writing annuities. Savings banks in Illinois are merely departments of commercial depositaries which usually have more demand deposits than savings accounts. In Massachusetts a savings bank accepts only time deposits, invests the money in mortgages and the most conservative bonds, and credits each depositor with his share of the interest received. Evidently the machinery of such a bank is perfectly suited to handle annuities.

To institute a similar system in Illinois under state direction would require a separate organization, and the advantages that could be gained from having the system stand by itself would more than offset all disadvantages. It would soon become larger than any savings bank and therefore need not be restricted to such small annuities as $200. Further, as it increased in size the proportionate cost of administration would diminish until, after a time, the charge on each annuitant would be almost negligible.

Since there would be no "surrender values," as in life insurance, almost all the money received could be invested safely in real estate mortgages. Life insurance companies and savings banks must keep part of their funds in listed securities, so that in case of unexpected calls for money, bonds can be sold. Such bonds offer no more safety than good mortgages, but because of their ready salability, they yield less income. Annuity funds could be invested with a view to the highest income compatible with safety and without regard to ready convertibility. The result would be larger annuities than are now paid by any institution.

Wheeling and Lake Erie.

C. D. C.—The Wheeling and Lake Erie railway has been operated by receivers for more than eight years. It was advertised for sale several times, but no bids were received, because the upset price of $18,500,000 was more than any one would pay. Finally the upset price was reduced to $12,000,000 and on Oct. 30 last a reorganization committee bought the road. A plan has been formed under which holders of all classes of stock will be assessed $27 a share. They will receive 27 per cent of their present holdings in new 6 per cent noncumulative preferred stock and new common as follows: To first preferred 100 per cent, to second preferred 90 per cent, to old common 87½ per cent. If earnings continue as at present the dividend on the new preferred stock will be covered nearly twice. In the year ended June 30 last the road made the largest earnings in its history.

German-American Sugar.

L. N., Attica, Ind.—The German-American Sugar company has plants at Bay City, Mich., and Paulding, O. In 1912 it paid 12 per cent on its $1,500,000 of capital and none thereafter till last March, when 10 per cent was paid. An annual dividend of 8 per cent was also declared, payable 2 per cent quarterly, beginning April 1. The company makes public little information.

Brief Answers.

H. D. N.—The Choctaw Railway and Lighting company was sold at foreclosure last April for $450,000 to a committee of first mortgage bondholders. Apparently the sale wiped out $150,000 of junior bonds, as well as $1,200,000 of stock. The Choctaw Power and Light company was formed to take over and operate the property. It has an authorized capitalization of $1,000,000 common stock and $500,000 6 per cent cumulative preferred.

M. W., Oakland, Cal.—Stock of the Milwaukee Mechanics' Insurance company is closely held. There is no quotable market. It has paid 12 per cent a year recently, following a stock dividend in 1911.

F. A. D., Buffalo, N. Y.—The Lobitos Oilfields Ltd. owns about 10,700 acres of oil lands on the coast of Peru. It is producing oil and paying from 5 to 15 per cent a year on its £400,000 of capital stock.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—No change occurred in raw sugar prices today. Neither was there any improvement in the demand, holders still offering moderate quantities of Cubas for nearby shipment at 5⅛c cost and freight and full duty sugars at 5¼c without attracting any attention from refiners. Closing prices were 5⅛c for Cubas and freight, equal to 6.40c for centrifugal and 5.53c for molasses. Refined sugar prices were unchanged, being listed at 7.50c for fine granulated by all refiners. Withdrawals on old contracts were light and new business unimportant. Price changes in sugar futures were irregular, closing quotations ranging from 4 points' decline to 3 points' advance. The liberal offerings in the spot market seemed to discourage holders of contracts and under scattered selling near positions eased off, while distant deliveries were firmer on covering. Sales were 6,850 tons. December sold from 5.00c to 4.97c, closing 4.98c; March, 4.12c to 4.10c, closing 4.11c; May, 4.20c to 4.19c, closing 4.20c; July, 4.29c to 4.27c, closing 4.29c.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18. — SUGAR—Following prices were quoted by the wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $9.18; powdered, standard, $8.26; standard cane granulated, $7.98; beet granulated, $7.68; extra C, $7.69; canary, $7.58.

Section 30 Mining Company

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Minnesota.
A Producing, Shipping Iron Mine—Not a Prospect.
No Bonds Authorized or Outstanding.
Capitalization
$1,000,000 Divided Into 100,000 Shares, $10.00 Par Value.

MINE

This Company is operating what is commonly known as the famous Section Thirty Mine in Section 30—63—11, located about four miles east of Ely on the Vermillion Iron Range of Minnesota. This property was in litigation for more than 21 years, and the fight was bitterly contested by many claimants, until under a decision of the United States Supreme Court the title was finally vested in the present owners. The title is therefore absolutely perfect. It is estimated that more than a million dollars was spent in the litigation by the various contestants.

MANAGEMENT

George A. St. Clair, Duluth, is President and Treasurer, Alfred Merritt is Vice-President, and John G. Williams is Secretary. Mr. St. Clair is in active charge of all mining operations and has been an independent shipper and miner of iron ores from the Michigan and Minnesota iron ranges for the past forty years. Mr. Alfred Merritt and his brothers were the discoverers of the Mesabi Range, the greatest iron mining district in the world—and were the builders of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railroad, the greatest earner per mile in the world. I refer to any bank in Duluth as to their standing and integrity.

DEVELOPMENT

During the last four years 200 to 350 men have been constantly employed. Several miles of underground workings have been made in opening the ore body to this date, and over $900,000 in cash has been spent in developing and equipping the mine. The main working shaft is 635 feet deep and has two main hoisting compartments.

EQUIPMENT

The mine is fully equipped, including a concrete engine house, double drum hoist, capable of handling a three-ton skip from the 1,000 ft. level, air compressor of 30-drill capacity, dynamo, automatic drill sharpener, steam shovel, locomotive, blacksmith shop, laboratory, office building, concrete dry house, forty houses built to house employees with families, and all other necessary equipment. The tracks of the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad run direct to the shaft and all shipments of ore are made over this road to Two Harbors, Minn.

PRODUCTION

Shipments of ore up to September 1st, 1916, since the opening of the mine have been 832,000 tons, and the list of customers using Section 30 ore includes such firms as the following:

Federal Furnace Company, of Chicago.
Zenith Furnace Company, of Duluth.
Toledo Furnace Company, of Toledo.
Reading Iron Company.
Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company, of Youngstown, O.

The average cargo analysis shipped during the season gave Iron 64.70 and Phosphorus .045, and the non-Bessemer ore gave Iron 59.60 and Phosphorus .072 dried at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. The records of all ore shipments from the entire Lake Superior region show Section Thirty Bessemer ore to be the highest grade iron ore shipped from Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin, with one exception, namely, the Republic Mine on the Marquette Range of Michigan.

ZENITH FURNACE COMPANY
ZENITH COAL — PIG IRON — COKE and GAS
Furnace Coal Docks and Ovens West Duluth
OFFICES, FOOT OF 59TH AVE., WEST
DULUTH, MINN.

Mr. Lewis H. Merritt,
Duluth, Minn.

Duluth, Minn., August 28, 1915.

Dear Sir:—

You will recall some time ago our commenting to you upon the very satisfactory results we were getting in our furnace with your Section 30 ore.

Since that time we have been doing some experimenting with this ore and in the last few weeks have very materially increased the proportion of Section 30 in our mixture, reducing our percentage of Mesabi ore.

The results obtained so far are fully up to our expectations, both in the working of the furnace and increased production, but the feature which appeals most to us is that since we have increased our percentage of Section 30, we have reduced the flue dust which blows over about 50 per cent, and you can readily realize the very great saving we are making through not losing so much of the ore through our down-comers.

We cannot speak too highly of the quality of the Section 30 ore you are furnishing us, and a furnace man should indeed consider himself fortunate to be able to obtain an ore of such high grade.

Yours very truly,
ZENITH FURNACE COMPANY.
Fred C. Harris,
General Superintendent.

SALES

This season's sales to date total 260,000 tons and the Company this year is earning at the rate of twenty per cent.

The Company has authorized for sale for next season's delivery 350,000 tons.

EARNINGS

With the expected increase of $1.00 per ton for ore next year, not counting on any increased production, at least 40 per cent is a conservative estimate of the earnings for next year.

POSSIBILITIES

On the eastern end of the Vermillion Iron Range are the following shipping mines: The Chandler, Pioneer, Zenith, Sibley, and Savoy, all owned or operated by the United States Steel Corporation, with the exception of the Chandler. Their earnings have been and are tremendous. The owners of Section 30 are confident that it will prove to be as large if not a larger mine than any of the above mentioned properties.

Chandler began shipping 1888, total shipped to Jan. 1, 1916, 9,712,357 tons.
Pioneer began shipping 1889, total shipped to Jan. 1, 1916, 9,818,562 tons.
Savoy began shipping 1899, total shipped to Jan. 1, 1916, 1,823,423 tons.
Sibley began shipping 1899, total shipped to Jan. 1, 1916, 2,323,041 tons.
Soudan began shipping 1884, total shipped to Jan. 1, 1916, 8,764,311 tons.
Zenith began shipping 1892, total shipped to Jan. 1, 1916, 4,375,674 tons.

SALES AGENTS FOR SECTION 30 ORE — Pickands, Mather & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

An initial offering of 17,500 shares at $15.00 per share was made in Chicago and Milwaukee last week and was quickly taken.

Iron Ore is the most staple of all staple products. It does not burn up, it does not blow down, it does not blow up, it is not affected by weather conditions, black rust or boll weevil. There are no present indications of its going out of fashion.

Based on the extremely low capitalization of the Company, its honest management, its extremely high grade product, its increasing production and the unprecedented demand for Iron Ore, I recommend the purchase of Section 30 Mining Company stock at the market for very much higher prices.

The stock is traded in on the New York Curb and orders must be placed through your own brokers.

LEWIS H. MERRITT.
